MOVE FOR QUICK ACTION

Announcements to Be Posted in a Day or Two—Rate Changes to Be Concurrent.

'SHOW-DOWN,' OFFICIAL SAYS

Conference With Interstate Commerce Commission to Be Held In Washington Tomorrow.

Announcements of reductions in wages affecting more than 750,000 employes of the fifty-two railroads comprising the group in the classification territory east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio will be made in a day or two, according to L. F. Loree, President and Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad. Mr. Loree, as Chairman of the Eastern Presidents' Conference, made this announcement yesterday after the meeting of these executives at the Metropolitan Club, preceding a meeting of the Association of Railway Executives of all the member roads at Grand Central Terminal. The Eastern roads decided to "back up the entire program adopted by the Association of Railway Executives at Chicago on Oct. 14," Mr. Loree said.

This move for quick action in the posting of notices of wage cuts by the Eastern carriers follows a similar announcement by the Western roads on Monday that an "immediate posting of notices of wage reductions" would be made. The Western roads included the Santa Fé, Chicago Great Western, Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, Chicago & Northwestern, Northern Pacific and Great Northern.

The roads in the southeastern and southwestern territory are planning to follow this course "identically," it was stated yesterday, and the wage cut notices will be posted in "a few days."

Rate Cuts to Be Concurrent.

"The foregoing action," it was stated by Thomas DeWitt Cuyler, Chairman of the Association of Railway Executives, at the meeting in Chicago, "will be taken upon the understanding that concurrently with such reduction in wages the benefit of the reduction thus obtained shall, with the concurrence of the Interstate Commerce Commission, be passed on to the public in the reduction of existing railroad rates, except in so far as this reduction shall have been made in the meantime."

More than 1,650,000 railroad workers in the country will be affected by the wage cuts, according to the latest estimates of the present working forces of the railroads. These include 300,000 employes on carriers in the southeastern territory, 600,000 in the western and 750,000 in the eastern territory.

In order to come to a complete and final understanding of the situation as it will affect rates the rail heads yesterday authorized the Executive Committee of the Association of Railway Executives to confer with the Interstate Commerce Commission in Washington on Saturday and to report back to a further meeting of the member roads next Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 16. The conference on Saturday is at the request of the commission.

"The program of the railroads, adopted at their meeting in Chicago on Oct. 14, has not been modified in any detail, and is in full force and effect."

Executives Who Will Meet I. C. C.

"The Executive Committee, which will confer with the Interstate Commerce Commission, consists of the following: Thomas De Witt Cuyler, Chairman, Association of Railway Executives; E. N. Brown, Chairman, St. Louis-San Francisco and Pere Marquette Railway Companies; Howard Elliott, Chairman, Northern Pacific; S. M. Felton, President, Chicago Great Western; Hale Holden, President, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy; J. Kruttschnitt, Chairman, Southern Pacific; Judge R. S. Lovett, Chairman, Union Pacific; Samuel Rea, President, Pennsylvania; A. H. Smith, President, New York Central; W. B. Storey, President, Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe; Alfred P. Thom, General Counsel Association of Railway Executives; Daniel Willard, President, Baltimore and Ohio; Henry Walters, Chairman, Atlantic Coast Line.

In addition to the Executive Committee, it is understood that the following traffic officials will join in the conference: Edward Chambers, Vice President, Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe; George H. Ingalls, Vice President, New York Central; George D. Dixon, Vice President, Pennsylvania; B. Campbell, Vice President, New York, New Haven and Hartford; L. J. Spence, Director of Traffic, Southern Pacific; C. R. Capps, Vice President, Seaboard Air Line; W. C. Maxwell, Vice President, Wabash; W. P. Kenney, Vice President, Great Northern.

Executives said yesterday that they expected the wage cases would come before the Railway Labor Board in groups. Although there is a widespread impression that the Labor Board announced that it would not be ready to take up any application for further wage reductions before next July, railroad officials asserted that the Board had made no such statement. In clearing the air for a settlement of the threatened rail strike last month, the board stated its intention to clear its docket of cases involving rules and working conditions before taking up new wage scale applications, which means, according to the rail heads, that the board should be ready to take up such new matters some time in February or March at the latest.

In railroad circles it is agreed that the matter of scaling down present wage schedules has come to a head much sooner than was at first anticipated.

"This is the showdown," said the head of one of the large Eastern roads yesterday, "and we mean to push our plans vigorously."

"Better Citizens' Day" Set For Nov. 27 in Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—Mayor Moore today proclaimed Sunday, Nov. 27, "Better Citizens' Day" and urged that all citizens of Philadelphia gather at their places of worship on that day "to discourage those things in our public and private lives that are debasing, and to uphold those things that tend to exalt and elevate us in self-respect and citizenship."

50,000 TO STRIKE IN NEEDLE INDUSTRY

Ladies' Garment Workers by Heavy Vote Decide to Resist 49-Hour Week and Piecework.

STRUGGLE TO BEGIN MONDAY

There Will Be No Retreat, Say Manufacturers—100,000 May Be Involved.

A general strike of 50,000 workers in the cloak and suit industry in New York City and vicinity will begin on Monday. By a vote said to be unprecedented in the history of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 38,672 members of the union out of 38,834 who cast votes decided to strike rather than submit to the introduction of piecework instead of week-work and the forty-nine-hour week instead of a week of forty-four hours. Only 162 voted against the strike. The result of the strike referendum was made public last night.

Both sides began immediate preparations for the strike, which, according to Benjamin Schlesinger, President of the I. L. G. W. U., will be the bitterest and most protracted in the history of the organization. Strike headquarters of the twelve locals of the Cloak, Suit and Skirt and Reefer Makers' Union, affiliated with the I. L. G. W. U., were established at the Hotel Continental, and the manufacturers, at a meeting held last night, adopted plans for the introduction of the piecework system.

Union leaders said the situation eventually might embrace 100,000 workers in other garment centres outside of New York if the manufacturers attempted to smash the union.

Agreement Broken, He Says.

"The strike will be called as soon as the manufacturers introduce the piecework system," said President Schlesinger. "The workers have given the strike mandate to the officers of the union and the only way to prevent a strike now is for the manufacturers to give up their plan for the introduction of piecework and the forty-nine-hour week.

"This is to be a strike of defense. The workers are trying to defend themselves against what they consider will mean sweatshop conditions. They do not want to strike. The manufacturers want us to accept conditions of labor on which we were not consulted. We had an agreement, made on June 3, for joint conferences and a final report on conditions in the industry to be made by Nov. 1. The manufacturers broke off negotiations before Nov. 1 and the final meeting never took place."

Mr. Schlesinger said the only reason for calling a general strike in the entire industry was that it was not known who were members of the Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Association. As soon as it became known which shops continued under the week-work system the workers would return to those places, he said.

Officials of the manufacturers' association adopted measures for the introduction of the piecework system in the factories on Monday, and A. E. Letcourt, their spokesman, made the following statement after their meeting last night:

Employers to Ignore Vote.

"There will be no turning back from our decision. There can be no turning back, for only in piecework can we find the solution to the ills of the industry. Week-work, as we have pointed out before, is responsible for a tremendous decrease in production, consequent high prices for garments to the consumer and the inevitable slump in business which follows as a natural sequence to such a condition.

"Despite the so-called strike vote, piecework becomes effective Nov. 14 nevertheless, and we have every reason to believe that a large proportion of those who seemingly voted will stick to their jobs unless intimidation and coercion is used.

"The manufacturers honestly feel that they are in the right and that a continuation of week-work would spell utter ruin for the industry. No set of men can regret the course the union has taken more than do the manufacturers. But it is a question as to whether the union shall have its way or whether the industry shall be confronted with financial disaster. The public has to be considered and high prices for women's clothing must come down to normal."

The strike beginning Monday will be the fourth in the industry since 1910. The strike in that year lasted for sixteen weeks, that of 1916 for fourteen weeks and the strike of 1919 continued four weeks.

According to an estimate prepared by the manufacturers, the loss to the industry, workers in and out of the unions and to the employers will be about $2,000,000 a day. The three previous strikes are estimated to have cost the industry $280,000,000.

RIOTING IN ROME AS STRIKE GOES ON

ROME, Nov. 10 (Associated Press).—The feeling between the railway workers and the Fascisti, which yesterday culminated in the calling of a general strike, increased today. There were numerous disturbances in various parts of the city in which many persons were beaten with clubs.

Members of the Fascisti who are here to attend the congress of their organization again paraded the streets, many of them wearing tin helmets.

The railroad employe wounded yesterday in the fighting with the Fascisti died this morning. One Fascisti was killed on his arrival in Rome by a gang of railroaders in the station.

Army searchlights will illuminate the streets of Rome if the general strike continues. The streets were dark last night because the electric light workers had struck, together with the railway employes, the bakers and other classes of labor.

ARCHBISHOP PRAISES DUNN'S FIGHT FOR CATHOLIC CHARITIES

PRAISED HIM TO THE POPE

Mgr. Hayes Says He Would Not Be Archbishop Now but for His Work.

EX-GOV. SMITH AT DINNER

Mgr. Dunn Guest of New York Chapter, Knights of Columbus, at Hotel Commodore.

In an address last night in the Commodore Hotel at the dinner of the New York Chapter, Knights of Columbus, to the Right Rev. John J. Dunn in honor of his consecration on Oct. 28 last as Auxiliary Bishop of New York, Archbishop Patrick J. Hayes praised the guest of the evening for his vigorous defense of Roman Catholic institutions in the city during the investigation by the Charities Department under the late Mayor John Purroy Mitchel.

While he did not mention the Mitchel Administration in his speech, the Archbishop, later at his episcopal residence, 452 Madison Avenue, explained through Mgr. Joseph P. Dineen, his secretary, that he had the Mitchel charities investigation in mind when he declared that Bishop Dunn was foremost among the priests "who fought with me and fought right to the finish when things happened in this city that never should have happened."

Archbishop Hayes was Auxiliary Bishop under the late Cardinal Farley at the time of the investigation and explained that the task of meeting the situation created by the charges made against the Roman Catholic institutions devolved on him. He added that if he had not done so successfully he would not be Archbishop today. The Archbishop's address was extemporaneous and he told of his visit last Winter to Pope Benedict XV. in Rome, at which time he submitted the name of Mgr. Dunn for the Bishopric.

Mgr. Dineen explained that Archbishop Hayes did not mean to convey the impression that Mgr. Dunn's name was the only one submitted to Rome. He said that the Archbishop, in accordance with procedure, submitted the names of three priests for elevation to Auxiliary Bishop, and told of their particular qualifications for the Bishropic. He added that the selection of the Auxiliary Bishop rested solely with the Pontiff.

Wanted Rough and Ready Man.

"The office of the Archbishop of New York is a difficult one," said Archbishop Hayes. "When I was looking around for a priest whose name I might present at Rome for my assistant I looked for a priest who was rough and ready," said the Archbishop. "The Archbishop of New York must be a man who must be very much alone. He can ask advice, but after all his decisions must be made alone. He alone is responsible.

"I did what I could to secure as my auxiliary Mgr. Dunn, and my reason was that when a thing happened in this city that should never have happened, at the time I was auxiliary Bishop, the one priest that stood by me—the one man who fought with me and fought right to a finish—was the present auxiliary Bishop of New York." These words of the Archbishop provoked loud applause.

Archbishop Hayes eulogized Bishop Dunn. "I am glad that Bishop Dunn is so deeply in your hearts," he continued. "I know his spiritual fervor. I know his devotion to duty and I know how his hand stretches out over this whole land as it did through his long years of labor as New York Director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith."

Before telling his reason for asking the Pontiff to name Mgr. Dunn as Auxiliary Bishop, Archbishop Hayes remarked: "I am a little man, and I felt some sometimes as Archbishop that I might need not only spiritual help, but another kind of help as well." Bishop Dunn is a tall man. Incidentally, Archbishop Hayes declared that William S. Devery was "the best Chief of Police New York City has ever had."

Twenty-six Years a Knight.

In beginning, Archbishop Hayes addressed the diners as "My brother Knights." He explained that he wanted to stay away, as he felt it was Bishop Dunn's night. "With the honors that you have heaped upon him tonight, I marvel at the poise of Bishop Dunn," he went on. "I think he bore himself with episcopal dignity throughout. Even the little witticisms he got off were entirely episcopal."

Referring to the fact that Bishop Dunn had been a Knight of Columbus for twenty-five years and that he himself had been taken into the order only since he had been a member of the episcopate, Archbishop Hayes said playfully: "I didn't have to become a Knight by 'degrees,' but it was by 'degrees' I reached Madison Avenue." He had reference to the episcopal office, his residence being at 452 Madison Avenue.

Bishop Dunn, who is Chaplain of the New York Chapter, was introduced just before Archbishop Hayes. He received a rousing welcome, and Chairman James T. Hallinan presented him in the name of the chapter with a gold Celtic pectoral cross.

Bishop Dunn announced he was "the happiest man in the world tonight," and finished his speech by declaring: "I want you all to know that I am going to endeavor to be the very best

Geraldine Farrar Seeks Divorce Here; Tellegen Asks Separation in Westchester

Geraldine Farrar is suing Lou Tellegen in New York County for a divorce. The papers were served on his attorney, Harry N. Steinfeld, a month ago, but no papers have been filed. The action was brought after the actor had sued the opera singer in Westchester County for a separation on the ground of abandonment. Neither Alvin Untermyer, counsel for Miss Farrar, nor Tellegen's attorney would discuss the case yesterday.

The fact that the divorce suit has been brought here and that Tellegen has also filed his answer became known yesterday when the attorneys went before Supreme Court Justice Guy in his chambers and argued an application by Mr. Untermyer to strike out a counterclaim for separation in Mr. Tellegen's answer. It was then revealed that Mr. Tellegen's answer denies the charges of misconduct, and asks that a decree of separation be granted to him because of the alleged abandonment by his wife. Mr. Untermyer's request was on the ground that the actor had an independent suit for the same relief pending in Westchester County. Justice Guy granted the application.

The fact that the Tellegens were at odds became known in the Summer when the actor accused his wife of ordering the servants at 20 West Seventy-fourth Street, where they lived, to keep him out. Tellegen insisted that certain works of art and other property belonging to him were in the house. Miss Farrar sent his clothes to a storage warehouse.

Tellegen's separation suit was brought in Westchester County in August, but instead of counterclaiming for a divorce in that action Miss Farrar filed a separate action for divorce here.

As a result of Justice Guy's decision yesterday both suits will be tried.

NEW OFFER READY FOR ULSTER TODAY

SAFEGUARDS FOR ULSTER

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Late tonight it was announced that the Cabinet has had the Irish compromise proposal set down in written terms, and it should be in Sir James Craig's hands tomorrow morning.

The British delegates to the Irish conference met today and decided that a draft of the scheme should be made and at a subsequent meeting of the Cabinet the draft was unanimously approved as representing the suggestions for the settlement which were discussed by the Irish conference.

It is realized that the Ulster Cabinet's consideration of the document may take some time, and therefore the interview with Mr. Lloyd George may be postponed until Saturday. When the meeting does take place Mr. Lloyd George, it is understood, will appeal to the Ulster representatives to make some advance toward establishing the principle of the unity of Ireland.

Unity of Ireland the Crux.

The crux of the problem is how Ulster's "rights" are to be harmonized with the unity of Ireland. Under the conference scheme of compromise Ulster would retain her present Parliament, with all its powers, under the act of 1920, though its Legislature would be linked with the All-Irish Parliament. The reserved services kept by the Imperial Parliament under the present Home Rule act—customs, excise and income tax, in a word, fiscal autonomy—should under the compromise scheme be allotted to the All-Irish Parliament. Moreover, the ruling condition of the suggested compromise is that free trade should be observed between Ireland and Great Britain. The All-Irish Parliament would not be able to put tariffs on goods passing between Ireland and Britain.

It is suggested that as a criticism of the proposed scheme, Ulster may be expected to claim that her representation in the Imperial Parliament must continue. The scheme proposed is that she should send her representatives to the All-Irish Parliament instead of to Westminster..

Under the scheme there would be a customs union in Ireland and no customs duties could be imposed by the South against the North or vice versa, but the possibility of injurious taxation remains.

In the scheme Ulster would be represented in the Commons Chamber of the all-Irish Parliament in proportion to her population. In the Senate Ulster would have protection for her minority, being but perhaps on an equality with Southern Ireland. But is the Senate to have a veto on financial proposals made by the Commons, it is asked. It is also pointed out that under the scheme Ulster would be dependent on the all-Irish Parliament for the proportion of her revenue, as in the past both the North and South have been dependent on the Imperial Parliament.

Ulster, it is stated, will affirm that even if she should agree to make a substantial concession toward Irish dominion unity she should not at the same time be asked to sever her connection with the United Kingdom Parliament.

The Ulster Cabinet met at the Savoy Hotel at 11 o'clock this morning and afterward the following official statement was issued:

"There was a meeting of the Cabinet of Northern Ireland at 11 A. M. today, lasting until 1 P. M. The attendance was the same as yesterday. An apology to Sir James Craig was received from the Prime Minister stating his inability, owing to the great pressure of work, to supply him with the detailed statement of his proposals, which he had promised yesterday. He hoped, however, to be in a position to forward the document this afternoon, and suggested that the meeting with him should be deferred until tomorrow morning."

To this was added:

"The Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, on behalf of the Cabinet, wishes it to be clearly understood that there can be no surrender of Ulster's rights."

King's Plea for Peace.

Parliament was prorogued tonight until Jan. 30. The King in his speech again exhorted the leaders and people of Ireland to patience and moderation and expressed his belief that with forbearance and good-will an enduring peace will finally be achieved. His reference to Ireland reads:

"The situation in Ireland still causes me great anxiety. I earnestly exhort

TAXED $1,635,797 AS A BOOTLEGGER

Claim Against E. J. Donegan First of Many to Be Made by Government.

TO GO AFTER RUM PROFITS

Prosecutor Attaches $45,000 in Bank—18 More Dry Agents Are Ousted Here.

Starting with Edward J. Donegan, a Brooklyn contractor, who is alleged to have made a large fortune in a few months in bootlegging operations prior to his arrest in the Hotel McAlpin on a conspiracy charge last December, the United States Treasury Department plans to collect large sums of money in taxes and penalties on the incomes of a great many persons in Brooklyn and Manhattan who are said to have engaged in illegal liquor traffic last year, it became known yesterday.

Donegan, who has cases pending against him both in Brooklyn and Manhattan in connection with alleged illegal liquor transactions, will be asked to pay $1,653,797.25 in income taxes and penalties on the money he is supposed to have taken in last year from this source. The penalties are attached because of failure to make returns on his income. Assistant District Attorney Frederick J. Kopff, who is handling the case for the Government, received word from the Treasury Department yesterday of the amount that will be demanded of Donegan. Mr. Kopff said that this was the first attempt made by the Government to collect on the supposed incomes of bootleggers, but as a result of investigations now being conducted there would be many more in Brooklyn and Manhattan.

Dispute Over Money in Bank.

The action of the Government was brought to light yesterday when a member of the law firm of Wingate & Cullen of Brooklyn appeared before Justice Isaac M. Kapper in the Supreme Court and made a motion to have the Government interplead in an action which had tied up $45,000 in the Peoples Trust Company of Brooklyn. Argument is to be heard on Nov. 18. Mr. Kopff placed a lien on the $45,000 last Summer, about the time Donegan was starting on a trip to Austria. Soon afterward Charles A. Berlin, counsel for Donegan, claimed the money, asserting that Donegan had assigned it to him. The purpose of the motion of counsel for the People's Trust Company is to have the court decide who is entitled to receive the money.

Yesterday United States Commissioner Henry S. Rasquin passed on another phase of the difficulties of Donegan and his associates. The Commissioner had been asked to declare void the search warrant which resulted in the seizure last Spring of a large quantity of liquor at Eighty-second Street and Seventh Avenue, Brooklyn, and in the arrest of Donegan, Joseph Freeman and Charles Berlin, the lawyer. Commissioner Rasquin upheld the legality of the warrant.

Donegan and Freeman were accused of conspiracy to violate United States statutes, and Berlin was accused of offering a bribe to Federal prohibition agents who made the raid.

According to Mr. Kopff, two years ago Donegan was engaged in doing odd jobs along the Brooklyn waterfront.

Asked About Income Tax.

Under charges in the Federal Court both in Brooklyn and Manhattan, Donegan had to obtain permission from both jurisdictions before he could leave last Summer for Austria, where he said he was going to protect certain patent rights which he owned. Agents of the Treasury Department inquired whether he had paid his income taxes when his passport was presented at the Custom House. They found, according to Mr. Kopff, that he had not made any return for 1920.

A raid was then made by Government agents, who, it is alleged, found among Donegan's papers evidence that he had received from bootlegging operations a large sum of money covering a period of two or three months. Computing his income for the twelve months on the basis of the amount shown by the papers to have been received for the two or three months, the Treasury officials fixed what they called an arbitrary sum to represent the year's income. Based on this arbitrary amount, the Government seeks to collect in taxes and penalties $1,653,797.25. According to Mr. Kopff, it will devolve upon Donegan to show that his income was not that much.

In the investigation it was found that Donegan had $45,000 on deposit in the Peoples Trust Company in Brooklyn, and, on instructions from the Treasury Department, Mr. Kopff attached it. Mr. Kopff said last night that several accounts had been found in Manhattan in the name of Donegan.

Mr. Kopff said that the Government was also contemplating criminal action against Donegan for failure to file his

CONFERENCE TO OPEN WITH AIM TO SPEED ARMS CUT DECISION

HUGHES TO BE CHAIRMAN

Adjournment Will Be Taken Until Tuesday—Americans to Sit at Head of Table.

HOPE TO END BY CHRISTMAS

Two Main Committees Will Consider Armament and Far Eastern Problems.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The formal program for the first session of the Conference on the Limitation of Armament, to be held at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning, was sent today by the State Department to the members of the various delegations.

There will be two addresses, one by President Harding and the other by the delegate who is chosen to the conference as its presiding officer. It is accepted that this post will go to Secretary of State Hughes, head of the American delegation.

It was announced that, in accordance with the desire which has been expressed on behalf of the missions, no responses will be made to President Harding's address.

A Secretary General will be selected, and this office, it is understood, will be given to John W. Garrett, former Minister of the United States to Argentina. Committees on program and procedure will then be named and the conference will adjourn to meet again on Tuesday, Nov. 15.

Program for the Opening.

The program as announced is:

"1. The first meeting of the conference will be held on Saturday, Nov. 12, at 10:30 A. M., at Continental Memorial Hall (hall of the Daughters of the American Revolution).

"2. The doors are to be closed to the public at 10:15 A. M., and it is requested that the delegates will be in their places not later than 10:25.

"3. The order of proceedings will be as follows:

"Prayer will be offered by the Rev. W. S. Abernethy, D. D., pastor of Calvary Baptist Church of Washington.

"The President of the United States will then address the conference.

"In accordance with the desire which has been expressed on behalf of the missions, no responses will be made to the President's address and the President will retire at its conclusion.

"The Secretary of State of the United States will suggest that the conference proceed with its organization.

"The election of the presiding officer of the conference will follow.

"The presiding officer will then deliver an address.

"After the selection of Secretary-General and committees on program and procedure, it will be proposed that the conference adjourn to meet on Tuesday, Nov. 15, 11 A. M. at Continental Memorial Hall."

Two Main Committees.

There will be two committees on program and procedure, one to deal with the limitation of armaments and the other with Pacific and Far Eastern questions. The former committee will be composed of the heads of the five principal delegations, those of Great Britain, France, Japan, Italy and the United States. The latter committee will include, in addition to the five named, the heads of the four other delegations invited to participate in discussions of Pacific and Far Eastern question—China, The Netherlands, Portugal and Belgium.

Adjournment will be taken from Saturday to Tuesday, instead of Monday, in order to give the two committees which are to play so important a part in the conference an opportunity to get together and reconcile any conflicting opinions that may be held as to the scope which the conference shall take. It is the belief of most of the delegates that this can be accomplished by Tuesday and that reports can be prepared which may be used as a working basis at least for the early deliberations.

The public meetings are to be held in Continental Memorial Hall on Seventeenth Street. When plans were first made for the conference it was proposed to hold the public sessions in the Hall of the Americas in the Pan American Building, but it was found to be impossible to provide sufficient accommodations there for resident diplomats, the Cabinet, members of the Senate and House, the army of newspaper correspondents who have come to Washington, many from far distant points, and others to whom it was considered essential to extend invitations.

The Memorial Hall will seat about 1,300 and the Governments have stressed the desire for full publicity by allotting 270 of these seats in the most desirable part of the hall, on the main floor, to the foreign and American press. About 840 of the seats are in the balcony of the hall. There are also four boxes, one of which has been assigned to Mrs. Harding, one to the members of the American delegation and two to the foreign delegations.

The delegates of the five principal powers will sit about a table. The American delegation will occupy the seats at the head of this table, and right and left, in alphabetical order, will be the delegates of France, Great Britain, Italy and Japan. The delegates of the four other powers will have seats facing the American delegation. The

L-6 TAKES FIRE WHILE SUBMERGED

BURNING SECTION SHUT

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 10.—Ten fathoms below the surface of the sea, the submarine L-6 burst into flames fifteen miles off Los Angeles Harbor this afternoon. The compartments were filled with smoke and flames which injured seven of the crew, three of whom are in a serious condition.

The destruction of the submarine and its crew of twenty-two was averted by partly conquering the flames as the craft shot to the surface and by making a record fifteen-mile run to the submarine base with all men on deck and with huge volumes of smoke and fumes rolling from the conning tower and hatches.

The men overcome were Lieutenant M. B. Stonestreet, Commander; Gunner G. W. Raymond, George Copping, chief torpedoman; F. McGowan, chief electrician's mate; M. W. Hunter, electrician, second class; R. J. Weir, electrician, second class, and C. A. Burgard, seaman.

At the submarine base the crew told of their desperate battle for life when they found themselves imprisoned with fire. The L-6 had left San Diego on a sixty-eight hour, full power and endurance run for Los Angeles harbor. When the fire broke out she had been at sea for forty-eight hours and a twenty-hour normal run on the surface had been made. Then the vessel made a quick dive and for five miles traveled submerged on the power of its batteries. Again it came to the surface and completed a four-hour full-power engine run.

She dived into the depths again for a one hour full speed run, submerged at a depth of sixty feet. She was forging through the sea at nine knots when the batteries in the forward compartment burst into flames.

Almost instantly smoke and fumes filled the craft. The crew was almost stifled. All their efforts were centred on closing the flaming compartment. The forward compartment was locked after several men had been overcome by the fumes, and then the crew brought the submarine to the surface. She was then operated from the conning tower, which, with the hatches, was thrown open, releasing smoke and fumes. Lieutenant Stonestreet ordered all his men on the narrow deck and the run for life began.

Across the surface, resembling a flaming beacon, the blazing submarine shot at full speed. She rounded the breakwater and reached the outer limits of the submarine base. Men there slipped on gas helmets and descended into the smoke-filled L-6. Seven unconscious men were removed to the Receiving Hospital at San Pedro. Four were soon resuscitated. The others, Hunter, Weir and McGowan, are in a serious condition.

The damage, which was confined to the forward compartment, was not great. The L-6 has always been regarded as a jinx ship, having experienced several accidents. Only recently the R-6 sank in Los Angeles Harbor, causing the death of two men.

CAPTURES 3 IN CAR STOLEN AT GARDEN

Detective, Pursuing Auto on Foot, Disables It With Bullet and Nabs Trio.

Three bullets fired as he pursued a touring car through East Twenty-sixth Street last night enabled Detective August Gilmour, of the East Twenty-second Street Station, to book three men whom he charged with attempting to steal the auto outside Madison Square Garden.

Gilmour saw three men get into a big Cadillac touring car near Madison Square Garden.

Gilmour, suspecting they were stealing the car, drew his revolver and ordered the occupants to halt. A chorus of laughter greeted his demand. The machine, gaining speed, went eastward in Twenty-sixth Street.

Gilmour gave chase. Midway between Madison Avenue and Fourth Avenue, the detective fired a bullet that went whizzing over the heads of the three men in the automobile, but the car sped on.

At Lexington Avenue, Gilmour fired another bullet. This ploughed into the back of the car, which continued. Just as the automobile began to race across the car tracks at Third Avenue, a third bullet from Gilmour's gun penetrated the radiator of the car and the machine stopped.

Gilmour said he nabbed the men as they were climbing out. At the East Twenty-second Street Station the men said they were Joseph Harrison, 21 years old, a chauffeur, of 320 East Thirty-third Street; Richard Burns, 22 years old, a teamster, of 251 East Thirtieth Street, and Henry Farley, 23 years old, a chauffeur, of 252 East Thirty-second Street.

Leon E. Moon, President of Leon E. Moon, Inc., manufacturers' agents at 1,153 Broadway, went to the police station and identified the automobile as his.

90,000 PAY HONOR TO OUR UNKNOWN, LYING IN STATE

COUNTLESS FLOWER GIFTS

MARCH CONTINUES 16 HOURS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—In solemn state the unknown American slept today in the very center of the heart of his country, the rotunda of the Capitol, while thousands of his fellow countrymen and the representatives of the world's great powers were paying him tribute such as emperors and kings rarely know.

While this American warrior lay in his simple black coffin, a steady throng filed past, all through the day and nearly to midnight. Old and young, black and white, crippled and stalwart, soldier and sailor and civilian, they moved steadily on, each craving the privilege of tendering to this symbolic man reverence and honor.

In the early morning they came fast, slackening a trifle in the forenoon. In the afternoon the numbers grew steadily and at night the throng increased to great proportions.

At 10 o'clock, the official hour of closing, men, women and children were still pouring by the bier of the nameless American and the crowd outside extended ten deep for many blocks from the Capitol.

At that hour it was decided to keep the doors open until midnight to admit all that were possible.

In all probably 90,000 persons filed past the catafalque during the day. This included hundreds who came in delegations to pay special tribute.

Wreath after wreath was placed on the bier, while patriotic organizations of America, foreign diplomats and, most honored of all, the mothers who had given their sons bowed their heads.

The walls of the rotunda, which had been decorated early with forty-eight wreaths, representing the States of the Union, were banked with these gifts until it seemed almost like a garden. From every land they came. The King of England sent a wreath of red English roses, crowned at the top with a bunch of flowers made up from all the Dominions.

More than an hour before the east door of the Capitol was opened in the morning a crowd had gathered in a line that extended a block away. The rain and fog of last night had been blown away and across the blue sky swept only a few fleecy clouds.

Within the rotunda an unknown American lay, guarded by the motionless armed men who had watched over him all through the night.

Most of the flowers placed on the coffin last night had been removed and the only covering was the brilliant American flag. On this rested the flowers sent from France, the shield of the nation placed there by President Harding and the white ribbon tenderly tied by Mrs. Harding.

The Slow March Begins.

Slowly the men and women who were first in the great stream of humanity came through the opened doors, moving through a roped aisle from the east door past the bier to the opposite entrance and down the staircases to Pennsylvania Avenue.

The public were admitted four abreast. As the first line appeared within the great bronze doors, which in themselves typified French affection for America, having been given to the young Republic in the long ago, a group of men sang the last verse of America:

Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light.

The groups of delegations formed on the steps of the Senate wing and entered the rotunda through the north door. After placing their flowers at the bier, and in some cases holding brief services, they filed out with the public through the west door.

Conspicuous among the delegations was that representing the British Empire, who came in a score of automobiles and with two trucks, bearing flowers. Earl Beatty, Arthur J. Balfour and Ambassador Geddes headed the long line. Soldiers and sailors, comrades of America's unknown, in the great war, bore the floral offerings.

The Earl of Cavan placed upon the catafalque the wreath from King George, which bore a card with the royal crest, and in their King's own handwriting this message:

As unknown and yet well known;
As dying, and, behold, we live.

GEORGE, R. I.

November 11, 1921.

Mr. Balfour brought a wreath for Premier Lloyd George, which carried a card reading:

"Nameless, yet his name liveth forever."

Canada's wreath of maple leaves bore this sentence, chosen by Sir Robert Borden, from "The Pilgrim's Progress":

"But that which put glory of grace into all he did was that he did it out of pure love to his country."

Colonel Crossfield represented the British Legion. Major Arnold the British Great War Veterans. Sergeant Young, V. C., the Army and Navy Veterans of

A wreath from India was inscribed: "They never die who die to make life worth living."

A wreath for Australia was placed by Senator Pearce, for New Zealand by Sir John Salmond, for South Africa by Ambassador Geddes and for Newfoundland by Captain Robertson.

Another wreath bore this card:

"From the members of the returned soldiers and sailors of the Imperial League of Australia in memory of their American comrades who fought with them in the great war."

Foreign diplomats with their attachés mingled all day with the groups of Americans, come to honor the unknown.

A gilded statue of the Angel of Peace, given by the Chinese Republic, was brought in early. It was later unveiled by Mr. Sze, the Chinese Minister. As the envoy and his staff entered, they advanced to the bier and paused reverently. Then the group separated, and three, at a time, the Chinese walked to the foot of the casket and bowed low. When they left the scene they repeated this obeisance.

Later in the afternoon came the delegation of Japan, Baron Shidehara with a secretary of Embassy, Military Attaché and Naval Attache, with their aids. They brought three wreaths and showed marked reverence as their offerings were deposited.

The wreath left by the Honduran Minister was inscribed

The Minister of Honduras to the Unknown American Soldier, as a tribute of admiration to the whole American Army for its glorious bravery.

Premier Briand, with others of the French delegation to the Armament Conference, brought a bunch of pink chrysanthemums tied with the tri-color. The Premier stood silent for a moment and then moved on with the rest of the group.

One wreath from a new country that sprang from the great war had a card reading:

Belgium's representative brought palm leaves tied with the national colors.

Russia, too, was represented in the long line. Henry de Bach, counsellor of the Embassy, headed a delegation which included Prince Cantacuzene, Count Speransky and Captain A. I. Smirnoff, representing the Russian Army, and Captain I. V. Mishtowt, representing the navy. They brought as a tribute of gratitude a Cross of St. George, composed of white and red flowers.

Represent American Life.

The American delegations that paid tribute to the dead were a living cross-section of the country's life.

Major Gen. Nelson A. Miles, the gray old Indian fighter, headed a group of bent members of the Loyal Legion who bore their glowing colors proudly. One of the men wore that highest decoration of the nation, the Congressional Medal. They held a brief service.

Representing the Grand Army of the Republic followed them, many of these feeble and a few in old and faded uniforms.

Sixteen wounded men from Walter Reed Hospital hobbled in stiffly on crutches and saluted. With what memories they stood beside their dead comrade.

An organization of ex-service men placed on the catafalque a white pillow, bearing in purple flowers the words: "Our Pal."

For the Churches of America.

Early in the day a committee of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, representing the Protestant Churches of the United States, came to the bier and held a brief service. Bishop McDowell of the Methodist Church offered prayer and the Rev. Dr. William A. Brown of Union Theological Seminary briefly eulogized the dead. The delegation left as an offering an American flag, made of tiny flowers, all surmounted by a white cross.

A delegation from the Red Cross brought a floral design, consisting of palm leaves forming a medalion of carnations with a red cross in the centre.

A floral wreath was brought by officials of the American Federation of Labor. It was inscribed

Live on, thou spirit of justice, freedom, democracy and humanity.

A group of Knights of Columbus in regalia came in, clustered about the bier and recited their ritual for the dead.

The Jewish Welfare Board was represented by a large delegation which held a brief service. They placed a laurel wreath on the bier.

Great Host of Delegations.

Other delegations that brought tributes were: American Ambulance Association, Rotary Club of Washington, National Women's Overseas Service League, United Spanish War Veterans, Department of District of Columbia; Rainbow Division, Twenty-eighth Division Association, Eighty-second Division, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Eightieth Division, American Library Association, Disabled Emergency Officers of World War, Thirty-seventh Division, Daughters of Veterans, Sixth Division, Hoboken War Mothers, Women of A. and N. Legion of Valor, Young Men's Christian Association, Second Division, National Organization of Sons of Veterans Auxiliary, National Society of United States Daughters of 1812, Society of Fifth Division, Young Women's Christion Association, American Women's Legion, United States Infantry, Third Regular Division, American War Mothers, National Catholic Welfare Council, American Legion, Military Order of World War, Daughters of American Revolution, Disabled Veterans of the World War, Navy League of the United States, Military Order of Foreign Wars, Military Training Camps Association, Naval and Military Order of Spanish-American War, National American Indian Memorial Association, Department of Maryland Veterans of Foreign Wars, Thomas Roberts Reath Post of American Legion, Hebrew Sheltering Immigrant Aid Society of America, Order of Sons of Temperance, and Salvation Army.

So numerous were the floral offerings that every once in a while the guards moved them away from the bier to leave room for those that were to come.

Although the last delegation, the Salvation Army, was not to appear until 9:55 o'clock in the rotunda, so precise and smooth were the arrangements that they appeared half an hour before that time.

Notables From Public Life.

Many notables in the nation's life were conspicuous in the throng that passed through the rotunda during the day.

Vice President Coolidge, Secretary Weeks, Attorney General Daugherty, Postmaster General Hays, Justices Pitney, McKenna, Day and Clark of the Supreme Court, General Pershing, Major Gen. Harbord, Major Gen. Lejeune, as well as hundreds of other army and navy and marine officers and prominent officials visited the sacred spot.

All through the day the immobility of the soldiers that guarded the unknown's coffin attracted the wonder of the crowd. They stood there carven images, so rigid that they seemed scarcely breathing. Every five minutes they were allowed to change their pose from "attention" to "parade rest," but they snapped from one position to the other with one move. At intervals the guard was changed, and the men who had been on duty retired to an improvised barracks under the rotunda.

Officers of the Thirteenth Engineers said the men had been in intensive training for this guard mount for weeks and had hardened themselves for the ordeal.

Today's Ceremonies.

The body of the unknown will be taken from the Capitol at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow in the presence of President Harding and many distinguished persons. The President, the Vice President, the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, members of the Senate and the House, General Pershing and distinguished officers of the army, the navy and the marine corps, members of the Cabinet, Governors of States, medal of honor men, State representatives who served in the World War, and members of War Veterans' Societies will march on foot behind the caisson containing the coffin along Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House. There President Harding will leave the line and proceed with Mrs. Harding by car to Arlington. Vice President Coolidge, with members of the Cabinet, Supreme Court and the Senate and House will drop out at the same time.

The services at Arlington will begin at 11:55 o'clock, when Chief Chaplain Axton of the army, will give the invocation. At noon silence will be called for and the exercises will be discontinued for two minutes as a tribute to the dead warrior. "America" will then be sung, and this will be followed by an address by President Harding.

A quartet from the Metropolitan Opera House in New York will sing a hymn, "The Supreme Sacrifice." After this the Unknown will be decorated with the Congressional Medal of Honor, the Belgian Croix de Guerre, the Victoria Cross, the French Croix de Guerre and the French Médaille Militaire, the Italian Gold Medal for Bravery, the Czechoslovak War Cross and the Polish Medal for Military Virtue.

After hymns and Scriptural reading, the body of the Unknown will be borne from the amphitheatre to the Sarcophagus, preceded by the clergy and followed by President and Mrs. Harding and the other distinguished guests.

Final burial will follow, with Bishop Brent conducting the burial services.

Wreaths will then be placed upon the tomb of the Unknown by Representative Hamilton Fish Jr. of New York, author of the legislation for the selection of the Unknown and his burial in Arlington, and by American and British war mothers, while Chief Plenty Coups of the Crow Indian nation, representing the Indians of America, will lay his war bonnet and coup stick on it. An artillery salute will be fired, and the ceremony will close with "Taps."

CHINA READY TO SPURN INTERNATIONAL REGIME

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Dr. Wellington Koo, one of China's delegation to the Washington conference, said today that China did not expect the impossible in the settlement of Far Eastern questions, but would resist any movement for international control.

"We desire very sincerely to see the conference succeed," he said, "because we feel that no participant in the conference can afford to see it fail. But in hoping for the success of the conference the Chinese delegation is not hoping for the impossible. In fact we will not attempt the impossible. It will be a great advancement if the conference succeeds in making a beginning in the laying of international friendship, upon which alone permanent peace can be preserved.

"We will enter the conference in the spirit of looking for a solution of the complicated Far Eastern questions through concerted action on the part of the delegates participating and we hope that an agreement of these can be reached by common consent. We feel that the conference is to start in the very best possible atmosphere and that it will reach some tangible result.

"There are two factors which must be kept in mind in considering China's position. First, there, must be some guarantee for the safety and security of the Chinese nation. Second, there must be a restoration of freedom of development.

"These two factors are essential in the upbuilding of China and will make China at once united and prosperous and will be a great asset in the peace of the Far East."

Dr. Koo said that China looked upon the proposal of international control with suspicion and one which, if put into practice, would make conditions worse in his country.

"There will be the most uncompromising hostility," he said, "to any proposal that seeks to deprive us of the opportunity of remaining masters of our own destinies. The suggestion that we shall yield to some scheme of international control inspires us with the gravest suspicion."

GLASS SAYS CHURCHES FAILED AS TO LEAGUE

World Would Have Disarmed Had America Entered, He Declares—Calls Harvey 'Accursed.'

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The failure of the Christian churches of the country to stimulate interest in the League of Nations is in large part responsible for the fact that the United States is not now in the League, Senator Carter Glass of Virginia has written to John Stewart Bryan of Richmond. The letter was prepared in reply to a request by Mr. Bryan for the Senator's views on disarmament.

Senator Glass says, in expressing the hope that the armament conference will accomplish a definite end: "It would have been far better to have gone into the League of Nations by the front door rather than to be waiting in the woodshed in the back yard." He also comments that no matter how much the American Legion may deplore the utterance of Ambassador Harvey to the effect that this country entered the war to save itself, the sentiment of "this accursed Ambassador" is accepted by the recent treaty with Germany sanctioned by the Harding Administration.

MILLIONS TO PRAY FOR PEACE TODAY

Celebration of Third Anniversary of the Armistice Will Extend All Over the World.

HEAR HARDING'S VOICE HERE

Two Parades and Day and Night Meetings in Madison Square Garden.

The anniversary of the armistice will be observed today with a unique program. At noon America will hold two minutes of silent prayer for the dead of the war and for future peace, a prayer in which millions in all continents will join.

At the end of the prayer, President Harding's voice, multiplied billions of times by the inventions of brilliant electrical engineers, will be heard on both coasts of America, as he delivers in Arlington Cemetery, Washington, his funeral oration for the Unknown Soldier. This will be thundered simultaneously to great American Legion meetings in New York and San Francisco.

Among the many features of the Armistice Day services the greatest will be the Legion's observance at Madison Square Garden, where the telephone amplifiers in the building, outside of the building and in Madison Square will repeat powerfully and distinctly the oration of the President, the singing of a quartet of the Metropolitan Opera Company at Arlington Cemetery, the sounding of taps there and the playing of a band.

The President's words will travel more than 3,500 miles in its simultaneous trips from Washington to California and to New York and will be louder at the end of the journeys than at the beginning. His audiences are expected to number more than a quarter of a million people.

Magnifying the President's Voice.

At the start the President's voice will enter several receivers, as the ordinary speaker's voice enters the telephone mouthpiece, the sound waves being translated into electrical waves. This current of electricity carrying the impression of the President's voice is passed into a vacuum tube. Another current 1,000 times as great is passed through the tube at the same time.

The observances in Madison Square Garden will begin at 10:15 A. M., with choruses of school children. The formal program will begin at 11:05 with Colonel William Hayward as temporary Chairman. "The Star Spangled Banner" will be sung by the audience, led by a chorus and orchestra. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt will then speak. A chorus of school children will sing a "Hymn of Thanksgiving." An address by Martin W. Littleton will follow.

At this point the New York and San Francisco audiences will begin to take part in the services at the Arlington Cemetery. The trumpet call "Attention!" will be sounded over the magnifying telephones. The national anthem by the Marine Band and the invocation by Chaplain Axton may also be heard.

The two minutes of silent prayer follow. The crowd inside Madison Square Garden will stand and the crowd outside will stand. The subways and other traction lines will stop. The telephone service of the city is suspended for two minutes. On the streets, in shops, in factories and in office buildings, the two minutes of silent prayer will be observed. In scores of churches throughout the city prayers for the war dead will be said, and the prayers and services will be continued long after for the success of the disarmament conference.

Baptists Call to Prayer.

Cables have called Baptists to prayers in all corners of the earth, according to a Baptist announcement yesterday, which said:

"Men and women and children in the remotest corners of the world and in many different tongues at noon today will do honor to the cause for which the unknown soldier in Washington gave his life. At that hour a simultaneous, many-tongued prayer for world peace will be offered by Baptist converts the world over, from hill tribe worshippers gathered in a circle outside a mud hut in Africa to native Christians in India's jungle hamlets."

The Madison Square Garden meeting will be followed by the Americanization parade of the Veterans of the Foreign Wars of the United States and other organizations. This will start from Washington Square at 1:30 and proceed up Fifth Avenue, disbanding at Sixtieth Street. The Grand Marshal of the parade will be Captain Walter I. Joyce. Accompanying the Grand Marshal and his staff will be the Old Guard of New York and the Old Guard Band, a battalion of United States Marines, commanded by Lieutenant Harry A. Miller, and representatives of the Grand Army of the Republic.

In the First Division of the parade will be the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, led by Commander George H. King. Many bands, organizations and floats will follow. The Fourth Division will be composed of combat troops of the A. E. F., consisting largely of veterans of the Thirty-eighth Infantry, which was officially named "the Rock of the Marne" by Congress for its stepping of two German divisions on the Marne in 1918, and which was the only regiment individually mentioned by General Pershing in his report to the President. A number of troops from other famous units will march in this section of the parade.

The parade will be reviewed from a stand in Madison Square Garden in which will sit Mayor Hylan, Brig. Gen. William G. Bates, the Rev. Dr. Ernest D. Stires, Colonel John Hughes of the Marine Corps and Captain A. L. Robertson.

Night Meeting in the Garden.

A meeting in Madison Square Garden and an overflow meeting in Madison Square will be held in the evening by the Central Trades and Labor Council in order to express the sentiment of labor in favor of disarmament. The amplifying telephones will transmit the voices of the speakers inside the Garden to the crowd in the park. Among the speakers will be Samuel Gompers, Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Bishop John J. Dunn, Bishop William T. Manning, State Commander William F. Deegan of the American Legion, Dr. Stephen S. Wise, President John Sullivan of the Central Trades and Labor Council and ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith.

Special Armistice Day programs will be held in many theatres and schools. A squad of marines who fought in France will take part in a tableaux at the Capitol Theatre, representing the advance of the Americans through Belleau Wood.

A mass meeting to voice sentiment in favor of the limitation of armament will be held in the evening at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, where addresses will be made by Bishop Manning, Dr. John H. Finley and Dr. John Kelman.

Every Roman Catholic church in the city, following the directions of Archbishop Hayes, will have a mass or benediction at 11:45 o'clock. Archbishop Hayes will preside over the services in St. Patrick's.

Some of the Jewish congregations will combine their regular Friday vespers with armistice services. At these the Kaddish will be offered. A special armistice service will be held at Temple Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street, with an address by Rabbi H. G. Enelow.

An armistice service will be held in every Presbyterian Church in response to a request of the Rev. Dr. Henry C. Swearingen of St. Paul, Minn., moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. In the Fifth Avenue Church, at Fifty-fifth Street, the service will begin at 11 o'clock and the sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. John Kelman, the pastor. The service at Brick Church, Fifth Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street, will begin at 11:45 and continue one hour. It will include a sermon by the Rev. Dr. William P. Merrill, the pastor.

At Columbia University.

Wounded war veterans will take part in the Armistice Day exercises at Columbia University, and all academic work will cease between noon and 2 P. M., according to an announcement issued last night at the university. In addition the Columbia Reserve Officers' Training Corps will make its first public appearance at the ceremony.

According to the plans of the university, a special commemorative service for the students will be held in St. Paul's Chapel at noon, to which the Training Corps, under Major William E. Foote, will march in a body, stacking arms outside. At 12 o'clock all heads will be bowed in silent prayer, in accordance with President Harding's request. Dean F. J. E. Woodbridge of the Columbia Graduate Faculties will speak at the services, which will be conducted by the Rev. Charles F. Kennedy, acting chaplain of the university.

All railroad trains in the East will stop for two minutes during the period of prayer today from 12 M. to 12:02 P. M. All shop work and other railroad work will pause for those two minutes to permit the railroad employes to join in the silent prayer. This was decided upon at a meeting of the executives of the Eastern railroads at the New York Central offices yesterday.

FRENCH PLAN QUIET ARMISTICE EXERCISES

Historic Stone to Be Set Up at Chateau-Thierry—No Public Holiday.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—The third anniversary of the armistice tomorrow is to be the occasion of the setting up by France of the first of a series of stones that will record the high-water mark of the German invasion during the World War. The first monument, an appropriate design capped by a poilu's helmet, is to be placed at Chateau-Thierry, where the Americans played such a gallant part in stopping the German rush at the most critical moment.

Otherwise the day is to be celebrated very quietly in France. The ceremonies which were to have been held at Strasbourg have been called off on account of the death of General Humbert. Placing wreaths at the grave of the unknown poilu under the Arc de Triomphe by veterans and patriotic organizations will be the principal feature of the Paris celebration. The Chamber at the beginning of this week decided that the day should be a public holiday, but the Senate rejected the proposal because of numerous recent fete days and the general desire not to lose a whole day of production which is regarded as an essential contribution to the world's economic recovery. So the Senate in the interest of thrift decided to postpone the popular celebration till Sunday, and the chamber has agreed.

SAYS BALFOUR SKILL IS NEEDED ON JAPAN

BRITISH POLICIES CHANGING

Aim Is to Quit Continent, He Declares, and Work Closely With United States.

By PERTINAX.

Dispatch to the Echo de Paris.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The arrival of Mr. Balfour on the scene of the conference is an important and interesting development. Among the British statesmen and diplomatists who of late years have set themselves to the task of bettering Anglo-American relations, always disturbed—at least on the surface—by all kinds of currents and cross-currents, he had been the most uniformly successful. His proverbial flexibility of mind has nearly always been equal to the occasion.

None seems to be better qualified than himself to settle the difficult issue which arises between the two great English-speaking nations out of the existence of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance. Against the prolongation of that diplomatic compact the American people asserts itself in the strongest possible manner. It is not far from considering it as the real starting point of all the unfavorable developments in the Far East.

Rightly or wrongly, Mr. Hughes is credited with the idea of asking, at the very outset of the conference, the representatives of all the principal nations to lay all their cards on the table of the conference, and the Anglo-Japanese convention, should such procedure be resorted to, would certainly be the card to which yould be paid the greatest attention. On my way to Washington I happened to ask the following question of a fellow-passenger who had tried to ascertain whether I was going to attend the conference: "What do you expect from it?" The instant reply was: "The end of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance."

From the beginning of last Spring Mr. Lloyd George and his colleagues have gradually realized that if the metropolitan government of London is to keep in line with Washington in the field of foreign policy, it cannot do otherwise than to break from a mooring which, should the storm break out in the Pacific, would greatly impede the freedom of its movements. Considerations of another kind contribute to impel it to initiate a new policy. For instance, the Government of England want to presume, as much as possible, their traditional attitude of abstention and passivity toward Continental affairs. They believe that, in order to revive the so-called policy of splendid isolation, they must act in closest harmony with America.

On another hand, the arguments which can be invoked for the continuation of the alliance are only two in number. Firstly, an old ally cannot be repudiated on a few months' notice. Secondly, the rulers of India are reluctant to face the new fact that henceforward, in Asia and in the Pacific, the powers will be grouped along color lines. In that change they perceive a fateful writing on the wall.

At the imperial conference, last July, Mr. Lloyd George and his advisers endeavored to avoid the issue. They probably regarded at first the summoning of an international conference as the best means of getting out of a difficult impasse. The unexpected pronouncement of the Lord Chancellor about the validity of the Anglo-Japanese treaty, through which the problem of its immediate renewal was shelved, must be associated with that fact in order to be rightly understood.

Since these interesting imperial and Anglo-American pouparlers of last July and August, of which the full history is still to be revealed—in spite of many hesitations and contradictions, a great evolution has taken place little by little. On the Brtish side the view seems to be about to prevail that, should the worst come to the worst, the British Empire could not remain neutral in case certain territories commanding its maritime communications were to change hands.

But that does not mean that the British spokesmen will at once tear up the treaty of alliance and assent to all the claims formulated by Messrs. Harding and Hughes. On the contrary, all the available indications point out that they will insist on the adoption of a reasonable compromise. But should the British policy be tested to the heart, it will probably be found to move along the lines indicated above.

ITALIANS HERE FOR ARMS CONFERENCE

Fourteen members of the Italian delegation to the armament conference arrived yesterday on the Italian liner Dante Alighieri. Among them were Lieut. Gen. Giuseppe Vaccari, Chief of Staff of the Italian Army; Vice Admiral Alfredo Acton, Commander of the Naval District of Naples; Lieutenant Rogadeo of the navy, Colonel Moizo of the Italian Air Service, Lieut, Cols. Barbarsete and Pentimalli, military experts; Giuseppe Gentile, France Averardi and Michele Mattel.

The Dante Alighieri came into port flying at her fore truck the blue flag of an Italian Vice Admiral beneath the white flag with red stars of the Lieutenant General. As the steamship passed Governors Island a battery from the sea wall fired a salute of seventeen guns. The party had time for luncheon on board before they started for Washington. They were officially welcomed down the bay, when representatives of the army and navy and Captain Civilleri, Italian Naval Attaché at Washington boarded the liner.

Because of delay at quarantine the vessel did not reach her pier at the foot of Beach Street until nearly noon. The delegates missed the train they had intended to take to Washington and were obliged to wait. With them on the train were General De Lucca Kennedy and Major Coccono of the staff of General Diaz and Captain Carlo Huntington, Assistant Military Attaché at Washington.

Admiral Acton and General Vaccari said they were here as advisers. They had nothing to say, they added, for Senator Schanzer, one of Italy's representatives at the conference and now in this country, had voiced the sentiments of the delegation.

Another visitor on his way to the conference was Carlo Scarfoglio, an editorial writer on Mattina Di Napoli. Giovanni Caruso, younger brother of the late Enrico Caruso, and Gabriele Consolazio, an Italian lawyer, arrived to complete an inventory of the tenor's estate. They were met at the pier by Bruno Zarati, who was secretary to Caruso when he died. The younger brother expects to be here about four months.

To assist Italian soldiers here who are suffering from tuberculosis and other diseases contracted during the war is the mission of Guido Podrecca, a member of the Italian Parliament, who arrived on the liner. The ship brought fifty-two first class, 245 second class and 1,025 steerage passengers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—An Italian delegation to the Armament Conference arrived here tonight and was met at the Union Station by Marquis Visconti Venosta, Secretary General of the Italian delegation. The party numbered fourteen and the Italian delegation is now complete with the exception of Deputy Meda, one of the four principal delegates, who has not yet left Italy.

BELGIAN GROUP ANNOUNCED.

Shares American View on Trade Questions in Far East.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The complete list of Belgium's delegation in the Washington conference was announced tonight. It consists of these:

Baron de Cartier, Belgian Ambassador, delegate to the conference; M. Felicien Cattier, President of the Banque d'Outremer and Honorary Professor of Brussels University, technical adviser; Chevalier de Wouters, Vice President of the Banque Belge pour l'Etranger and former legal adviser to the Chinese Government, technical adviser; M. Jules Jadot, head manager of the Lung-Hai Railroad, technical adviser; Lemaire de Warzee d'Hermaile, counselor of embassy, attached to delegation; Pol le Tellier, First Secretary of embassy, Secretary General; Robert Silvercruys, Secretary of embassy, Assistant Secretary General, and Raoul Tilmont, attaché of embassy (temporarily attached).

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (Associated Press).—The Belgian delegation to the Washington conference looks upon trade and economic questions in the Far East in the same way as does the American Government, Felicien Cattier, a member of the delegation, said today.

"Belgium's interest in China is that the door should not be open on paper merely, but open in fact," M. Cattier said. "Belgians built the Peking-Hankow Railroad after they made their treaty of 1865 with China, and several branch lines since then. We have done much in China and stand for complete freedom of opportunity to do more."

WOMEN TO PARADE TODAY.

Those in Line Will Stop Two Minutes at Noon for Silent Prayer.

A parade of women in automobiles, under the auspices of the New York Council for Limitation of Armaments will start at 10:30 this morning at Washington Square, and proceed up Fifth Avenue as far as 110th Street, returning by way of Broadway. At places where meetings are in progress, such as Grace Church, St. Thomas's Church and Madison Square Garden, groups will fall out.

At the stroke of twelve the paraders will stop two minutes for silent prayer. The participants will alight from the automobiles and stand at attention while Girl Scouts will tip their banners. The parade, which was organized by a committee headed by Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, is distinct from other armistice day activities. Miss Portia Willis will be head marshal, and her assistants will include Miss Nancy Cook, Miss Mathilde Spence, Miss Marion Dickerman and Mrs. Charles Bauer Winch.

Organizations which will take part in the parade include the Junior League, the City Federation of Women's Clubs, the State Federation of Women's Clubs, Henry Street Settlement, American Association of University Women, Pro-League Council, Women's International League for Peace, Actors Equity Association, Hunter College Alumnae and Smith College Club.

JEWS SUPPORT CONFERENCE.

Adolf Kraus Sends Good Wishes to President Harding.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—A hope that the armament conference will result in an era of universal peace was expressed to President Harding today on behalf of American Jews in a telegram from Adolf Kraus of Chicago, President of the B'nai B'rith. Members of the order and Jews everywhere, Mr. Kraus said, would "watch with anxious hearts" the progress of the negotiations.

"Wars and the consequences of wars," continued the telegram, "have weighed more heavily upon the Jews in all lands than they have upon those of other faiths. In common with those of other creeds, they have given their all to the lands under whose protecting flags they live. The poisonous aftermath of war, its hatreds and passions, its miseries, murders and lies, have been visited upon them in far greater measure than citizens of other faiths.

"A people with this historical background has a long emotional memory and through the centuries has prayed with fervent hearts for the dawn of that day which the present conference seems to portend. May God be with you in your deliberations and guide you."

WARNS AGAINST OFFENDING JAPAN

General Sir Ian Hamilton Says She Is Not Likely to Be Unreasonable

BUT CANNOT BE BULLIED

Copyright, 1921, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—General Sir Ian Hamilton, who spent some months with the Japanese army during the Russian war as military representative of the Indian army, sounded a warning today in an address to the Press Club as to the meaning of a war with Japan.

He said he agreed most heartily with one of the British elder statesmen who said to him recently that England ought to stand by the United States to the last, but his knowledge of the Japanese made him shiver. As the statesman spoke of Japan it sounded to him like the voice years ago of Kuropatkin speaking to the Czar.

The General went on to elaborate his views on Japan's aspirations. He acquitted the Japanese of being at all likely to be unreasonable. Her statesmen could quickly come to their senses when they found the English-speaking nations were united, for they were sensible people.

Moreover, they had been close students of the late war. They understood that it was not enough to have a really magnificent navy and army. Modern war, they realized, had become a series of great economic problems in which Japan was not well equipped in comparison with other nations.

The Japanese were not in the least pugnaciously inclined, he proceeded, but they knew that if they made a serious move it would be five years before anybody could do anything serious to them. For years they bowed before the size of Russia, but they knew the length of the Transsiberian Railway to an inch and they knew its maximum was eighteen trains a day and their time came. So today they know the breadth of the Pacific and that if British battleships crossed it to attack them they could not get back because they would have no oil or naval bases.

If there was any trouble with Japan, Sir Ian Hamilton went on, they could take Hongkong and the Philippines and it would be a very long time before they were turned out. The press and public ought to be perfectly clear about big facts of that sort before they went into the Washington conference. That conference was something like a smoking concert in a powder magazine.

Sir Ian said the Japanese could not be frightened or browbeaten or bullied, and he drew the moral that due attention should be paid to Japan's national aspirations.

"They are very polite," he said, "they bow before you and call you Your Excellency, but they would not give way of they thought they were right, and that England should be polite, too. Better let the Japanese have the whole of China than have another war. After all, most of the other peoples have got what they call mandates, and Japan has none."

LABOR THANKS HARDING.

International Conference Applauds the Arms Meeting.

GENEVA, Nov. 10.—The International Labor Conference, in session here, today sent a cable message to President Harding, expressing "great appreciation for the noble aspirations" of the American President in calling the Washington Conference or Limitation of Armament.

The message expressed the hope that the conference, through international co-operation, could work out a permanent and solid foundation for the establishment of universal peace.

WILL URGE PARLEY TO SPEED ARMS CUT

table about which these delegates will sit has a covering of green cloth.

The addresses which are to be delivered by President Harding and Secretary Hughes at the meeting on Saturday are being awaited with unusual interest. It is not believed that either of them will go to any great extent into the problems involved in the conference, but there is a belief that they will speak frankly on the general attitude of America toward the deliberations and the hope of bringing about limitation of armaments.

Whatever the results of the conference may be, there has been little left to hope for in the way of physical arrangements. The two Eastern wings of the new Navy Building, the Pan-American Building and the building of the Daughters of the American Revolution have been turned over to the conferees.

In the Navy Building there have been equipped private offices for each member of each delegation, council rooms for those delegations which desired them, quarters for the small army of technical experts and advisers and commodious quarters for the press and the telegraph and telephone services.

Contact With Foreign Writers.

The newspaper correspondents have been provided with a large workroom and a large reception room, where it is hoped that the correspondents of the foreign nations and the United States will be daily in contact with one another. Those who had the arrangements in hand believed that such a plan would promote good feeling and understanding among the correspondents. There has been comment on the fact that the European and American correspondents scarcely ever came in contact during the Paris Peace Conference.

In addition to these two large rooms, quarters have been provided for the press associations in the Navy Building. There also will be a press headquarters in the building of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The telegraph facilities will be ample. The Western Union has put in an equipment in the Navy Building over which, if necessary, more than 2,000,000 words can be handled in a day of ten hours. It also has two direct cable circuits to Nova Scotia and two to San Francisco from the Navy Building. This equipment is in addition to the large central office at which the facilities which were established during the war are still available. The Postal Company also has put in a special equipment in the Navy Building and both companies are predicting quick service without regard to the volume of dispatches.

The Pan American building will be used by the delegates for their private conferences. The Hall of the Americas has been turned over for a general conference room and there are smaller council rooms at each end. The task of refitting all of the buildings for the purposes of the conference was turned over to Lieut. Commander Rousi.

Officials were reticent today as to the plans of the conference beyond Saturday's meeting. It is probable that the meeting to be held on Tuesday morning will be public, but no definite decision will be made as to this before the committees are ready to report.

Hope to Finish by Christmas.

One of the striking developments of the pre-conference period is a general inclination to believe that the gathering will be short-lived. This does not mean that its participants expect it to end in failure soon but merely that the general disposition is to speed the work so that busy statesmen will be able to return to their duties within a time measured by weeks instead of months.

In the interim between the calling of the conference and the assembling of the delegates and their staffs in Washington, it has been anybody's guess as to how long the conference would last. American officials have admitted that they were entirely at sea as to this in asking Congress for an appropriation of $200,000 to carry on the work of the conference, the State Department said that estimate was to cover two months but department officials have declared that they had no idea as to how long the international conference would be in session.

Some of them, hazarding a guess, have fixed six months as the time; others have said three or four months; but all have made it plain that they had not the slightest definite idea on the subject.

Since the delegates have been gathering, however, it has become manifest that the whole disposition will be to shorten the time. Even officials of the United States are now inclined to think that the two months' estimate will fully cover the life of the assembly. Opinion is tending toward having the conference finish its fundamental work in less than two months, and a general idea seems to exist that there may be an adjournment by Christmas, or six weeks after the opening session.

Bryand to Remain Two Weeks.

M. Briand, the Premier of France, plans to sail for Europe in about two weeks after the conference begins. A considerable number of European public men attending the conference are anxious to go home for Christmas in the hope that it will not be necessary for them to return to America.

This state of affairs is regarded as a hopeful sign for conference success. It is capable of the construction that those concerned do not believe that the problems are insuperable.

This way of looking at the situation is not in accord, however, with the considerable pessimism which prevails among many individuals connected with the gathering.

One suggestion supposed to emanate from some important source is that the main conference should devote itself to mapping out a series of general principles, leaving separate committees to work out formulae which will fit them, the committees to report in due time and their recommendations to be taken up by the nations concerned through diplomatic channels. Whether there will be any serious attention given to this suggestion is not known, but the desire for an early adjournment lends color to it.

BALFOUR ARRIVES; PREDICTS SUCCESS

British Delegate to Enter Arms Meeting in a Spirit of Confidence and Hope.

HE EXPECTS LITTLE DELAY

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—All of the delegates to the Washington conference who will be here to attend the opening session Saturday have arrived and will be the nation's guests tomorrow at the burial of the Unknown American Soldier at Arlington. The last group to come were the representatives of the British Empire, headed by Arthur J. Balfour, acting head of the delegation; Sir John Salmond, representing New Zealand, and Senator George F. Pearce, acting for Australia.

The arrivals were enthusiastically greeted at the station by a distinguished group of English and American officials, Secretary Hughes; Robert Woods Bliss, Third Assistant Secretary of State; General Pershing and Admiral Brewster, representing the American Government, welcomed the incoming group. The train bearing Mr. Balfour and his staff was the first to arrive, and a few minutes later the representatives of the Dominions came in.

Mr. Balfour and Secretary Hughes greeted each other as old friends. After the Dominion delegates had been introduced the party hurried through the station and were driven quickly through the Capitol grounds to their headquarters. The crowds at the station were, perhaps, the largest that have been present to see the arriving foreigners, due to the large number of people reaching the city to pass before the bier of the unknown soldier at the Capitol.

As Secretary Hughes and Mr. Balfour appeared in the doorway facing the Capitol the band played "God Save the King," followed by "The Star Spangled Banner." This served to inform the crowds lining the concourse of the nature of the occasion, and there were many cheers for the British.

Says Peace Completion Is Sought.

"It is more than four years since I left this well-remembered scene and said farewell to my many friends at Washington," said Mr. Balfour at the station. "It was a most critical stage in the great war, and, notwithstanding that there was nothing more to be feared from the enemy's battleships, the submarine campaign, though its intensity had somewhat diminished, was still most formidable. In the West and East the victory by land hung in the balance.

"America, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, animated by a single spirit, was concentrating her vast resources and preparing to throw her whole strength into the world struggle. We all know the result. It came more completely and more quickly than most of us had dared to hope, and exactly three years ago the greatest of victories concluded the greatest of wars.

"I little thought, when I took leave on this platform of those from whom I had received such endless kindness, that I should again be called upon to revisit it as the representative of Great Britain; still less did I think that three years after the armistice was signed our whole thoughts would still be directed toward completing the work of peace. But so it is.

"Nothing could less resemble the work that had to be done in 1917 than the work in which we are all concerned in 1921. Yet they are not only intimately connected, but they form part of the same great international endeavor, and he would be a rash prophet who would say that the victories of peace are easier of attainment than the victories of war.

"But surely we may approach these new labors in a sprit of confidence and hope. We must not, indeed, either ask for or expect the impossible, although what is within our reach is worth our utmost efforts; and I cannot doubt that under the wise guidance of your President we shall be fortunate enough to attain it.

"Most happy was the inspiration which moved him to summon this conference. I am convinced that all those who are going to meet here in counsel, and the Governments whom they represent, are resolved to the best of their ability to co-operate with him in making it a success. This is the world's desire; it will not fail of accomplishment."

Balfour Received by Harding.

Later in the day Mr. Balfour paid his respects to President Harding and Secretary Hughes, remaining a few minutes with each. Before making these visits he greeted the newspaper men in his apartments, across from the British Embassy, calling many of them by name, having remembered them when here before. He said that he expected the conference to be successful and that he and the British delegation were here to follow the lead of President Harding and Secretary Hughes.

"We come here as strangers to learn," he said. "I know no detail of the conference except what I got in my slight talk with Secretary Hughes, but we feel safe in following the guidance of President Harding and Secretary Hughes."

Mr. Balfour said that he expected the conference to proceed to business without much delay and he expressed the hope that there would be no reply made to President Harding's opening speech. He also said that he represented South Africa, which had no immediate concern in the Pacific and Far Eastern question.

In his opinion the conference will be the most businesslike gathering of its kind that has ever assembled and ought to end its deliberations in reasonable time.

"There have been various ideas of how long the conference will last," he added with a smile. "Some of them say it will not end its business during the life of men younger than myself. But I do not look for an extraordinarily long session. Of course, the length all depends on whether we came here to spin out a lot of talk or carry on a very serious business. I think we came here to settle the most momentous questions of the time and that we will proceed to discuss and settle them, if possible, in the quickest possible time.

"The whole world is in an economic and commercial rut, and we want to get it out of that condition without unnecessary delay. While the questions are prodigious and far-reaching, they are not the same as those which confronted the Paris conference. There we had to remake the map of Europe."

Pearce Also Visits President.

Senator Pearce, who is Minister of Defense in the Australian Government, arrived after an overland journey from Vancouver. In the afternoon he made an official call at the White House, where, in common with other distinguished visitors, he was received by the President, and in the evening he was a guest at a dinner given by the British Ambassador.

Senator Pearce declined to say anything at this stage in regard to the conference. He has had a comparatively long career in Australian politics, having been one of the six representatives of the State of Western Australia in the Senate for over twenty years—since the Federation of the Australian States in January, 1901. Mr. Pearce has been Minister of Defense in various Governments, and has held that Cabinet post for an aggregate of over ten years.

HARVEY DECLARES HOPE IN CONFERENCE

Bonomi, Hayashi and Others Join in Expressions of Its Meaning to the World.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The Daily News, on the eve of the Washington conference, publishes a series of messages from leading men of the allied and associated powers in the late war expressing hopes for its success. Ambassador George Harvey says:

"In a deep and true sense this conference will continue and develop by insuring to each country a larger measure of security, the very ends for which our soldiers died, and to its success each allied nation will bring the clear faith and high hope which through all vicissitudes enabled it to sustain the war. Its success and good-will and the immeasurable gladness which that success will bring to the lands for which these men died will be to them a tribute and high memorial, and for its success, in reverence to our glorious dead, we devoutly pray."

Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Ambassador in London, says:

"The eyes of men are steadfastly directed to Washington and I believe we should all endeavor both as individuals and as nations to assist by our steadiness of spirit toward a happy issue to the deliberations of the conference. The people of Japan, sorely smitten by the tragic end of their Premier, will assuredly do their share in contributing moral support to the wise men of the East and West upon the result of whose labors so much depends."

Signor Bonomi, the Italian Prime Minister, says:

"The confident hopes of so eminently liberal and democratic a country as Italy are turned toward the efforts which at Washington will be made to create a better understanding among nations and to remove all dangers of war."

Count Sforza, the Italian Foreign Minister, says:

"Ideal aims and practical necessity combined to dictate Italy's attitude regarding the problems posed at Washington. It is Italy's singular luck that our truest material interests correspond to the highest moral ideals. With effective moral strength we shall support as far as realities and dignity allow not only military but also economic disarmament."

the leaders of all parties in Ireland and all those in whose hands lies power to influence the negotiations and discussions now proceeding to exercise patience and moderation with the object of establishing friendship and loyal cooperation between my people of that country. It is my firm belief, as it is my earnest prayer, that, with forbearance and good-will, and with an honest resolve to tread the paths of oblivion and forgiveness, an enduring peace will finally be achieved."

This reference to the Irish negotiations when read by the Lord Chancellor was noted by the gathering of Peers and Commoners and must have found an echo in the minds of all who heard them, for these qualities were certainly never more necessary.

In the Commons today Joseph Devlin raised a question about the conferring of new powers on the Ulster Parliament by Order in Council. Mr. Lloyd George replied that the Home Rule act provided that these powers should be conferred. This made no difference to the Irish Conference, he said, because there was no proposition at the conference that any of the powers should be taken away from the Ulster Parliament.

Ulster Expected to Consider Terms.

It does not appear that the Northern Ireland Cabinet will not give fair consideration to the Government proposals. A spokesman for the Ulster Cabinet said today:

"In fairness to ourselves we ask that there shall be no broad general assumptions on this or that point which may be of vital importance. We must know either now or later to what extent certain definite suggestions have the actual support of the members of the British Cabinet. We come here to find the general assumption that the Government and the Sinn Fein representatives have tentatively agreed to certain proposals for a settlement which we are to be asked to accept.

"We ask is this fair. Loyally in the interests of peace we abide by and try to work the Home Rule Act of 1920, which we never sought. While we are doing so the Sinn Fein representatives are invited to confer with the British Government, a step to which not the slightest exception could be taken; but is it just that when we are also asked to join in the conference we should find an atmosphere created by which the onus is to be thrown on us of accepting or rejecting certain proposals made beforehand as finding favor with those, the cause of whose presence here was that they refused to accept the very settlement which we have honestly striven to abide by?

"No, it is not just.

"That peace will ensue we are willing to confer and are about to do so, but it must be on the understanding that no priori basis has been reached. We go to the conference chamber on the same footing as other parties to examine equally with them the suggestions made without an earlier bias one way or the other, with a view of reaching, if possible, a peaceful settlement."

Mr. Lloyd George has by no means given up hope. Replying in the House of Commons tonight to questions raised on breaches of truce, he said:

"I still hope that the Irish negotiation will prove successful."

Chamberlain Appeals to Unionists.

At a time when there is much talk of disunion in the Unionist Party over the Irish proposals and a likelihood of Mr. Bonar Law emerging from retirement to lead a revolt against the Government's policy, Austen Chamberlain, as leader of the Unionist Party in the Commons, has issued a message to the members of that party appealing for patience and confidence. He says he understands how real and widespread is the anxiety felt in Unionist circles as to the outcome of the Irish negotiations, but that it is not possible for him as one of the negotiators to deal with the "daily crop of rumors and suggestions to which this public interest and anxiety give rise, or to make disclosures which at the present stage of the negotiations must of necessity be partial and incomplete."

Lloyd George Is Still Hopeful.

LONDON, Nov. 10 (Associated Press).—Prime Minister Lloyd George expressed confidence in the House of Commons today that the Sinn Fein negotiators were doing all they could to see that the terms of the truce in Ireland were observed.

Answering questions on the Irish situation, Mr. Lloyd George reiterated his hope that the Irish negotiations would prove successful. With regard to violations of the truce, as to which he also was queried, he said:

"I view with grave concern breaches of the truce that occur in Ireland. They are at once taken up through the machinery established for the purpose, and we ar esatisfied that the representatives of the Sinn Fein with whom we are negotiating are doing their best to secure observance of the terms of the truce."

In reply to a question as to whether adequate arrangements had been made for the protection of Ulster and the loyal population of Southern Ireland in the event of a breakdown of the negotiations, Mr. Lloyd George replied:

"It has been agreed that if the negotiations unhappily should break down there would be a reasonable notice of the termination of the truce, and his Majesty's Government would, of course, do all in their power to protect life and property. It is not desirable to make any statement regarding measures the Government have taken and are prepared to take, but that contingency, I hope, will not arise."

This statement was greeted by enthusiastic cheers.

KING PROROGUES PARLIAMENT TO JAN. 30

LONDON, Nov. 10 (Associated Press).—Parliament was prorogued tonight until Jan. 30 without ceremony, except the reading of the King's speech by the Speaker and the customary procession of the members to shake hands with the Chair.

The King in his speech made another appeal similar to that which he addressed to the people in opening the Northern Parliament of Ireland, to exercise patience and moderation with the object of establishing friendship and co-operation between "my people of that country."

King Reviews Events of Year.

The King's speech follows:

"My Lords and Members of the House of Commons—The session of Parliament which closes today has been marked by events of great importance to the welfare of the British Empire and the peace of the world. It is not yet possible to say that peace is firmly established in Europe, and it must be long before the world can recover from the strain of the sacrifices of war, but good progress has been made toward a solution of the utmost critical problems of home and foreign affairs."

After referring with satisfaction to the work of the Imperial Conference, particularly its deliberations with respect to foreign policy, questions relating to the Pacific and the Far East and the Empire's obligations under the Treaty of Versailles and other peace treaties, the King said:

"I am happy to know that on all these issues my Governments here and overseas are in perfect accord. The conference gave serious attention to the defense of the Empire and the maintenance of an adequate measure of sea power; it was unanimously decided that the naval strength of the Empire should be equal to that of any other power."

Brief references followed to the satisfactory progress made by Germany in the execution of the financial and disarmament obligations under the Treaty of Versailles, the settlement of the trouble in Upper Silesia and the League Council's Silesian award. Upon the latter subject the King said:

"There is reason to hope that the recommendations of the award will be loyally carried out by the two parties principally concerned and that a peaceful and honorable settlement will result."

The establishment of peace between the allied powers and Hungary by the treaty signed at Trianon and ratified in July was referred to, and the King continued:

"The efforts by my Government at the allied conference in March and renewed in June to establish peace in the Near East were in each case rendered fruitless by a renewed outbreak of hostilities between the Greek and Turkish forces in Anatolia. It is my earnest desire to see these hostilities followed by an early and just peace, and my Government is prepared, in conjunction with their allies, to take the first opportunity of furthering this.

Wants Arms Conference a Success.

"I have followed with great interest the steps taken by the President of the United States to promote the reduction of expenditure in armaments—an object which commands the fullest sympathy of my Government. It was in this spirit that my Government gladly accepted the invitation extended by the United States Government to the conference on disarmament to be held in Washington. It is my earnest hope that the labors of the conference will be crowned with success."

Noting that the negotiations for a settlement in Egypt have not yet been concluded, the King referred to the Eastern tour of the Prince of Wales, adding:

"I pray that his visit may still further strengthen the ties of affection which have for so long linked my house with the Princes and peoples of India. Upon the conclusion of his Indian tour he will proceed to visit the great and friendly Empire of Japan."

With reference to trade depression, the King said:

"I learn with satisfaction that it, nevertheless, is anticipated that while the estimated surplus for the redemption of the debt will not be realized, the financial year will end without a deficit on the budget. Our debts, however, are great, and our taxation heavy and burdensome to industry, and the revenue cannot be maintained on the scale of the last three years. It is accordingly of vital importance to the financial stability of the country that the expenditure should be still further restricted in every department of life, both public and private.

"The Government will continue to take advantage of every possible means to achieve this essential object in the field of public expenditure, and I confidently rely upon my people in their own practice to support the efforts of my Ministers."

The King discussed the subject of Ireland as follows:

"The situation in Ireland still causes me great anxiety. I earnestly exhort the leaders of all parties in Ireland, and all those in whose hands lies the power to influence the negotiations and discussions now proceeding, to exercise patience and moderation with the object of establishing friendship and cooperation between my people of that country.

"It is my firm belief, as it is my earnest prayer, that with forbearance and good-will, and with an honest resolve to tread the paths of oblivion and forgiveness, enduring peace will finally be achieved."

Referring to the coal strike, he said: "The past Summer has been notable for the occurrence of the most serious industrial conflict which ever menaced the prosperity of the realm. I take pride in the calm and serene spirit with which the trials of the coal stoppage were met by my people and the freedom from strife and violence which characterized its course. This dispute, unhappily, was aggravated by the adverse effect of the sudden world-wide trade depression which has inflicted upon the industries of this country the most grievous experience in their history."

The measures recently passed by Parliament for dealing with the problem of unemployment and the revival of trade were reviewed, and the King continued:

"The peaceful settlement of many difficult disputes by mutual negotiation between the employers and the work people, together with some indications of the revival of trade, encourage my hope that the worst may be over and that the state of employment may show from now onward a steady, if slow, improvement. But the position is still full of anxiety, and my Ministers will continue to devote to this problem vigilant care.

"It is not, however, so much to acts of Parliament as to the proved good sense of employers and operatives working together for the promotion of their common interests that I look for the restoration of trade and prosperity."

Concluding with an allusion to the difficult financial conditions, the King said:

"The imperative need for the avoidance of all fresh burdens, and the further curtailment of expenditure, have required the modification of some measures already passed and the postponement to happier times of the completion of other reforms. I pray that the blessing of Almighty God may rest upon your labors."

Questioned in the Commons this afternoon, Premier Lloyd George said:

"There does not exist any military or naval agreement, understanding or arrangement of any sort between England and Japan not rising from the terms of the Anglo-Japanese Treaty."

THINKS PEACE IS POSSIBLE.

Lloyd George's Organ Says All Ulster's Difficulties Can Be Overcome.

Copyright, 1921, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The Daily Chronicle, Mr. Lloyd George's organ, in an editorial on Ulster's case, says:

"We have these data. The Sinn Fein leaders are believed to insist if they came into a dominion scheme that there must be dominion of Ireland with an all-Ireland Parliament. The Prime Minister stated yesterday in the House of Commons that there was no proposal to abrogate any of the Ulster Parliament's existing powers. It follows that the scheme, so far as Ulster is affected, must affect her in respect not of those powers which last year's act conferred on the Belfast Parliament but of those which it reserved to the Parliament at Westminster. The natural inference is that it proposes to transfer these later powers, which include the power of the purse, from the Parliament at Westminster to the Ireland Dominion Parliament.

"Now at what points might a boot so shaped be thought to pinch Ulster's foot? Principally, we think, at two. First, it would deprive Ulster of her existing representation at Westminster, the share in the great historic British Parliament to which she is deeply and proudly attached. Secondly, it would place her under an all Ireland Parliament possessing the power of the purse—a decisive power which an anti-Ulster majority might be conceived of as using to oppress her people and to coerce them into surrendering their local liberties.

"There is a measure of reality in both objections, but we believe that if faced fairly they could both be overcome. It is impossible not to sympathize with Ulster's reluctance to lose her membership of the Westminster Parliament. 'It is a good deal,' she may say to Great Britain, 'to ask me to enter the household of your Sinn Fein ex-enemies, but it is intolerable that you should also kick me out of your own.'

"The relations, particularly economic relations, between Ulster and Britain are extraordinarily close in many respects—far closer than those between Belfast and Dublin—and it certainly would seem strange that the only political channel through which the great business community of Northern Ireland could reach us on this side should be the Colonial Office, and that only through a Dublin Government, of which the Ulster members of an all-Ireland Parliament might be a permanent minority and find themselves quasi-permanently excluded.

"But need all this be? Is symmetry, is 'tidiness' so indispensable in a Constitution that practical considerations need always be sacrificed to it, and, if not, why should it not be arranged that Ulster should keep her representation at Westminster and take her place in an Irish Dominion none the less?

"Might not the Sinn Fein in return for securing Ulster adhesion to the Dublin Parliament cast a conciliatory eye on the principle of representation at Westminster? In framing such a solution we should have to tolerate some degree of constitutional anomaly, but peace might be cheap at the price. At any rate, this avenue toward a settlement deserves to be fully explored.

"Similarly, the fear about the power of the purse ought not to prove insuperable."

In connection with the many rumors as to Bonar Law's intentions to throw in his lot with the Ulster leaders, The Westminster Gazette mentions the name of Balfour. It says:

"The rumor which points to him as a leading figure in the reorganized ranks of the Tory Party is persistent, although for the moment, being in America, he is scarcely in the immediate foreground."

The Westminster Gazette expresses the opinion that the negotiations between Lloyd George and Craig may last a considerable time, it being obviously the desire of the Government to test the feeling of the Unionist Party at their annual meeting at Liverpool next Thursday, before matters go too far.

The Daily Express says that Ulster depends for support on the Unionist Party and must wait until Thursday to discover how far she can rely on it.

According to The London Times the Ulster Ministers will not make their final reply to Lloyd George until they have returned to Belfast and consulted the Ulster Parliament.

FOCH SEES INGOTS ROLLED INTO PLATES

GIVES MEDALS TO SCHOOLS

Receives Two More Honorary Degrees and Sends Armistice Day Message to American Legion.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 10.—They couldn't throw ticker tape and confetti out of office buildings fast enough when Marshal Foch passed through the business district of Pittsburgh this afternoon on his way to review an automobile procession of wounded veterans he had sent into battle in France.

The flying paper mingled with the puffs of steam from the many industrial plants of the city, while the crowd that paid no attention to a bitter cold Autumn day lined the streets twenty deep and behaved in the same manner as in the half dozen cities that the allied Generalissimo has visited on his 3,000-mile circuit through the Middle West to and from Washington. Pittsburgh, that boasts of having supplied over half of the ammunition to France, gave Marshal Foch a busy time in his twelve-hour visit before leaving tonight for Washington and tomorrow's ceremonies at the Arlington National Cemetery.

The Marshal inspected the Homestead plant of the Carnegie Steel Company and watched powerful rolling mills transform white-hot ingots into steel plates, much as a farmer's wife uses a rolling pin on pie crust. Next he was taken to Pittsburgh University and was awarded honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws by Pittsburgh University and Duquesne University. He heard the magnificent organ at Carnegie Institute of Technology, and then Mayor Babcock took him to luncheon at the William Penn Hotel.

Later the Marshal led a parade through the business section of the city and motored to Forbes Field, where he presented a medal to school children assembled there for their presentation of a farm school to French orphans. His day concluded with a civic dinner at the Penn Hotel before boarding his special train early in the evening for Washington.

"Mighty Good Thing to Have."

"This is a mighty good thing to have when you are in trouble," Marshal Foch remarked to Paul Didier, interpreter and representative of French citizens of Pittsburgh, as he gazed at the dim outlines of countless smoking chimneys on the boulevard above the city, the "workshop of the world," as speakers at tonight's dinner boasted to him.

After the seventh and eighth LL. D. degrees he had received in this country had been conferred upon him this morning, Marshal Foch was driven to Carnegie Institute of Technology. After visiting the museum and inspecting the skeletons of pre-historic monsters, he was taken to the music hall, where an organ recital of French classical music was interrupted by college cheers.

"After all the horrors of war I have seen," he told the Carnegie students, "it is particularly gratifying to me to be in this centre of America and of manufacture, art and science, and to see those things which we have again taken up in the interest of civilization. I congratulate you upon being present among the arts and sciences while bringing forth this royal march of culture."

Visits Wounded Veterans.

Learning that several veterans were patients in West Penn Hospital, Marshal Foch insisted that his program be extended to include a visit there. Wounded and gassed men in wheel-chairs formed a semi-circle around the French Generalissimo, who shook hands with each one and, through an interpreter, spoke a word of comfort to each man.

"I am glad," he said, on leaving the hospital, "to have had the opportunity of seeing once again men who helped win the war."

The Marshal addressed a letter to the children and school teachers of Pittsburgh, thanking them for their presentation of the Pittsburgh farm to the war orphans of France in 1918. At Forbes Field this afternoon, the Marshal delivered medals for each of the 500 schools in the district that contributed to the fund. Since there was no time at today's ceremony to distribute the medals, they will be mailed later with copies of Marshal Foch's letter, which reads, in part:

"Your kind gift has contributed to make happier the lives of the youth of France whose fathers died for the cause of liberty. Be assured that your generous deed will never be forgotten by us. The beautiful spirit that lies back of your gift has touched our hearts and made us, through your timely help to our orphaned children, your devoted friends forever."

Sends Armistice Day Message.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 10.—Declaring that Armistice Day should be made sacred throughout the civilized world, Marshal Foch gave out tonight a message to the American Legion, a message which, he said, applied to every one who took part in the World War, or whose relatives served in it.

"It is out of sacrifice and suffering that the greatest things in life grow," said the message. "No man ever gave up part of himself in a great cause but that his sacrifice was rewarded a hundredfold in moral and spiritual blessings.

"Our hearts pour out in sympathy today to the mothers, wives, fathers, sisters, brothers of those brave soldiers who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War. Our prayers go up in unison for those men and at the same time we worship their memory.

"Armistice day, the eleventh of November, should be made sacred throughout the entire civilized world. It is the day when we think of the noble sacrifice made by the hero dead, of the brilliant records of duty all performed left on the field of battle by the wounded, of the spirit of patriotism and bravery shown by those who, fortunately, escaped shot and shell.

"On this day let us think only of the great cause for which the Allies fought—a splendid cause, one that led to victory and peace. And in thinking of the great cause for which we fought, let us think also of a bond of eternal peace, so that the people of the world may work and rebuild and find happiness in industrial pursuits, with no thought of future conflicts.

"God helping, peace will reign throughout the world."

MAILS IN TRANSIT UNDER ARMS TODAY

$20,000 HOLD-UP REWARD

Additional $5,000 Reveals That Four Instead of Three Bandits Took Part in Leonard St. Robbery.

Sixty-four marines, the first of a contingent of 265 selected to guard valuable mails in this city, will report at the General Post Office in Eighth Avenue at Thirty-second Street this morning. The marines will be under the command of Captain Norman C. Bates and will be drawn from the marine unit in the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The additional 201 marines will report to Captain Bates at the General Post Office tomorrow morning.

The marines to report this morning will be assigned to guard mail trucks, railroad terminals and post office stations throughout the city. Each mail truck will carry two marines, one beside the chauffeur, who also will be armed, and another inside with an armed clerk.

In addition to the marine guard on each mail truck in the city a motorcycle convoy of armed postal employes will accompany each vehicle in trips between Post Office stations and railroad terminals. The guarding of valuable mails in transit between the General Post Office and the City Hall and other Post Offices in the vicinity of the financial district will be facilitated within the next ten days by four armored mail trucks ordered by Postmaster Edward M. Morgan. The cars can be unlocked only at their destinations. The marines have been ordered to shoot to kill in the event of an attack on the mails, it was said at the General Post Office.

Through a circular issued by the Post Office Department yesterday it became known that four men were connected with the robbery of $2,000,000 in money, jewelry and securities from the mail truck in Leonard Street, near Broadway, on the night of Oct. 24, last. On the day following the hold-up it was announced that a reward of $15,000 had been offered by the Goverpment for the conviction of the three men who held up Frank Haveranck, the chauffeur of the mail truck, but the circular offers $20,000, or $5,000 for each of four bandits sought.

Forty thousand copies of the circulars were distributed to banks, brokers, Post Offices and Police Departments throughout the country. In addition to the securities already reported in THE TIMES as stolen, the circular revealed the following as missing:

$75,000 FURS GONE IN THREE ROBBERIES

Eighty Coats Are Stolen From Store in Seventy-second Street, Just Off Broadway.

A series of daring fur robberies, in which the thieves got $75,000, and a hold-up in Brooklyn which resulted in the arrest of two bandits stood out among crimes reported in the city yesterday.

The biggest fur robbery was in the store of S. Schiffman & Co., 140 West Seventy-second Street, just before dawn Wednesday morning. Five young men rode up to the place in a high-powered automobile, and, after snipping a lock on the main door, piled eighty fur coats in the machine and sped east to Broadway, where they disappeared as several watchman from a burglar protective company appeared.

Cohen, Greenburg & Co., furriers, on the twelfth floor of 134 West Twenty-ninth Street, reported to the police of the West Thirtieth Street Station that burglars robbed them of $20,000 worth of mink and seal furs early Sunday morning. As in the other two fur robberies, the robbers disregarded a burglar alarm in the place when they smashed down a door leading to the office. Watchmen responded to the alarm ten minutes after the robbers entered.

Theodore Burns, manager, was alone in the Federal Grocery Store at 433 Throop Avenue, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon when two young men entered, posing as prospective purchasers. As Burns turned around to get a package for them from a shelf the supposed customers slid up beside him and covered him with pistols. One of the bandits then took $29.25 in bills and coins from the cash register. The robbers, after gagging Burns with a handkerchief, bound his arms and legs with a wire.

little Auxiliary Bishop New York ever had." "I will say a few brief words of the gratitude I feel in my heart," he said. "I do not think any one could stand here as I have done and not appreciate the enthusiasm shown by you, even in those days of the Eighteenth Amendment. It is refreshing that you can arouse a spirit even if you can't take it."

"I do not realize even yet that I am a Bishop," said Mgr. Dunn, "and I say that with some fear that the Archbishop may take me to task for it. One of my friends said on being told I was nominated for Bishop, 'Oi, Oi—and how does he get that way?' I want to tell you, my dear friend, that I 'got that way' through my chief, our beloved Archbishop of New York.

"It was not until the great war came that our order of the Knights of Columbus gave evidence of the potentialities that were within its ranks. It is now an entirely different organization. I say with all humility that I thank his Grace for his great kindness in permitting me to retain the chaplaincy of this chapter of the Knights of Columbus."

William J. Larkin, Supreme Director of the Knights of Columbus, referred to Archbishop Hayes as "the most illustrious member of the American hierarchy." At this the diners applauded, arose and saluted Archbishop Hayes. He responded by doffing his red cap.

Ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith, who received a rousing reception, said, in part: "Brother Knights, now that the smoke and battle of last Tuesday has passed away, we are sitting down arranging details. The Archbishop came from City Hall Place and the former Governor came from Oliver Street, so we are mending our fences and proceeding up the east side." Mr. Smith referred to the fact that Bishop Dunn during all the years of his priesthood had been attached to the Church of St. John the Evangelist, First Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street.

"About a year ago I came down from Albany to attend some public function and I met our Archbishop. I noticed he looked very tired, I said to him:

"'Your Grace, when are you going to have an assistant? Is there anything the Legislature can do about it?'

"The Archbishop replied 'No,' that he was 'pegging along,' and that he was willing to wait and work alone, because he felt if he did wait patiently that in time he would get a good assistant."

"- - - shall not have died in vain"

THREE years ago this morning, the last trigger was pressed—the last lanyard pulled.

And a great shout went from the lips and a great load went from the hearts of the sons and daughters of men.

There were ears that did not hear that shout; there were hearts that had given the last full measure of devotion and were forever still.

Today one of them is laid at rest in Arlington—nameless but with an eternal name.

And it is more than a beautiful symbol that the envoys who cast a sod upon his grave meet tomorrow to carry on the task which he began for us in France—which may mean the ending of war forever.

And in this work each one of us must bear his part—for our liberty and our faith are, in reality, only the finest fruits of the nation's labor—not to be cheaply attained.

WE PAUSE TODAY upon the threshold of this solemn occasion to bow down our heads before the tomb of him who typifies the thousands who have suffered that the world may live again in peace. It must not be said that we have forgotten the blood they have shed, nor that we are wanting in appreciation of the ideals for which they fought. It behooves this Nation to love and cherish through the long, dim years of the future the memory of those who suffered their young lives to be extinguished in the cause of world democracy and lasting peace. We hope that God may give to the assembled ambassadors of the nations of the earth the vision to see, and the will to execute, an International Disarmament pact that will assure to the world at large, for all time—a glorious, lasting PEACE.

TAMMANY PICKING MEN FOR CITY JOBS

Julius Miller and C. F. Murphy Confer on Reorganizing Borough President's Office.

$50,000 IN PATRONAGE

LaGuardia, Praised by Hylan and Hulbert, May Get an Appointment—School Program.

Plans for reorganization of the office of the Borough President of Manhattan which will give Tammany control of about $50,000 a year in patronage are under way as a result of the election. Julius Miller, who will succeed Henry H. Curran as Borough President, conferred yesterday with Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, it was said, regarding the appointments he is to make.

There are nine positions in the Borough President's office which are not protected by the Civil Service, as follows: Commissioner of Public Works, $7,500; Assistant Commissioner of Public Works, $6,500; Secretary to the Borough, $6,000; Secretary to the President, $5,000; Secretary to the Commissioner of Public Works, $4,040; Confidential Inspector, $3,500; Superintendent of Buildings, $7,500; Secretary to Superintendent of Buildings, $3,500; stenographer, $1,872.

A reorganization of the office of President of the Board of Aldermen will also provide for more jobs for the faithful. The patronage consists of assistant to the President, $6,000; one examiner at $4,500 and another at $3,800; secretary to the President, $3,140; stenographer, $2,100; clerk, $2,160, and messenger, $1,823.

It was rumored yesterday that the retiring President of the board, F. H. LaGuardia, would receive an appointment under Mayor Hylan, and this was borne out by comments on Mr. LaGuardia's work, made at a meeting of the Sinking Fund Commission by the Mayor and Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert, who was elected to succeed Mr. LaGuardia.

Mayor Praises LaGuardia.

"Commissioner Hulbert," said the Mayor at the meeting, "I want to say that if we have as good a President of the Board of Aldermen, and there is no reason why we should not, for the next four years as President LaGuardia has been for the last two years, it will reflect great credit on the people of New York. In the last two years President LaGuardia has put duty above party politics in every instance."

"I want to say," replied Commissioner Hulbert, "that everything that has been said about President LaGuardia is true. I also want to say that I found President LaGuardia the same in Congress as he has been here."

"I am under great obligations to President LaGuardia for his stand on home rule and five-cent fare issues," continued the Mayor. "When the Republican Party is reorganized and men like LaGuardia are given a prominent place in the councils of the party, the party will go back to the people."

Turning to Mr. LaGuardia, the Mayor added:

"I am saying this very frankly, Mr. President. Your work in this commission and in the Board of Estimate has been in the interest of the people of the city."

LaGuardia merely smiled his thanks.

Anning S. Prall, President of the Board of Education, in a statement last night said that many false and malicious statements regarding the schools of the city were made during the campaign, and he promised to push plans for new school houses and repairs to present buildings.

In his statement Mr. Prall said:

"In no uncertain way the people have indicated their confidence in the public school program of the Board of Education. Supported as it has been by Mayor Hylan and the majority members of the Board of Estimate, this program will be carried out without any delay, as it has been in the past. We shall continue to push ahead with the $75,000,000 program for new buildings and they will be opened as rapidly as possible. We shall continue to carry forward the extensive program for the repair of buildings. This work is going steadily forward.

"Unquestionably the most flagrant and unwarranted misrepresentation was that of fire violations to which widespread publicity was given without any attempt being made by political candidates or press to ascertain the seriousness of the reported violations. Fire Chief Kenlon, who I am sure has the confidence of the entire city, has assured me that the children are as safe or safer in the public school buildings than they are in their own homes."

President La Guardia denied yesterday that he was being considered for appointment as Street Cleaning Commissioner in the event of the retirement of Commissioner John P. Leo.

Acting District Attorney Joab Banton, in looking over his telegrams of congratulation yesterday, found the following from his Republican rival for the office of District Attorney, John Kirkland Clark:

"I send my sincere congratulations on the opportunity the voters have given you to run the great public service and extend my best wishes for success in the work."

Another Democratic Alderman.

Another Alderman was added to the Democratic list yesterday when a rechecking of the votes cast in the Twenty-fourth Aldermanic District showed that Charles J. McGillick, Democrat, had won over his Republican rival, Henry J. Cushen, by a plurality of 3,737.

A rechecking of the vote cast for Assemblyman in the Second District of Kings shows that William Brown, Democrat, was elected over Edmund A. Alexander, Republican, by only 13 votes. Mr. Alexander may demand a recount.

Thomas O'Reilly, the Democratic candidate for Alderman in the Eleventh Aldermanic District, contended yesterday that he was elected over his Republican opponent, Sullivan, by a plurality of 111. Returns thus far show a plurality of 5 for Sullivan.

Governor Miller, who came to the city yesterday to attend the Health Centre celebration, would not discuss the election results.

"As many inferences may be drawn as there are viewpoints," was all he would say.

BLAMES GOV. MILLER FOR COALITION DEFEAT

Clark Says Voters Felt Transit Commission Was Designed to Work Out Higher Fare.

Analyzing the local Democratic victory on Tuesday, John Kirkland Clark, defeated candidate for District Attorney, yesterday attributed the defeat of the Coalition ticket to local resentment against Governor Miller. Speaking at a meeting of the Women's Republican Committee of One Hundred in the Hotel Plaza, Clark said he personally subscribed to the view held by nine out of every ten voters here that the Transit Commission had been "put over" with the idea of working out a higher fare.

"The people of New York do not like Governor Miller's trend of mind," Clark said. "Last year his opponent had 300,000 over him in this city, and this year 40,000 votes were added to that number. The people in this city have been brought up with the idea of conducting their own affairs. They resent the appointment of a body with powers to alter or abrogate contracts to which the city through its officials had been a part. In my opinion, the people resented that bitterly when they went to the polls on Tuesday.

"There may have been other desires than the idea of working out a higher fare. It is my personal belief and the belief of nine out of every ten voters in the city that the Transit Commission was put over to work out a higher fare. I believe in a five-cent fare and so do most of the citizens hereabouts. While Governor Miller has been an able Judge and is a charming man, I disagree with him fundamentally on many of his theories. I feel that more than any other single thing the defeat of the Coalition ticket was due to the transit question."

Clark evoked applause among his listeners when he said that part of the blame for the Coalition defeat could be attributed to the failure of the Republican organization to get out the vote. The county ticket could have been elected had the party leaders worked, he said.

Clark also criticised the Republican Meyer committee for making a pre-election investigation. He said the few annoying instances of graft disclosed had no outstanding appeal to the popular imagination.

"I do not believe Hylan has ever taken a cent of money, although I think he has been guilty of political practices which should not be countenanced," Clark added. "Nothing was pinned on him."

Plans were discussed at the meeting for working for a Republican Governor again next year. Mrs. Rosalie Lowe Whitney and Miss Mary L. Woods spoke on that subject.

ANDREWS'S VICTORY GROWS

More Up-State Returns Also Reject Amendment 1.

Complete returns from a number of up-State counties last night added to the plurality which William S. Andrews, candidate for Judge of the Court of Appeals, received over his Democratic opponent, Townsend Scudder.

The counties heard from showed the following results: Allegany—Andrews 7,139, Scudder 1,946; Suffolk—Andrews 17,188, Scudder 12,615; Onedia—Andrews 24,691, Scudder 15,540; Chenango—Andrews 8,293, Scudder 3,165; Tioga—Andrews 4,289, Scudder 1,375; Genesee—Andrews 5,033, Scudder 1,577.

Complete returns from up-State counties also added materially to the vote against the constitutional amendment exempting soldiers from civil service rules. The vote on the amendment in Cattaraugus County was: For, 5,618; against, 7,002; Tioga: For, 1,711; against, 2,707; Livingston: For, 2,875; against, 3,650.

GEORGE RORKE EXONERATED

No Evidence to Connect Him With Irish Gun-Running Plot.

George Gordon Rorke, who was placed under $3,000 bail by United States Commissioner Hitchcock on Sept. 26 on a charge of having been concerned in an attempted shipment of 495 riot guns to the Sinn Fein in Ireland, was released yesterday from all further responsibility in the matter and his bail was discharged. Commissioner Hitchcock stated that this action was due to lack of evidence.

At the time of his arrest Government officials said that a Federal Grand Jury at Trenton, N. J., was inquiring into the alleged conspiracy because the riot guns were found on board the steamship East Side while she lay at a wharf in Hoboken. But nothing came of this inquiry to link Rorke with the alleged effort to disturb the peace of Great Britain.

TAXED $1,635,797 AS A BOOTLEGGER

income returns and that similar action would be taken against all other alleged bootleggers who failed to make returns of their income.

Eighteen Dry Agents Dropped.

Eighteen Federal prohibition agents were dropped from the service in this city yesterday, it was learned last night. No charges, it was said, were preferred against the men and no explanation was given as to why they were let out. Acting Federal Prohibition Director E. C. Yellowley was in Washington yesterday and in his absence there was no one at prohibition headquarters here who had authority to give out any information concerning the dismissals.

This brings the total number of agents and other employes let out since Mr. Yellowley became acting director about two months ago up to about fifty. In announcing the other dismissals Mr. Yellowley said that the employes had been dropped because of general unsatisfactory service, which, in some cases, included the receipt of money for making false reports in connection with investigations of alleged fraudulent wholesale drug stores.

It was considered likely that the wholesale dismissals, effective yesterday, were made in preparation for the new administration under Ralph M. Day, who has been named as Federal Prohibition Director for this State. Mr. Day expects to take office about Dec. 1, according to Mr. Yellowley. John S. Parsons, who has been named as Chief Enforcement Agent for the State under Mr. Day, is expected to take office this week. He conferred with Mr. Yellowley on Wednesday. Whether the dismissal of the agents resulted from that conference could not be learned.

Hart Before Grand Jury.

Judge Harold L. Hart, former Federal Prohibition Agent for this State, was a witness before the Federal Grand Jury yesterday in the investigation into the alleged bootlegging situation in this city. Judge Hart was in the Grand Jury room for nearly two hours, and was questioned by Assistant United States District Attorney Maxwell S. Mattuck.

Judge Hart was questioned about withdrawal permits which had been stolen from his office, and which were used after his signature had been forged, in an attempt to withdraw about $7,000,000 worth of liquors from bonded warehouses. Judge Hart was asked to describe in detail his method of issuing withdrawal permits.

It was said that Judge Hart probably would be called before the Grand Jury again before the investigation is completed. Miss Lotta W—s., formerly verification clerk in the director's office, and who made her home at the Hotel Ansonia, is also under subpoena to appear before the Grand Jury, Mr. Mattuck said.

The Federal Grand Jury has returned several indictments against alleged fraudulent wholesale drug firms and individuals, charging violations of the Volstead act in the use of forged and stolen liquor withdrawal permits. The permits were stolen from the office of the Director during Judge Hart's incumbency and most of the forgeries also were committed during that period.

A report of the work of the Grand Jury is expected to be made to Judge Van Fleet next week. A large number of witnesses have been examined.

Henry Werkheimer of 208 West 104th Street, owner of a wholesale liquor store at 835 Amsterdam Avenue, was held in $500 bail yesterday by Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan in the West Side Court on a charge of violating the Mullan-Gage law. Patrolman Martin Lawlor alleged that he bought a drink of gin from Werkheimer, for which he paid $1.

Who Can Ever Forget That Day, 1918, When

in the early morning, the news swept through the city that the great German forces had turned their backs to us, silently and quietly, taking the first step to end the terrible war?

The whole United States danced for joy when the world believed that its prayers had been answered, and that the Armistice, as arranged by Marshal Foch, had been signed.

That 11th hour, of the 11th day, of the 11th month, of 1918, will ever be remembered as one of the great hours of the world's history.

While it was reported the world over as a humiliation for Germany, it certainly was a wise, courageous confession to make, that they had ceased to fight for a fruitless cause. It was a noble confession to make, that they were tired of the war and would not go any further.

Was it not Queen Louise who, after the Battle of Jena, went with a rose in her hand to plead with Napoleon to stop a war?

Would that there might be a complete disarmament of armies and navies in every country and that the world might hold soldiers of peace only!

Would that the grave of the unknown hero, around which the President and a distinguished host will today be standing, might be the last of the graves of unknown soldiers!

Right well we may pause more than two minutes and say a prayer that the causes of war shall be, henceforth, considered and settled in courts of wisdom and patience with a determination to reduce the high taxes and dangers sure to attend standing armies and ships of war.

(Signed) John Wanamaker

COHEN SWOONS AFTER TESTIMONY

DENIES NAMING CALDER

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 10.—Bursting into tears as he left the witness stand this evening after two hours' grilling by his own attorney, Louis Cohen, President of the Tunnel Trading Company of New York, who is being tried in the United States court here on a charge of attempting to bribe prohibition enforcement officers, swooned and fell into the arms of Deputy Marshal McHugh before he had reached his seat. Nervous and broken, he is under the care of a physician at his downtown hotel.

Cohen had just finished a vehement denial of the charge, made by Government witnesses, that he had offered to them a bribe of $5,000 at a meeting in the Hotel Navarre in New York City and had declared that the suggestion of a bribe had come from them. He testified that Captain Robert Flora, head of the local enforcement staff, and Fred Coutts, former Cleveland dry officer, pointed out to him at the hotel conference that 400 cases of whisky belonging to him, but held up in Cincinnati by their orders, were worth $71,000, and offered to release the liquor for shipment if he would go "half and half" with them. Both stressed the fact that he would lose the entire shipment if he did not agree to their terms, the defendant testified.

It was then, he continued, that he agreed to come to Cincinnati to arrange the details of the deal. He admitted paying over $5,000 and substantiated other statements made as to circumstances surrounding his arrest at the Flora home. He said that he did not have more than $60 or $70 during the conference at the New York hotel, where, it is charged, he first offered the $5,000 bribe.

Cohen's face was haggard and drawn during the entire time he was on the witness stand and he appeared weak and nervous.

"This is the first time I have ever been arrested," he said, in a broken voice, as he completed his testimony. "I have never been in trouble before."

Sobs shook his drooping shoulders and he staggered uncertainly as he was dismissed from the witness stand and started toward his chair. Suddenly he reeled and fell, Marshal McHugh catching him before he reached the floor. Cohen was carried into the jury room. A physician was called and revived him after a few moments.

Cohen's brother and other friends who are here from New York to attend the trial had crowded into the jury room and the pale defendant was turned over to them. It is thought he will be able to reappear in court after resting over Armistice Day.

In the earlier part of his testimony Cohen heatedly denied telling Captain Flora and Mr. Counts that Senator Calder of New York was his friend or behind him in any way. He said that he had never met the Senator and that all alleged statements by him to the contrary were false.

The testimony of Counts formed the end of the case for the Government. He testified that at the Hotel Navarre conference Cohen drew $5,000 out of his pocket and offered it to Flora and himself, but that they refused it.

In the talks they had with him in New York, Counts said, Cohen claimed intimate acquaintance with prominent officials.

ZIONISTS ARRIVE TODAY.

Jabotinsky, Organizer of Legion Under Allenby, Their Leader.

Vladimir Jabotinsky, organizer of the Jewish Legion, which served under General Allenby in Palestine, will arrive on the Olympic today with a delegation of European Zionists, headed by Nahum Sokolow, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the World's Zionist Organization. Mr. Jabotinsky sailed in place of Chaim N. Bialik, the Hebrew poet, who was compelled to cancel his trip. The other members of the delegation include Professor Otto Warburg and Alexander Goldstein.

The visiting Zionists, Samuel Untermyer, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Keren Hayeson, said yesterday, will be honored at a dinner at the Hotel Astor Sunday evening. Among the hosts will be Mr. Untermyer, Nathan Straus, Abram I. Elkus, Louis Marshall, Adolph Lewisohn, Samuel C. Lamport, Louis Lipsky, Judge Otto A. Rosalsky, Dr. Samuel Schulman, Israel Unterberg and Franklin Simon.

LENA CLARKE INDICTED.

Special to The New York Times.

ORLANDO, Fla., Nov. 10.—Lena M. T. Clarke, former postmistress at West Palm Beach, faces trial for murder in the first degree, as a result of the shooting of Fred A. Miltimore, formerly a coworker with her in the Palm Beach Post Office. The indictment was ordered yesterday and returned by the Grand Jury today in the Circuit Court. R. W. Paterson, the chauffeur who drove the car that brought Miss Clarke here the day Miltimore was slain, was indicted as an accessory before the fact.

Miss Clarke was not surprised when the indictment was read, saying she had read in a dream the headlines in a Tampa paper telling of her indictment.

Builder Is Fined $500.

Joseph Bova, a contractor, of 1,366 Sixty-fifth Street, Brooklyn, was convicted in the Court of Special Sessions yesterday and paid $500 for maintaining a public nuisance in permitting a low grade of concrete to be used in the construction of the foundation of a building which later collapsed while in the course of construction.

TREND OF ELECTIONS ALARMS SENATORS

BLAMES LACK OF PATRONAGE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Senator Elkins of West Virginia, a golf companion of President Harding, who some weeks ago criticised the Administration for not promptly distributing patronage, asserted today that the recent election showed a lack of party organization, due to some extent to failure to reward deserving workers.

Other Senators are saying privately that not enough has been done by the present Administration to make the party organization stronger. They say the workers have become indifferent because of their failure to get places and the continuance of Democrats in offices usually awarded to party workers.

Republican leaders in Congress today, surveying the situation in the different States, did not hesitate to say that the trend apparently is away from the Republican Party and will continue so unless taxation laws are revised in accordance with the views of the masses. Stand-patters, however, said that if there was any discontent against the Republican party, it would disappear if the conference on limitation of armament was successful. They are hopeful of conference results which will permit a radical reduction in taxes and thus aid the party in the next Congressional elections and the Presidential contest in 1924.

"If those responsible for a harmonious Republican Party to confront the opposition in the next Congressional elections fail to profit by the lesson to be learned from last Tuesday's election, they will be recreant in their duty to the party organization which gave them their opportunity," said Senator Elkins.

"Nobody will deny that the preceding Administration was loud and lusty with its preachment of idealism, but nobody will dispute that when it came to looking after harmony and upkeep of its party organization it was there forty ways with its genius to rid the Government of its political enemies and hand over their places to 'deserving Democrats.'

Here's the Happy Way to Rid Yourself of Constipation PERMANENTLY!

Bran is the most wonderful health food known! Nine-tenths of human ills would be eliminated if all the people would eat bran regularly, because bran corrects constipation! Constipation can be blamed as the starting point of 90% of the sickness!

Bran in deliciously palatable form—Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled—will give permanent relief from constipation if eaten regularly each day. We guarantee that results will prove astounding if at least two tablespoonfuls are eaten daily. Chronic cases should use as much as is needed.

Physicians indorse the use of Kellogg's Bran for constipation. It is not only surely effective as a permanent relief if eaten regularly, but it is the ideal way to correct constipation through food!

Kellogg's Bran is not a cathartic—it is nature's food that will not only delight your palate but safeguard your health! Start the children eating Kellogg's Bran. It builds strong bodies! Serve bran to your family as a cereal or on other cereals! Use it generously making muffins, macaroons, raisin bread or in a hundred appetizing ways! Pancakes made of Kellogg's Bran are the best you ever ate!

The consistent use of Kellogg's Bran will clear up a pimply skin and purify the blood.

Kellogg's Bran, eaten regularly, prevents a bad breath from the stomach and intestines.

P. S. By the way, it's a happy-health-habit to keep Kellogg's Bran on the dining table all the time! Sprinkle it on your food!

TIGHE IS FOUND SANE BY BELLEVUE STAFF

Detective, Sentenced for Beating Woman, to Be Removed to Tombs, Probably Today.

JUDGE WILL VACATE STAY

Prisoner's Counsel Argue for Reasonable Doubt Certificate—Client Faces Other Indictments.

Charles F. Tighe, a former Detective Sergeant, who has been under observation at Bellevue Hospital since Nov. 4 to determine his mental condition, following his sentence to prison on a charge of hitting a woman with a blackjack during a prohibition raid by the police at 600 Ninth Avenue, was declared to be sane in a report yesterday by Dr. M. S. Gregory, head of the psychopathic ward. Although Tighe was a psychopathic patient, he was detained in the prison department of the hospital. It was said he would probably be returned to the Tombs Prison today.

Dr. Gregory's report had not been received last night by Judge McIntyre of General Sessions. As his court will remain closed until Monday, the details of the findings may not be made public until that date. Dr. Gregory declined to discuss the case further than that Tighe was found to be in fairly good health, mentally and physically. When informed of the decision of the physician, Judge McIntyre, who signed the order of commitment to the hospital, said:

"I will vacate at once the order staying the execution of the sentence, if that is the case."

Tighe will remain in the Tombs, however, until his attorneys get a ruling from the Supreme Court on an application for a certificate of reasonable doubt pending an appeal for a new trial. This motion was argued yesterday by E. E. Fuchs, of counsel for Tighe, and by the District Attorney, and both submitted briefs to Justice Mullen.

The basis for the motion for a certificate of reasonable doubt, Mr. Fuchs said last night, set forth that technical errors were involved in the trial and conviction of Tighe, and that he was the victim of an "atmosphere which prejudiced his case."

The question of Tighe's sanity does not figure in the application to the higher court, as no defense on the ground of insanity was put in during the trial. The application for the order to remove Tighe to the hospital, which was made by his trial attorney, Samuel Furstenberg, surprised the keepers at the Tombs, who said they had observed nothing wrong with the prisoner.

Dr. Perry M. Lichtenstein, the Tombs physician, said Tighe's condition before his removal indicated well defined symptoms of insanity.

Tighe was convicted on Oct. 7, before Judge Crain in General Sessions, of assault in the second degree, on the complaint of Mrs. Emma Lennon, of 561 West Fiftieth Street, who accused the policeman of beating and abusing her.

There are other untried indictments against Tighe, in which he is accused of having run out of the saloon where the raid was and attacking men, women and children on the street, dealing blows right and left with a blackjack.

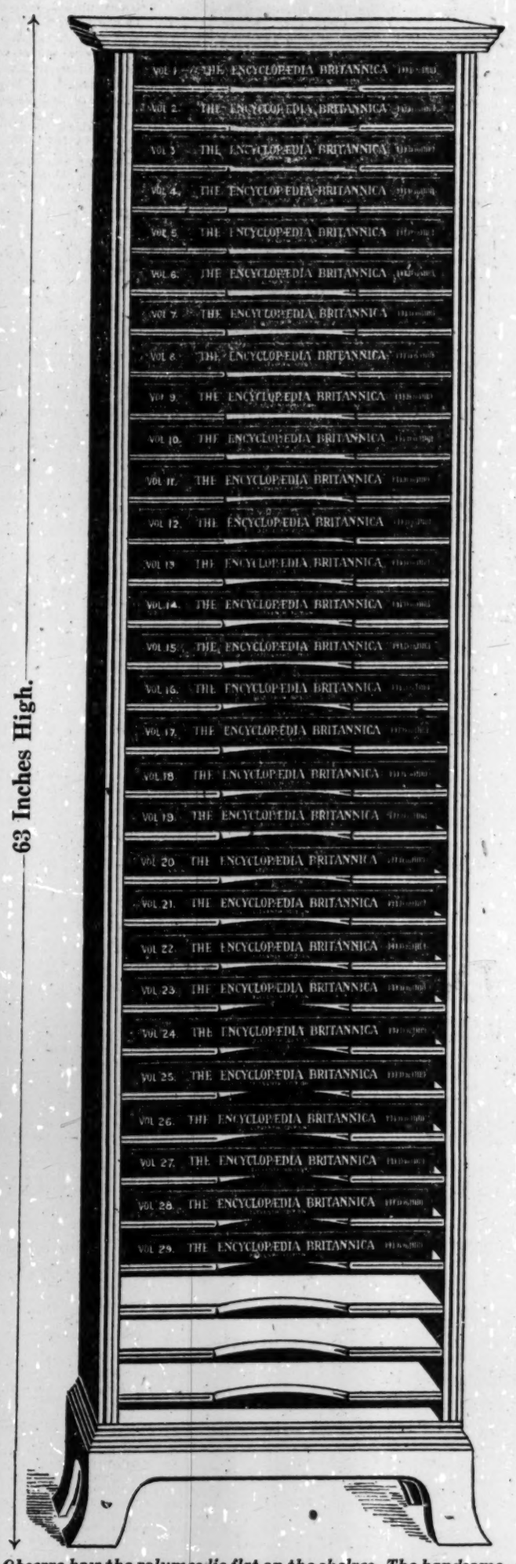
A Subscriber's Idea—The Encyclopaedia Britannica In a Unique Suède Binding.

LIMITED TO 50 SETS.



63 Inches High.

Observe how the volumes lie flat on the shelves. The handsome mahogany case goes with each set and is included in the price.

ONE of our subscribers was impressed with the fact that The Encyclopaedia Britannica, besides being the most useful of books, was also a superb example of the printer's art. He decided he wanted a binding that would be beautiful in itself without sacrificing the utility of the books.

In order to carry out this idea he asked us to bind his set in a soft suede leather—similar to that used in high grade gloves. He was delighted with the result. The suede binding is flexible but strong, beautiful but serviceable, and luxurious without being ostentatious. Best of all, these books lie flat in their case—no book ought to stand upright.

We thought the idea would interest others, and in a short time we had sold thousands of sets bound in this way. When the United States entered the war we had to discontinue this style of binding because it was impossible to get the leather. Today we are able to buy enough suede leather to bind up 50 sets. We suggest that The Encyclopaedia Britannica in this binding would make a superb Christmas gift.

You may examine these volumes at your leisure at our Reading Room on the East Balcony of the Grand Central Terminal, where, if you wish, you can secure a set for early delivery. Or, if you prefer, come or write to our New York office, 288 Fourth Avenue. We advise you, however, that we shall be able to supply only 50 sets in this style, and these are likely to be soon exhausted.

The price of the set is the same as before the war and you can extend your payments over a year and a half if you desire.

The picture gives some idea of how the set will look in your home. It cannot give any idea of the richness and quiet elegance of the binding. These books will add beauty and distinction to any library or living room. They are attractive to the eye and pleasing to the touch. You enjoy taking up one of these volumes to read, and yet it is a pleasure merely to observe their exquisite binding against the background of their deep mahogany case, itself a decorative article of furniture with a shelf for each volume. This case, by the way, goes with each set and is included in the price.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica is unique in that no other work attempts to give all general knowledge.

The suede binding is unique in that no other book is bound in this way.

The price is unique in that it is the pre-war price.

The special bookcase to contain the suede bound volumes has three extra shelves for the three New Volumes of The Encyclopaedia Britannica which will soon be issued and which will contain the only accurate and impartial history of the war and its cause.

Do not put off the matter of ordering this set if you are interested, because we can bind only 50 sets at present.

BUFF KEEPS TITLE IN EASY VICTORY

CARRIES FIGHT THROUGHOUT

Has Margin in Eleven Rounds—Sharkey, Off Form, Is Victor in Three, One Is Tied.

FLOORED EARLY IN BATTLE

Italian Boxer Weakens Steadily and Is Near Knockout Toward End—10,000 See Ring Struggle.

Johnny Buff, Jersey City's veteran little ring man, is still the world's bantamweight champion. He defended his title against Jack Sharkey, sturdy west side Italian, last night before a crowd of about 10,000 people at Madison Square Garden. After fifteen sizzling rounds the decision was awarded to Buff and the crowd cheered the verdict to a man. Sharkey was soundly thrashed by the little Jerseyite, who holds both the American flyweight title and the world's bantamweight championship.

Buff easily earned the decision. He outpointed Sharkey eleven rounds to three, forcing a steady pace from the outset. Buff had the better of his rival in the first six rounds and in the tenth, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth sessions. Sharkey, with a spectacular recovery, earned the seventh, eighth and ninth. The eleventh was about even.

The contest was interesting and satisfied the crowd; in spots it was intensely exciting. Withal, however, it lacked much of the spectacular which is generally witnessed in battles between ring midgets. This, however, was through no fault of Buff's. The champion fought a heady, methodical battle from start to finish. He was on the attack throughout and never once relented in his assault, even in the face of spasmodic rallies in which Sharkey lashed out furiously with both hands. It was this steady offensive which brought Buff the decision, for he gradually wore Sharkey down until at the finish the Italian was a weary battler indeed.

Sharkey Off Form.

Sharkey did not fight his characteristic battle. The tireless aggressive of the champion kept Sharkey on the defensive almost throughout. It was patent, too, that Sharkey must have been forced to extremes in making the weight. The Italian seemed slow and lacked that fire and spontaneous fury in his assault which has come to be characteristic of Sharkey when, in the heat of battle, he is stung. Sharkey was stung repeatedly as Buff went along to victory, but Sharkey's only response to the fire was to take every advantage of breathing spells in the clinches.

Sharkey was floored early in the battle and near the end gave evidences of weakening under the assault to which he was subjected. With typical courage, however, the Italian held his feet in the latter rounds when spectators expected momentarily to see him topple in crushing defeat. Sharkey ever essayed a dying rally in the closing round when he responded with rights and lefts wildly in returning Buff's fire. But it was a weak, futile response to a steadied attack which would not be denied nor offset.

Buff assumed the aggressive with the opening gong and carried the fighting without interruption.

In the second round Buff scored a knockdown which had the crowd yelling wildly. He caught Sharkey with a left swing flush to the face with a blow delivered as the Italian rushed in on the attack. The force of the punch, combined with Sharkey's momentum, spilled the Italian on the floor, but he was up immediately. Buff crashed over a right to the jaw which stung Sharkey, and in a rally near the end of the round the Italian landed with rights and lefts to the face, which had the crowd yelling wildly. Buff never retreated, however, but clung to the attack and fought Sharkey off.

Larry Regan of Jersey City gained the decision over Charlie Ryder in the opening eight-round preliminary. In the second bout of eight rounds Joe Tipitzi was awarded the decision over Johnny Drummie of Jersey City. Bert Colina outpointed George Shade, San Francisco boxer, who was making his initial local appearance, in the semifinal of eight rounds.

Crowd Not Capacity.

Contrary to expectations the bout failed to draw a capacity crowd. It was estimated that about 10,000 people witnessed the scrap, an attendance which did not quite equal the size of crowds which have been attracted to ordinary battles at Madison Square Garden. Not even the title involved and the prospect of witnessing a sterling battle could attract a capacity crowd.

More than 1,000 seats yawned for want of occupants. They were located on the floor of the arena and in the first balcony overhead. The top gallery was thickly infested with the lads whose pocketbooks are shrunk to the limit when the general admission price is extracted. In the arena, as on the floor and the first balcony, there were blocks of empty seats.

Sharkey was the first to enter the ring. He climbed through the ropes at 10 o'clock and was followed a minute later by Champion Buff. The appearance of the boxers excited the crowd to wild outbursts of applause.

It was announced that Buff weighed 114 and Sharkey 116½ pounds. The bout started at 10:10.

First Round.

Buff Sets Mark for Alacrity In Risking Newly Won Title

RELAY IS FIRST IN WALDEN HANDICAP

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 10.—Relay showed a fleet pair of heels to eleven other two-year-olds in the Walden Handicap today at Pimlico. This son of Assagai took the rail at the rise of the barrier and made all his own pace over a muddy track, to win by nearly two lengths from St. Henry. About the same distance further back was Lady Baltimore, with Irish Brigadier fourth and Trevelyan fifth. The distance was a mile. First money was $8,150, second $2,000, third $1,000 and fourth $500. All those that finished in the money were outsiders. Runantell finished ninth.

Of the nineteen youngsters originally entered, only an even dozen paraded to the barrier. Oil Man, because of his good race the other day, was installed the favorite, with Runantell the second selection. St. Henry was third choice and the winner fourth.

Jim Milton sent the field away to a perfect start and Relay soon was taken to the front by Lewis Morris. Oil Man and Lady Baltimore battled for second place, going into the clubhouse bend. St. Henry was back in the middle of the bunch.

Oil Man Drops Back.

After traveling to the half-mile post, Oil Man dropped back, beaten, and Lady Baltimore moved up into second place. St. Henry then came along and put on full steam ahead for Relay. St. Henry could not overtake his rival, but gained on him in the run through the home stretch.

St. Henry pulled up very lame and some are inclined to believe that this may have prevented him from giving Relay a stiffer argument for the major portion of the spoils.

The crowd did not come up to expectations, the glamour of the $40,000 Pimlico Futurity robbing it of its former interest, and only the usual attendance was present.

The New York contingent tried to bowl over Polly Ann, Spalding Lowe Jenkins's clever filly in the Country Club purse event, and they now are wiser men. Jockey Morris followed the pace until straightened out. Then he started to come around the leaders with Polly Ann. The leaders made a wide turn, and then Morris used his head by darting for the rail. Polly Ann easily beat Ten Buttons, with Arrow of Gold third.

J. E. Widener's Vigilante was the best in the Patapsco Steeplechase, which was at two and one-half miles. Jockey Smoot did not make a mistake. He went to the front on the backstretch the last time around. Minata was the one to give chase, but could not offer serious opposition.

New Haven Disqualified.

The race was marred by New Haven, which was always well up. He carried Le Marsouin out of the course approaching the first obstacle on the far side. They returned and completed the course. The finish was close, with New Haven finishing in third place. New Haven, however, was disqualified for interfering with Le Marsouin, which was given third position.

The longest shot of the day to win was Quick Run, in the third event, which brought out youngsters to travel six furlongs. He paid slightly better than 20 to 1.

HARVARD CLUB WINS IMPRESSIVE VICTORY

Class A Squash Team Defeats Yale Club in Four Matches—Columbia Scores.

Filmore Van S. Hyde, national squash tennis champion, made his official debut for the season yesterday afternoon in the Class A team match between the Harvard and Yale clubs on the Harvard Club courts, and won in such fashion from Thomas R. Coward, one of the Yale Club's aces, as to indicate that, with the season barely opened, he is already close to the height of his form. The Harvard Club made a clean sweep of its five matches against the Blue. In the other encounter of the opening day in the tournament for the Class A team championship of the Metropolitan League, the Columbia Club, with Jay Gould as its No. 1 player, defeated the Crescent Athletic Club, on the latter's courts, by a score of 4 to 1. Gould took the measure of C. M. Bull Jr. in a splendidly fought three-game battle, by scores of 15-8, 8-15, 15-3.

The Hyde-Coward struggle for the excellence and variety of the play for tactical skill, and the speed and accuracy of both men, took precedence over all others in the contest between the Harvard and Yale Club fives. Hyde mixed his shots beautifully, and in this respect had a distinct advantage. He introduced change of pace always at the moment when it would most damage his opponent's cause, and his placing approached perfection. Coward, one of the foremost players in the game, likewise played brilliant squash, forcing the champion at all times to his utmost efforts. Coward had as much speed as the champion, but he was outplaced, and found it especially difficult to pick up the champion's fierce around-the-court smashes, which hugged the base of the back wall. Both worked the angles beautifully, but the champion was the better getter. The scores were 15-8, 14-17, 15-3.

Considering the formidable nature of the opposition, Hyde won the opening game with astonishing ease, dropping but two points in the course of it. The second game took on a different complexion. After the count had remained even up to 2—all, it was Coward who assumed command and began to pile up an impressive lead. Coward was playing the same steady game that he had shown from the start, but the champion began to hit wildly, missing connections with shots that had been simple for him in the opener.

Hyde Rallies.

The Yale Club ace ran the points to 12—2 in his favor, and the game looked like a complete reversal of the first. At this stage, however, Hyde began to rally and in his next four hands brought the tally up to 7—12. Service changed hands no less than seven times at this point, so stubbornly was each contesting the advantage. Then Hyde added three more, saving one point by an incredible get of a low, fast shot to the back-wall that seemed impossible of return.

In his next hand, the champion pulled even at 12—all, and a minute later he assumed the lead for the only time in this game. This was at 13—12. Coward drew level at 14—all, and by the fastest sort of play ran out the game at 17—14. The early advantage which Coward had managed to accumulate proved too much for the champion to overcome.

The third and decisive game found Hyde again in full stride, and the resulting contest resembled the opener closely. Aided by two service aces, the champion quickly ran into a lead of 4—2, and from then on there was little real doubt of the ultimate outcome. He took the game, 15—5, capturing the match point when Coward smashed into the telltale.

A remarkable upset in the Harvard-Yale encounter was the victory of F. S. Whitlock of the Crimson, over C. J. MacGuire, by scores of 12—15, 15—12, 15—5. The Yale Club man, a player of longer experience, was generally looked upon as a sure winner. But Whitlock has improved vastly in the last two seasons and he played beautiful squash yesterday. He caught MacGuire repeatedly out of position by splendid placing and change of pace. MacGuire seemed shy of practice. He was at his best in the opening game, but from then on suffered more than his rival from the speed of the play.

Light in Court Poor.

P. M. Morrison added a point to the Harvard Club's total at the expense of Livingston Platt. The poor light in the court in which they played seemed to bother the Yale man. Hewitt Morgan, one of the leading lights of the country in court tennis and racquets, played his first Class A match in squash for the Harvard Club and won over Otis L. Guernsey in straight games, not only playing a keen game himself but profiting greatly by Guernsey's errors. Morgan did not play squash last season, but he was on the Class B team two years ago, and should prove one of the Harvard Club's strongest assets. Anderson Dana's victory over Auguste J. Cordier had been recorded the preceding day.

In his defeat of Bull in the Columbia-Crescent match, Guild played some of the soundest squash he has ever shown. He attempted few startling shots, being content to outguess his veteran opponent. His position play was marvelously good. At the start of the match the court tennis king accumulated a lead of 4—1 in short order. Then Bull braced strongly and gradually pulled up until the count stood 7—6 in Gould's favor. From then on, Gould had things all his way, catching Bull out of range of the ball repeatedly.

The second game saw a falling off in Gould's effort, and a correspondingly increased speed and determination on Bull's part. The feature of the rubber was Gould's returns of Bull's service. For point after point, the Columbian placed his return of service to the corner of the court in such wise that Bull could barely touch it, not to mention handling it successfully. Gould won this game with consummate ease, yielding but three points.

Wesleyan to Stage Unique Football Meet for Students

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Nov. 10.—A call to every student to put on a football uniform on Nov. 21 for an intramural football field meet on Andrus Field was issued today by Dr. Edgar Fauver, head of the Wesleyan University athletic department. Contestants will represent the fraternities, and it is expected to be the largest post-season gridiron meet in the East. Scrimmaging will be omitted, and play will take in placement and drop kicking, punts and forward passes, combined with running. Every student who can get a football suit is expected to take part. Forward passing will be for accuracy and distance, punting and kick-offs for distance, with place and drop kicking from the 20, 30 and 40-yard lines. There will be one combination forward pass from the 30-yard line, the ball going from centre to quarterback to an end, who will try to reach the opponents' goal line. There will be numerous variations of play and some novelties, the scoring to be by points, five places to be counted.

BURDETT WINS CUE MATCH BY A POINT

Beats Leake After Stubborn Contest in Three-Cushion Billiards by 30 to 29.

One point was the margin of victory in the S. V. Burdett-M. W. Leake match played last night in the New York State amateur three-cushion billiard championship being played at the National Recreation Academy in Brooklyn. Both players were in excellent stroke, but Burdett took an early lead and increased it gradually until in the fifty-sixth inning he led Leake by a score of 29 to 24 and needed but a single billiard for victory.

At this stage of the contest Leake began to produce some excellent safety play and thus prevented Burdett from scoring the all-important point, while he was amassing five billiards by slow stages. Then, with the score tied, Leake's stonewall defense crumbled and Burdett ran out in the sixty-seventh inning, 30 to 29. It was without doubt the closest and most interesting match played in the tournament to date. Both men had high runs of three.

John Mills was the victor in the first of the evening matches, defeating A. V. Ryan by a score of 30 to 26 in sixty-three innings. Ryan's high run of three was one of the best of the tourney and proved that he was playing in form, but Mills's steadiness was too much for him in the long run.

L. A. Servatius will engage Harold Turk in the first of tonight's matches, while I. J. Brussel and Peter Farace will meet in the final match of the evening.

WINS CLOSE CUE GAME.

Braun Defeats Griffin, 44 to 42, In Interborough Three-Cushion Play.

J. B. Braun and J. Griffin staged one of the closest matches that has been played in the Interborough three-cushion handicap billiard tournament at Kline's Academy last night. Braun played for 44 and Griffin for 43, and when Braun scored his forty-fourth billiard in the eighty-second inning Griffin's score was 42. In the final stages of the match neither player was able to make more than one billiard at a time, so that the spectators were kept in suspense as the two players see-sawed. Griffin's high run was 5 and Braun's 4.

In the afternoon match Samuel Garfunkle defeated J. Howard, 46 to 29, in a match that required seventy-nine innings. Howard's handicap was 35. Each player had a high run of 3. The tournament will be continued today.

GAINS VICTORY WITH CUE.

Hurd Defeats Jenkins in Met. Pocket Billiard Tourney Match.

Clarence Hurd overwhelmed Robert Jenkins at the Broadway Billiard Academy in their match in the metropolitan pocket billiard championship last night. Hurd took the lead at the outset and with one high run of thirteen and several other good runs managed to reach the 100 mark just after his opponent had counted his fifty-ninth.

The tournament will be continued on Monday night.

TIGER SENIORS WIN RACE.

Sophomores Second In Annual Cross-Country Meet at Princeton.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 10.—In the annual Princeton inter-class cross country meet here this afternoon the runners representing the senior class scored a victory by taking second, fourth, ninth, and twelfth places. Marvinrick, running for the sophomores, came in first and was closely followed by Pud McKnight of the seniors, who was yesterday elected Captain of the University Harriers. Seufort, one of the freshmen representatives, came in a good third.

The sophomores were only four points behind the seniors in the final scoring and the freshmen were third, only one point behind 1924. The yearlings were expected to carry off all the honors of the meet because they have been running over the regular course all season while the varsity men have been using a six-mile run in preparation for the intercollegiates which come next week, but the first year men were weakened by the injury of a number of their best men.

SHILLING BATTLE OVER.

Maryland Jockey Club Cancels License at Rider's Request.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 10.—The Maryland Jockey Club yesterday cancelled the jockey's license of Carroll H. Shilling in Maryland and thus brought to a close a case which has been a source of trouble for the commission during nearly its whole existence. The action was taken at Shilling's request. He stated that he desired to go to California as a trainer.

It is believed that Shilling's case, now in court, by which he sought to compel the Maryland race tracks to recognize him as a jockey, will be dropped. He was set down by the New York Jockey Club about eight years ago.

SEEK MET. TITLE IN TANK.

Experts In Back-Stroke Swimming to Race Tonight.

A quartet of swimmers will strive this evening for the Metropolitan A. A. U. 100-yard back stroke swim championship in the pool of the Central Y. M. C. A., Brooklyn. The prospective starters are James W. Hall and Victor Kiffe of the Central Y. M. C. A., John Noonan of the New York A. C., and James Krettner, an unattached swimmer.

Three other events will be staged. They are a 100-yard handicap swim, 50-yard novice swim and a handicap fancy diving contest.

Football Game Canceled.

LEWISTON, Me., Nov. 10. — The Bates-Rhode Island State football game, scheduled for Lewiston Friday, has been canceled because of snow.

FEDERATED SPORTS IDEA IS WELCOMED

Secretary of War's Proposal Endorsed by President of Olympic Committee.

The heads of the various national amateur athletic bodies which have their headquarters in New York City, yesterday expressed themselves as heartily in support of the basic idea behind the formation of a National Amateur Athletic Federation of the United States, as proposed by Secretary of War John W. Weeks. Gustavus T. Kirby, President of the Olympic Committee and prime mover in the efforts toward an American Olympic body, was particularly enthusiastic over the Secretary of War's proposal.

Mr. Kirby believes that the co-operation of the Army, Navy and civilian population of the United States in the promotion and protection of amateur sports will do more toward making a unified country than any other one thing could not. He points out that the other nations of the world were amazed at the spirit of co-operation and unity that existed among Army and Navy and civilian representatives of America at the Olympic Games at Antwerp and at the international meeting of Olympic delegates at Lucerne.

The machinery which would underly such a vast organization, Mr. Kirby felt, would be a matter of secondary importance. He was unwilling to commit himself to the amendments to the American Olympic Association's proposed constitution as suggested in Secretary of War Weeks's letter of Nov. 9, without more mature deliberation. These amendments, he said, would be taken up and discussed along with other proposed amendments received from amateur athletic bodies throughout the United States, at the meeting of the American Olympic Committee on Nov. 26. At this meeting there will be representatives from the Army and Navy as well as from the civilian organizations.

The paramount consideration in the formation of such a central body would unquestionably be just how much power it should have over the subsidiary bodies. The heads of the United States Golf Association and of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, for instance, would not be likely to subscribe to such a body if the power to step in and dictate the handling of these sports were to be delegated to it.

The need for a centralized body to oversee and direct the organization was, of course, admitted, but the scope of this body's activities will have to be more definitely defined before the heads of the various organizations with headquarters in New York City are willing to commit themselves on the proposition.

As Julian S. Myrick, President of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, stated, the cardinal principle behind all amateur sports is to further development of physical well-being among all classes of individuals through personal participation in sports and not the specializing of stars, except in so far as watching star players encourages others to take part.

This was the purpose expressed at the Conference of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America which was held at the Hotel Astor in 1915 and many of the principles included in the present proposal were introduced at that meeting. There were more than twenty amateur athletic organizations represented at the 1915 meeting of the I. C. A. A. A. A. and the meeting which has been called for Nov. 26 to consider the formation of a national Olympic body is expected to pass that mark in the number of organizations which will be represented.

A body such as the one proposed by the Secretary of War would require an extended period for organization purposes and it is questionable as to whether it could be made to function in time to direct the participation of this country in the next series of Olympic Games. The step

Coal Properties and their Scientific Management

Here is a book prepared out of 38 years of experience in coal mine ownership, management and operation. Having first developed practical methods of operating our own mines successfully, we have expanded our organization to include the partial or complete management of coal properties for others. By description and illustration, this book shows how Peabody management is now functioning for the profit and satisfaction of many large clients

ADVANCE GUARD IS AROUND YALE BOWL

BETTING AT EVEN MONEY

Princeton Squad Goes to Derby Today—Jones Gives Eli Team Signal Drill at Pratt Field.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10.—Hundreds of Yale and Princeton alumni, the advance guard of the 80,000 who will jam into the Yale Bowl at Saturday's meeting of rivals, reached here today. Practically every hotel is already filled and most of the crowd which will swarm into Connecticut tomorrow will be forced to find accommodations in Hartford, Bridgeport and other Connecticut cities, coming to the game Saturday morning.

Arrangements for the accommodation of the Princeton players was today made at the Hotel Clark in Derby, which will be the official headquarters for the Tiger squad during its stay in the Nutmeg State. About forty players will arrive on a special car tomorrow and, after dining at the hotel, will take automobiles over to the Yale Bowl at about 3 o'clock. The Eli squad will finish its signal drill before that hour and leave the entire structure to the Tigers.

The Princetonians will return to the Hotel Clark for dinner and will be joined by a jolly crowd of undergraduates from Jungletown tomorrow night. Instead of returning to Derby after the game Saturday, the Tiger players will be taken directly to the New Haven railroad station, where they will join the Princeton official party, going to New York to break training with their annual banquet.

Wagers Made at Evens.

Although betting has been reduced to small proportions, in comparison with the "golden age" of intercollegiate gridiron contests, several small lots of Tiger coin blew into town today and the money was confidently offered at even terms. The money was all covered tonight and the prevailing conditions made it clear that practically all the wagers laid this season would be at even terms. Princeton rooters are offering odds of 2 to 1 that their team will score against the Elis and there is plenty of Yale money left uncovered at 3 to 1 that Yale will cross the Princeton goal.

Head Coach Tad Jones took his squad of first and second varsity players to the Bowl this afternoon but found it so soggy after the two days of rain that the afternoon drill was transferred to Pratt Field. The coaches were somewhat depressed at the muddy condition of the Bowl, but were delighted this evening when a strong cold breeze swept over it. This, Manager Gedess, of the Yale eleven, said tonight, is pretty sure to dry the playing surface and give a strong, fairly dry, elastic footing for the players on Saturday afternoon.

Only signal rehearsal was essayed today, and yesterday's line-up, which was tentatively selected for the Tiger bout, was maintained. Both Charlie O'Hearn and George Becket were at quarterback, and Head Coach Tad Jones said tonight that he was undecided which of the pair to start. There is a slight leaning toward Becket, but Yale's chief scoring reliance was felt to be O'Hearn, and it is uncertain when he will be injected into the scrimmage. He has greatly improved physically the last week and is now capable of playing the greater part of the match.

Ralph Jordan and Johnnie Speiden alternated at right halfback again today, and the coaches say that Jordan had not been injured materially in the scrimmage this week. He is in condition, according to Trainer John Mack, to play the entire Princeton game, if it is necessary. Speiden has come along remarkably fast in the last two weeks, especially in his handling of forward passes, and it is now likely that he will be the first backfield player called from the sidelines after the kickoff. Until this week it was considered probable that Newell Neidlinger would be the first back sent out from the reserve squad.

Sturm to Play Right End.

The coaches said tonight that the selection of Justin Sturm for right end had been decided upon. He has crowded past the reliable Danny Deaver by his cleverness in falling on the ball and blocking kicks. The two crippled ends, Ted Blair and Mike Eddy, were in uniform this afternoon and took light practice, but there is no chance of either playing against Princeton. Both are possibilities for a part of the Harvard game next week.

Careful signal rehearsal was given the second eleven, which is regarded as the strongest individually and the most adaptable in team play of any junior team ever produced at Yale. Every member is a live boy for a part of either the Harvard or Princeton game. Its line-up is as follows:

FOCH TO CROSS FIELD EARLY.

Crowd at Bowl Tomorrow Urged to Be Seated by 1:45 P. M.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10.—A notice issued this afternoon by Chief of Police Smith and Acting Mayor Murphy requests holders of tickets for the Yale-Princeton game Saturday to be in their seats by 1:45 P. M., for at that time Marshal Foch will cross the playing field from the Princeton to the Yale side.

This notice is given so that ticket holders will not linger at the entrances of the Bowl to see Marshal Foch and his escort arrive, thereby bringing about great congestion.

Traffic orders issued this afternoon sweep off practically all vehicle traffic on downtown streets during the afternoon. From the Central Green, through the college section and out to the Bowl the streets will be given over entirely to pedestrians that all may have opportunity to see Marshal Foch on his way to and from the game.

FORDHAM IN LONG DRILL.

Coach DuMoe Puts Players Through Three Hours' Practice.

The Fordham football players had a severe drill yesterday afternoon. The men were out on the gridiron for three hours, from 2 o'clock until 5, and during that time had not a minute's rest. The reason for such a lengthy and grueling practice is that the Fordhamites have done practically nothing all week. Monday and Tuesday were days of rest, while the session on Wednesday was cut short by the rain.

The scrimmage, the first and probably the last of the week, lasted for well over an hour. Conniff led the first eleven, while Downey took charge of the second team. The seconds were given the ball by Coach DuMoe and told to do their best to score against the varsity. They managed to score twice. Captain Sylvester Fitzpatrick went through the whole scrimmage, playing at right end on the second team.

Today being a holiday, the daily practice will be held in the morning. It will probably consist only of a long signal drill on those new plays that will be used against Muhlenberg. The Maroon lads will leave for Allentown early tomorrow morning.

Special Trains Will Carry New Haven Football Crowds

In anticipation of the crowds which are expected to leave New York for New Haven tomorrow to witness the Yale-Princeton football game, the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company yesterday announced an extra-coach train service. The first special train will leave the Grand Central Terminal at 8:25 o'clock in the morning. From that hour until 10:51 trains will leave at frequent intervals. Returning, extra-coach trains will start leaving New Haven directly after the game. The first train will be in readiness for the return trip at 4:10 in the afternoon. Officials of the road suggest that passengers may avoid delay by purchasing round-trip tickets in advance.

PENN STATE MOVES ON PHILADELPHIA

Squad of 25 Leaves for Game With Navy—Student Body Begins Exodus.

Special to The New York Times.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Nov. 10.—All Penn State is moving toward Philadelphia, or at least it seems that way. More than three hundred students have already departed for the Navy game by foot, train and auto, and a general exodus will begin tomorrow, when the main body will leave.

The football squad of twenty-five players left here at 7 o'clock tonight, cheered on by the yells of classmates who are also going and of those who must remain behind. For the benefit of the latter group play by play returns by telephone will be sent during the game.

The Penn State squad will get special sleepers at Tyrone and will reach Philadelphia early tomorrow morning. In the party that left here tonight were Coaches Bezdek and Martin, Graduate Manager Neil Fleming, Student Manager L. M. Forncrock and the following players: Ends, Hufford, Frank, McCollum and Smozinski; tackles, Hills, McMahon, Crowther and Johnson; guards, Bedenk, Baer, Logue and Reinhard; centres, Bentz and Hamilton; quarterbacks, Killinger and Ritner; halfbacks, Wilson, Lightner, Redinger and Palms; fullbacks, Knabb and Cornwall.

Captain Snell is still under the care of the doctor and was not allowed to make the trip.

HARVARD COACHES CAREFUL

Practically Decided Regulars Will Not Play Against Brown.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 10.—The football field in the Harvard stadium was so wet and sloppy today that the varsity players did not practice on it, but did their drilling near the baseball diamond. The workout was conducted on a careful basis because of the condition of the turf, but was sufficient to prove the first team players have recovered from the bumps received at Princeton.

It now seems to be definitely decided that none of the men who played against the Tigers will play against Brown on Saturday, for a substitute team did the hard drilling. The make up of this eleven was: Janin and Field, ends; Kunhardt and Lockwood, tackles; Grew and Brocker, guards; Holden, centre, with Johnson, Churchill, Gratwick and Jenkins in the backfield. The last four men and Grew all played as substitutes at Princeton a week ago.

At least six of the regulars will go to New Haven with some of the older coaches, while the younger members of Fisher's staff will remain behind to direct the play against Brown. Coburn is still unable to do any work. Crocker, while he is on crutches still, is only resting his foot. Tierney may get in the game Saturday, for a time, and so, possibly, may Hubbard, who needs the work at guard.

Tonight Coaches Mahan, Soucy, Woods and Felton were placed in charge of the first string players, all of whom went to the Myohaya Country Club for the night. They will spend most of the holiday on the North Shore, and this means no football for a week for the team as it faced Princeton, and probably will enter the contest against Yale next week.

HARVARD TEAM IS PRAISED.

Alumni Bulletin Lauds Eleven for Showing Against Tigers.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 10.—The Harvard Alumni Bulletin carries an encomium for the varsity football team, based upon the showing at Princeton Saturday. The representative publication of the alumni body in an editorial published today says:

We are as proud of the eleven which lost at Princeton last Saturday as of any winning Harvard team. The members of Captain Kane's eleven were much lighter, younger, and less experienced than their opponents, and almost everybody who knew the difficulties which have hampered Fisher and his assistants this year expected that Harvard, playing at Princeton, would be soundly beaten.

Now, we do not propose to try to take away any of the gratification which Princeton men feel when they think of Gilroy's touchdown. Harvard has been so often the beneficiary of just such fortunate plays that it would not be becoming in us to suggest, or even think, that luck favored Princeton. All we say is—and this is in confidence to our own Harvard audience—that no Harvard eleven ever acquitted itself better.

TICKETS ARE HARD TO GET.

Harvard-Yale Game Applications Exceed Supply by 20,000.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 10.—Tickets for the Harvard-Yale football game, to be played at the Stadium on Nov. 19, were in the mail for the most part today, but with instructions to post office authorities to make no deliveries until Monday.

Word has gone out to the unlucky ones whose allotments were curtailed or cut off entirely by the fact that applications outnumbered by 20,000 the available seats. A single seat each has been allotted to freshmen, students at the graduate school and some sophomores, instead of the usual three, with the result that mothers and sweethearts in their cases can have no place at the game.

Speculators, with no tickets assured, they say, but expecting to get some, already quote $50 to $75 a pair for them.

W. VA. OFF FOR LOWLANDS.

Mountaineers Leave to Renew Football Relations With Virginia.

Special to The New York Times.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 10.—Twenty-two players left here tonight to carry West Virginia's colors against Virginia, at Charlottesville, Saturday. It will be the first game between these neighboring State universities for twenty-three years.

The men were Captain Kay, Setron, Wuinlan and Buchoveck, guards; J. Harrick, Tallman, Flanagan and Meridith, tackles; P. Hill, Kiger, Hawkins, Marsh and McDonald, ends; Lytle and Helber, quarterbacks; Simon, Bowers, G. Hill, S. Harrick and Bartell, backs; Fuccy and Lyall, centres.

TIGER ELEVEN HAS FINAL HOME DRILL

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 10.—The Princeton football team went through its final home workout before Saturday's game with Yale. The practice today on University Field was open, and was attended by a large portion of the undergraduates, who marched to the field led by the student band. The session started with the usual drill in kicking and in running down under punts.

After the preliminary work the varsity lined up against the scrubs and went through a dummy scrimmage, which was, for the most part, devoted to defense against Yale plays, which were being used by the scrubs. Captain Stan Keck and Al Wittmer were again absent from the varsity, and their places were filled by Rutan and Lipscomb.

When interviewed after the workout, Coach Bill Roper stated that the two stars who were absent were fast rounding into playing condition and that they would both be in good shape when the whistle blows for the start of the game in the Bowl on Saturday.

After the dummy scrimmage Roper took most of the first varsity men out and started a real scrimmage, with the ball given to the scrubs on the 50-yard line. Using Yale passes, the scrubs were able to advance to the varsity's 10-yard line, but there the first eleven held and the ball was lost on downs. With Lourie punting for the varsity and Van Gerbig for the second team, orders were given to block the kicks. Neither team, however, was able to break up the other's punting game.

The team which will start on Saturday will be the same one that played the whole game against the Crimson last week. The whole squad seems to be in top shape. Roper said that he was very well satisfied with the condition of the team, and that he expected it to play a fine game on Saturday. He would, however, make no predictions as to the outcome of the game.

The squad will leave Princeton tomorrow morning about 10 o'clock and go directly to New Haven. There will be a light workout in the Yale Bowl in the afternoon. The eleven will spend tomorrow night at Derby, and will come back to New Haven just before the game on Saturday. A squad of forty men will make the trip. In addition there will be over fifty members of the scrubs who will be given free transportation and side-line passes to the game.

ASK N. Y. U. TO MAKE TRIPS.

South and West Invite Eleven—Team Ready for Rutgers.

New York University's football squad continued its work yesterday in preparation for Saturday's game against Rutgers with a stiff practice session. All of the regulars were out, including the big fullback, Ryan, who, it was thought, would not be able to play tomorrow, owing to injuries received in the Trinity game. However, he is all right again, and will probably start against Rutgers.

Tomorrow's game marks the resumption of football relations between these two colleges. They were once rivals, having started their gridiron duels back in 1905. However, affiliations were broken in 1916, when Rutgers administered to the Violet eleven a trouncing by the score of 60 to 0. This was the year that Foster Sanford had a machine that overwhelmed all opposition. At that time the Violet had won eight games and tied one, while Rutgers has seven to its credit. Today the Scarlet and Gray will make a valiant attempt to even up the series. Coach Gargan has been priming his charges for this game, and expects to see his Violet machine at its greatest strength.

The athletic authorities at the uptown college are preparing for a record attendance. The advance sale of tickets makes it seem probable that Ohio Field will be packed from end to end.

The Violet football team has just received invitations from the University of Florida, the University of Alabama and Detroit University to play post-season games at their respective fields. The Faculty of the college, in the shadow of the Palisades feel, however, that it would take too much time to make these trips, and that the players' studies would have to be neglected. As a result, it is most likely that Coach Gargan's men will not accept these invitations.

CHANGES FOR RUTGERS.

Sanford Will Give Two Freshmen Chance Against N. Y. U. Eleven.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 10.—The Rutgers eleven will make its second invasion of New York City within five days Saturday, when it will renew football relations with its old rival, N. Y. U. By the showing the Violet made against Trinity on Tuesday Rutgers realizes that its team faces a hard task.

The Scarlet was sent through a long practice today, which included signal drill and a half hour's scrimmage. The team came out of the Notre Dame game with many minor injuries, but most of these are expected to be healed by Saturday. No chances will be taken with the injured players, however, inasmuch as the strong West Virginia team must be met next week.

Coach Foster Sanford expects to make several changes in the line-up, starting Bender at centre in place of Kahle and Scudder. Both of the latter players are seniors, while Bender is a freshman, so that Sanford wants to give him all the experience possible for next season. G. S. Gandner, another freshman, will start at one of the wing positions instead of Dickinson, who was injured on Tuesday. Rutgers will start the same backfield against the Violet as against Notre Dame.

OPTIMISM RIFE AT BROWN.

Hope of Good Showing Against Harvard Is Strong.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 10.—When Brown faces Harvard in Cambridge on Saturday five of the men in the Brown line-up will be freshmen, two more will be playing their first year of varsity football, while but four veterans will answer the referee's whistle. The four experienced warriors who will play are Captain Shupert, halfback; Shurtleff, centre; Gulian, tackle, and Barrett, end.

The varsity has been driven hard all week and both players and coaches are confident of a strong showing against the Crimson. Every man on the squad is in excellent shape for the first time this year. The eleven is thoroughly versed in the attack which Harvard employed against Princeton last Saturday and is fully prepared to meet the aerial game with which the Crimson dazzled the Tigers for two quarters. Many students and local alumni are planning to accompany the team in its invasion of the Harvard stadium.

SCHOOL CAPTAIN OUT.

Commerce to Meet Stuyvesant Today Minus Services of Levine.

Captain Moe Levine of Commerce High School will not be in the line-up when his team meets Stuyvesant High at the Lewisohn Stadium this afternoon. Levine was injured in the game against Morris High last week, and while he has partially recovered, the Commerce coaches will not take any chances of his being further injured before Commerce and Clinton meet for the metropolitan championship.

The loss, however, is a serious one to Commerce, since students, coaches and players are anxious to reach the Clinton game with a clean slate. In the absence of Captain Levine, Nat Gluck star end, and a strong possibility for the mythical all-scholastic eleven, will lead the team. The game this afternoon on the C. C. N. Y. gridiron will begin promptly at 2:30 o'clock.

Buy a $25 Fountain Pen And See Yale Play Princeton

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10.—Fountain pens have not heretofore been regarded as a necessary part of equipment for a football game, except among those in the press seats, but there may be many such displayed here on Saturday. Speculators are said to have secured some tickets for the Yale-Princeton game which they are offering at face value as an inducement to purchase "a very fine fountain pen." The quotation on this class of pens has been placed, it is said, at $25.

TWO TEAMS DRILL AGAINST COLUMBIA

To make up for time lost during Wednesday's drizzle Coach Buck O'Neill broke a long standing custom yesterday and ordered a Thursday scrimmage workout for the Columbia football squad, which is busy preparing for the dangerous-looking game with Ohio University tomorrow afternoon. And to make the matter more emphatic the Blue and White head coach flung both the freshman and second teams against the varsity before the scrimmage had been completed.

It was as thorough a practice as South Field has seen this season and showed how seriously the coaches are taking the invasion of the team from the Buckeye State. The freshmen, spurred on by Coach Bill Cook, were the first opponents of the varsity, and the yearlings, always on the defensive, had to absorb quite a bit of punishment before they were withdrawn in favor of the seconds. Against the yearlings, the first string team scored three touchdowns, but no track was kept of the downs and the freshmen never had a chance to try out their own repertoire of plays.

Moszczenski, Koppisch and Burtt each crossed the goal line once against the first year players, and then the seconds came into the fray, to be scored on once in the short time they faced the varsity. Charley Applebaum was the ball-carrier when the touchdown was chalked up.

By way of retaliation the freshmen later stacked up against the second team and unleashed a varied assortment of plays that carried the ball the length of the field for a touchdown. The second string combination was utterly unable to cope with the vigorous tactics of Cook's warriors, who opened up huge holes for the yearling backs to step through.

After the afternoon's scrimmaging had been finished O'Neill took the varsity eleven to a corner of the field and there, under the glare of searchlights from a nearby recitation hall, continued the intensive drill. Defects that had cropped up against Cornell and in the scrimmage work were made the subject of the lecture, which was delivered in crisp language that could be easily understood.

Judging from the strenuous course of preparation, O'Neill and his staff are looking for a hard game tomorrow. Ohio University, earlier in the season, proved easy for O'Neill's old team at Syracuse, but later went to Morgantown and gave Spears's men plenty of trouble before succumbing to the West Virginians. Last Saturday the Ohians, who should not be confused with Ohio State, defeated Cincinnati by 7 to 6, and the latter eleven is reputed to be of considerable strength this year.

To make Columbia's task even harder, it is likely that Ohio will point its team for the battle on South Field, since two of the contests in the East have already been lost. Victory tomorrow would be a desirable climax for its Eastern invasion, and it is probable that the Buckeyes are working their hardest with this end in view.

There were no changes in the Columbia line-up yesterday and O'Neill seems definitely decided on the makeup of the team that will start the game. Both De Stefano and Applebaum played at the fullback post and either may be used at the opening kick-off. Burtt was again calling the signals, and the halfbacks were as usual Moszczenski and Koppisch, Columbia's old reliables. Korn, who wrenched his knee last Saturday, was on the field and in uniform, and he may be returned to guard. Calloway filled his shoes yesterday, with Modarelli going into the tackle position vacated by the former.

Ends, Forsyth and W. Johnson; tackles, Meyers and Modarelli; guards, Walder and Calloway; centre, Blaine; quarterback, Burtt; halfbacks, Koppisch and Moszczenski; fullback, De Stefano.

TO INVITE TWO TEAMS.

Tournament of Roses Committee Will Stage East vs. West Game.

PASADENA, Cal., Nov. 10.—Invitations to two football teams, representing the East and the West, to play here New Year's Day will be issued Nov. 19 or shortly thereafter, Seward A. Simons of the Football Committee of the Tournament of Roses Association announced today.

"We will not determine what teams shall be invited until the season's results indicate a worthy choice of teams representing the East and the West," Simons said. "Centre College is among the teams under consideration."

RIDING CLUB TRIO WINS.

Defeats Squadron A Easily in Indoor Polo Match.

The Riding Club's indoor polo trio found little difficulty in defeating the Squadron A combination yesterday at Durland's Riding Academy. The final score was 19 to 9, but the winners had a handicap of four to overcome. The Riding Club showed the strength expected of it, particularly in the early stages of the contest, and its sharp play made the first chukker exceptionally lively.

The Riding Club and the New York Riding Club will meet in the Squadron A Armory on Monday night as one of the features on the program of the National Horse Show.

The line-up:

RIDING CLUB.	Hcp.	SQUADRON A.	Hcp.
No. 1—Black	2	No. 1—Snow	2
No. 2—Gramiss	2	No. 2—Phillips	1
Back—Blackwell	5	Back—Ceballos	2
Total handicap	9	Total handicap	5

First period—Goals: Blackwell (3), Granniss (3), Harriman (2); total, 8. Score—8 to 4.

Second period—Goals: Blackwell (2), Granniss, Harriman, Phillips. Score—12 to 5.

Harvard Freshman Crew Fast.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 10. — The Harvard Freshman crew, weighing only 145 pounds on an average, defeated the first, second and third varsity crews in a two-mile race here this afternoon. The time was 10 minutes, 41 seconds. Captain McGagg rowed on the first varsity crew.

Haverhill Eleven Not to Play.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Nov. 10. — The Haverhill High School eleven will engage in no post-season games this Fall except, possibly, with Duval High School of Jacksonville, Fla., Principal A. I. Clow of the school said today. Numerous injuries sustained by players this year, he explained, would prevent acceptance of many challenges from high school teams of other sections.

DARTMOUTH LEAVES FOR CONTEST HERE

900 Students and Band Accompany Team as It Departs to Meet Penn.

Special to The New York Times.

"The Dartmouth team has met the bitter taste of defeat and its courage has not been broken. Supporters among the alumni and the undergraduates withstood the worst shock in years and the faith has not been shaken. The team is going to meet Penn and will have the same courage and faith no matter what the score is. The last two weeks have proved that Dartmouth and all that she stands for will never be licked."

Despite the crushing defeat at Ithaca two weeks ago, Dartmouth enters the game hopeful, if not entirely confident. That a shift in the Green line-up is to be made on Saturday was forecast by Cannell, but he would give no intimation of what the changes would be.

The main question seems to be about the centre of the line, where Suttmeier is slated to replace Seavey and Swenson. At guard Don Moore is a certainty, and there is a chance that George Moore may be called in from end to take the other guard, a position he is familiar with. Neidlinger, at one tackle, and Hatch or Goldstein at the other, and Lynch and Streng at the ends, complete the line. In the backfield it is Smith or Hall at quarter, Robertson and Burke at halves and either Siegfried or Hoag at fullback. Hoag is a new man, but has been putting up a great game during the last two weeks.

The line-up will probably be changed a bit on the defensive with Neidlinger moving over to a roving centre, and Robertson a possibility at defense tackle, Suttmeier going to the back field. Coach Cannell would make no definite statement on this until after tomorrow's practice at the Polo Grounds.

CORNELL ELEVEN FIT.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 10.—The Cornell varsity gave every indication of being in fine form for Saturday's game with Springfield College as it hustled through a work-out this afternoon.

The entire first team started in the line-up in the signal drill and forward pass defensive practice, but Coach Dobie made a number of changes before practice had gone very far. The conclusion was drawn that he means to use his second string men early Saturday should he find it safe to do so.

The substitutes were who prominent in today's work included Sundstrom, left tackle; Kay and Goetz, guards; Carey and Gould, halfbacks, and Whahle, quarterback.

Pfann, Maw, Ramsey and Lechler, the varsity backfield quartet, had an easy day, giving most of their time to passing and kicking. Carey also did a lot of punting and drop kicking.

It is regarded as probable that Dobie will order a kicking game as much as possible Saturday in order to save his men. The principal effort in the Cornell camp now is to keep the machine from going stale for the Penn game. At the same time Dobie will take no chances on the Y. M. C. A. team.

NAVY IN LAST SCRIMMAGE.

Middies Get Final Hard Work Before Penn State Game.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 10.—The Naval Academy regulars emerged from this afternoon's practice without a casualty, and the fact practically insures the presence of every regular in the game against Pennsylvania State in Philadelphia on Saturday, as there will be no more scrimmaging this week.

Clyde King, the dependable tackle, was in the scrimmage this afternoon for the first time since the Bethany game, in which he was hurt. It has been considered doubtful whether King could start against Penn State, but he played this afternoon without signs of difficulty and probably will be started in the big contest. He said today that he felt in fine shape.

The navy team will start the game as follows: Left end, Parr; left tackle, Bolles; left guard, Carney; centre, Larson (Captain); right guard, Frawley; right tackle, King; right end, Taylor; quarterback, Conroy; left halfback, Koehler; right halfback, Hamilton; fullback, Barchet. Noyes, Cruise, McKee and Hughes are some of the backs likely to play a part of the game.

The team is decidedly stronger in the offense than at any time this season, with the backs in better shape and with a larger variety of plays at their disposal.

The whole regiment of midshipmen and many of the officers of the Academy attended practice this afternoon and whooped things up for the encouragement of the players.

ACETYLENE FLARES USED.

Practice for Army Eleven Is Continued After Darkness.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 10. — The Army continued its gridiron work today. The men came out late and the practice continued until after darkness before a halt was called. Acetylene flares have been set up flanking the north field where the drill was held today and aided by this artificial light the soldiers got a lengthy workout with beneficial results. Two touchdowns were registered by the varsity against the scrubs.

Pop Graves, former Army gridiron star, who has coached the cadets' line for years, is here now working with Big McEwan, who is looking after the forwards this year. There is nothing fundamentally wrong with the Army line, but if it needs work, Graves and McEwan are the ones who can keep it busy. The Villanova contest Saturday will be the Army's last home game. The Pennsylvania collegians are said to be anxious to repeat a trick which they turned here a few years ago when they beat the Army with a slashing forward pass attack, and an interesting game is looked for.

NO SCRIMMAGE FOR W. AND J.

Coach Neale Puts Eleven Through Two Sessions on Wet Gridiron.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Nov. 10.—Washington and Jefferson practiced on a slippery gridiron again today, but no scrimmage work was attempted. Two sessions were conducted by Coach Neale, however, the first being a signal drill this morning and the second a general workout this afternoon. Neither West nor McLaughlin took part in the afternoon's work and West did not participate in the morning work. There is practically no hope of his playing and little chance of McLaughlin getting into the game with Pitt Saturday.

Brenkert, Brickson and Batista are the three backs who will start against the Panthers, but Coach Neale said tonight he did not know who his fourth back would be.

THE UNKNOWN SOLDIER.

The Unknown American has come home—come home without name or age, without birthplace, East or West or North or South, without a place in all the continent that can call him its own, without father or mother, sister or brother or friend, without ancestry, without posterity, without rank or office, without vocation, except that of serving his country and the cause to which it asked him to offer his life. What skill was in his hand, what speech was on his lips, what dream or ambition was in his mind, what love was in his heart, no mortal will ever know. He, the homeless, parentless, friendless one, has come back to find America herself his mother, teacher, friend, and her own "God's acre" his permanent home. The ship that brought him was greater than King ARTHUR'S dusky barge with the "three queens with crowns of gold" upon the decks "dense with stately forms." It was a ship once the flagship of an Admiral. The greatest citizens of his time have stood with bared head in his presence, though he was but a youth when his years ended. The greatest Generals of the world have saluted him, though he may have been but a private. The poets have sung his praise. Beyond all this tribute of presence and speech, a hundred million men, women and children will pause today in thought of him and pay an homage of silence more eloquent than speech.

But, in winning all this honor, he has lost not only his life but also his identity. He has stripped himself of everything that identifies his mortality on putting on immortality. Yet by sacrificing his identity not only has he shared it with every American who lies in France, and indeed with every American who perished on land or sea in the great war, but he has let every American at home find his or her hero in the casket of the Unknown. If one could but see the character of man who rises in each person's thought in the moments of silence today, one would be able to see in the composite the ideal living American evoked from the unknown dead. This nameless American, defined in a hundred million different ways, would yet be distinguishable as an American. He would have the same basic virtues as his comrades, Britain's Unknown Warrior, who lies in Westminster Abbey, close by the memorials of SHAKESPEARE and MILTON; the French Poilu Inconnu, buried beneath the Arc de Triomphe; the unidentified Italian, placed in the monument of King EMMANUEL, and all the other Unknowns who will ultimately walk the corridors of time along with the greatest of the Known. But, though joining the Immortals as one who comes unnamed, our soldier would be recognized as an American; for the individual unknown American, whatever his parentage, becomes the known American by his daring habit of hopefulness, by his carelessness of self, by his restless mobility, by his pioneering ways, by his youthfulness of spirit. As Marshal FOCH said when nearing America, he felt that he was approaching the "land of youth."

The sergeant who designated with a handful of flowers, in Châlons-sur-Marne, the plain wood coffin—one of four—which held the body of him who was to be borne back to America, had no such task as the suitor who stood before the caskets of gold and silver and lead in Portia's palace, for all four of the coffins had bodies of unknown Americans who "had given and hazarded" all they had. The three who were returned to their nameless graves were none the less deserving of the honors that have fallen upon the dust of their comrade, to whose coffin the withered flowers still clung as it was borne ashore at Washington. Indeed, if one of the three taken back to Romagne had been a college boy and remembered his Greek history, he might have had solace in recalling that those who fought most valiantly at Marathon were buried in the fields where they fell and were not brought to Athens, the capital, to be near those who heard the oration of PERICLES.

The Unknown Soldier has come home, and in his coming has made universal the sense of exaltation, gratitude and pride which kinsmen and fellow-townsmen have in honoring their own known dead. Today the whole nation, mourning in solemn and united recognition of a sacrifice which it has shared with other nations, through those whom this Unknown Soldier represents, has reached a new and, for the moment, cloudless height, whence to catch a glimpse of America's duty to her dead, whose worth, having displayed itself in deeds, can be sufficiently rewarded only "by honors also shown by deeds."

An old Danube song has the refrain: "Then the soldier spoke from his deep, dark grave: I am content." If this can be the voice from the grave of the Nameless Soldier in Arlington as the morrow of the conference dawns and the new chapter in the world's history begins to be written, then the supreme glory will indeed have come near his dust.

BUSINESS AT THE OLD STAND.

John Bull is still jealous of his financial credit. The Chancellor of the Exchequer announces that England expects to pay her debt to the United States. For that purpose about $250,000,000 will be earmarked in the next budget. This, of course, is only in line with the policy which the English have found it wise to pursue for many generations. A debt of one Government to another is something new, but the plan is to put it on the same basis as if it were a debt of English merchants. They have learned to feel that they will gain more by being scrupulously loyal to their obligations than they would by failing to pay. It is true that the former Chancellor of the Exchequer said that England would be favorable to a general cancellation of inter-allied war debts; but if that is not feasible, the English stand ready to pay what they owe. There has never been any doubt of that.

In line with this clinging to an old and honorable tradition is the steadfast way in which those responsible for the conduct of English public finance have refused to run after crazy notions. As the Prime Minister declared in his Guildhall speech, they would not consent to debase the currency. They would have nothing to do with the method of meeting deficits by printing money on Government presses. The gold standard has been guarded. Liquidation has been enforced. Heavy taxes have been laid to enable the Treasury to make both ends meet. The costs of production have resolutely been cut down. The result is that England, which also had an artificial "boom," deflated it more rapidly and is recovering from it sooner than other countries.

In a word, England has held on to ancient and tested principles of finance. She is now reaping the benefit and preparing to do business at the old stand.

THE ARMISTICE ANNIVERSARY.

Three years ago today the war with Germany came to an end as between the armies in the field at 11 o'clock in the morning, French time, but the armistice imposed upon Germany by the Allies and the United States had been signed by the German plenipotentiaries six hours earlier. On account of the difference in time between Paris and Washington, the American Secretary of State was able to make an official announcement of the signing of the terms of the armistice at 2:40 A. M., Washington time. It was a day of days for the people of the victorious allied nations, memorable and forever historic. Before going to a joint session of the House and Senate, which had been called early in the morning, President WILSON issued a proclamation announcing the tidings that had come in the night:

> My Fellow-Countrymen: The armistice was signed this morning. Everything for which America fought has been accomplished. It will now be our fortunate duty to assist by example, by sober, friendly counsel and by material aid in the establishment of just democracy throughout the world.

This famous document was written in pencil on half a sheet of note paper as the President was preparing to leave the White House. In his address to Congress he exclaimed: "Armed imperialism such as the men "conceived who were but yesterday "the masters of Germany is at an "end, its illicit ambitions engulfed in "black disaster"; and he asked, with confidence that the peace to be made by treaty would be enduring: "Who will now seek to revive it?" Three years have passed, three years that have been a nightmare in Russia, a famine in Central Europe, an economic trial threatening disaster in France, Great Britain, Italy. The moorings of many Governments have been strained almost to breaking. "The "establishment of just democracy "throughout the world," which President WILSON invoked in his proclamation, is still incomplete, with many doubters. Western civilization has been shaken by the Soviet despotism in Russia, which did not scruple to make war to attain its ends. Reconstruction throughout the world has been endangered by the crushing burden of war debts and disordered exchanges. In spite of the distress and misery of their peoples, nations have maintained armaments that prevented a reassuring reduction of taxation. At a great meeting of Liberals in London three days ago Mr. ASQUITH said:

> "There is only one bright spot in the international situation, the assembling of the Washington conference, which will belie universal hope if it does not bring about a great and workable scheme for the wholesale reduction of armaments and so satisfy the first condition of the future peace of the world.

It was the noble purpose of the Covenant of the League of Nations "to "achieve international peace and se-"curity by the acceptance of obliga-"tions not to resort to war, by the "prescription of open, just and hon-"orable relations between the na-"tions." That purpose has come very near wreck in the three years that have passed since the armistice. Hope revives with the assembling of the conference called to achieve what the Treaty of Versailles and the Covenant expressly provided for.

ULSTER PROTESTING TOO MUCH.

Sir JAMES CRAIG and the members of his Cabinet now in London give it out that there can be "no surrender of Ulster's rights." But this leaves open the questions of what those rights are and whether anybody is demanding that they be surrendered. No plan of Irish settlement ever proposed to take away from Ulster certain guarantees and safeguards. She is to have her religious freedom. She is to have her property rights made secure. She is to have the fullest degree of local government. But just now the plan is to assure her the enjoyment of all these privileges as part of a united Ireland, the North being linked to the South through the common Irish Council.

Suppose the six counties of Ireland refuse to take a step, or make any concession, for the appeasement of Ireland. In what position would they then stand before the considerate judgment of mankind? They would be, in the first place, opposing the will of 1,200,000 Irishmen to the will of 3,800,000 Irishmen. Moreover, of the population of the six counties no less than one-third—430,000—is Catholic and presumably in sympathy with the national aspirations of the rest of Ireland. Thus we should have the spectacle of about 800,000 people defying four times that number of their fellow-Irishmen, and, more than that, defying England and Scotland and Wales and the great Dominions. Ulster, a little speck on the map of Ireland, refusing to yield to the desire of the mighty British Empire! It is unthinkable.

The signs indicate that LLOYD GEORGE is counting upon an adjustment with Ulster. He spoke on Wednesday with guarded hopefulness of the outlook for an agreement. He telegraphed to Washington that he was planning to come late to the conference. He has prorogued Parliament. All this looks as if he certainly did not expect to go into a last-ditch fight with Ulster. If he is forced to, there can be little doubt which one will be whipped. No Government could be formed in England on the issue of an absolutely and unreasonably unyielding Ulster. She will be neither abandoned nor coerced, but will be powerfully urged to enter into an agreement which will be at once safe for her, a blessing to Ireland and a new means of strengthening the empire. It is impossible to believe that she can long obstinately resist the appeal.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

RUFUS CHOATE said that only the Almighty could tell what a petit jury would do. Much of the same uncertainty attaches to the opinions of the people of the several States in regard to constitutional amendments submitted to them. The people of New York voted down tremendously a greatly improved proposed State Constitution. The people of Indiana rejected a batch of amendments, the good with the bad, the other day. The people of New Hampshire refused to amend their State Constitution to conform with the Eighteenth Amendment. The element of conservatism in such resistance to change is valuable; for there is a modern passion for overloading Constitutions with what is really statutory matter. Often, however, the reasons that impel hundreds of thousands of voters to oppose harmless, necessary amendments remain obscure.

The vote of this city on the seven proposed constitutional amendments evinced a thoughtful discrimination on the part of the majority. The majority of 241,000 against the veterans' preference amendment is especially gratifying. This amendment was put first on the ballot instead of receiving its proper place according to the order of filing. If the object of this was to concentrate public attention on it in the hope that it would be adopted, the hope was singularly disappointing to its friends. Public attention was concentrated. The vote was much larger than on any other amendment. The adverse majority was decisive. In spite of all the sentimental and interested appeals, the people were resolved that the State civil service shouldn't be demoralized and wrecked, or a caste of military officeholders be created. The politicians at Albany, as so often, took too low a view of popular intelligence.

The amendment doubling the salaries of members of the Legislature was beaten by a majority of 108,000. It is easy to see the reasoning of the majority. Presumably it thought that this is no time for increasing State expenses. The argument of the friends of the amendment, including THE TIMES, was that a better class of men might be brought into the Legislature. "Look at the kind of legislators we get now!" one can almost hear the majority say. They were too disgusted with the present to hope for better results in the future; and the raising of official salaries, whether advisable or not, usually irritates the public. This amendment has been beaten twice, and may be regarded as dead for good.

The majority of 160,000 for the literacy test amendment is proof of the thoughtfulness and sound sense of the mass of voters. In a population of so many foreign strains this perception of the need of preventing a further influx of illiteracy into the electorate, of a common language as a condition precedent of Americanization, should confound the doubters of the existence of a permanent, sound popular instinct and political shrewdness. It would be ungracious to express surprise that this amendment should so triumph in a city that has re-elected Mayor HYLAN by so brobdingnagian a plurality and majority.

When we come to the non-contentious amendments, we are puzzled. Why should more than 300,000 men and women vote against giving the Legislature the power to establish forms of government in Westchester and Nassau Counties, subject to the approval of the electors of those counties? Why should 224,000 men and women object to the amendment authorizing the Legislature to establish children's courts and courts of domestic relations? Did they vote in ignorance of the fact that the amendment is needed to modernize and make more effectual the children's courts, to prevent the children in them being treated as "delinquents"—that is, virtually, criminals? Did they vote from mere resistance to change or as a result of that amusing state of dissatisfaction, irritation and bile technically known as "a grouch"?

What other theory than the last can account for the 280,000 Noes "hurled" at the innocent, useful, necessary old Erie Canal disposal-of-property amendments? Their only effect would be to put money in the State's pocket. Many men, many temperaments; and in this matter of constitutional amendments these seem to be multifariously minded.

THE NEW HALL OF FAME.

Throughout the country municipal life has been rendered more richly varied by the election. Beginning as near home as is seemly, the new Mayor of Buffalo, FRANK X. SCHWAB, is a brewer who "featured" his campaign with a promise that he would go to Washington in person and fight for a modification of the Volstead act permitting beer. As a preliminary to that expedition he promsed to abolish the present Police Dry Squad, which has measurably enforced the law. A last moment incursion by WILLIAM H. ANDERSON in behalf of the Anti-Saloon League is held to have been the decisive factor in Mr. SCHWAB'S success, "down-State" interference being resented.

In Cleveland FRED KOHLER is known to fame as a former Chief of the Police Department who was dismissed from his post by the Civil Service Commission on charges of conduct unbecoming to an officer. The charge was filed "by former Mayor NEWTON D. BAKER." Far from explaining his past, Mr. KOHLER did not make a single speech throughout his campaign, relying on his personal popularity and a house-to-house canvass. In the face of the utmost effort at suppression, however, it has leaked out that he is a friend of the people.

Indiana has a truly notable addition to the lengthening list of Who's Hoosiers. LEW (SAMUEL L.) SHANK was elected Mayor of Indianapolis by a majority of some 20,000, the largest ever given in the city. He began life as a clog dancer and has returned to the vaudeville stage at intervals ever since. He is also known as an auctioneer and as a farmer. His nomination found him in the rustic guise. He said:

> I've got 350 chickens, all with the gapes, doggone 'em; about twenty-five pigs, nearly all of them with the cholera; half a dozen calves—the rest died because I gave them too much skimmed milk; four goats, one billy and three nannies. Believe me, a farmer earns his money!

With this evidence as to his fitness for civic life, he entered the campaign resolutely but without illusions. "I "know that I will not receive the sup-"port of a single newspaper in In-"dianapolis. I know they will all "jump on me." They did. Business men and the self-righteous of all kinds fought Mr. SHANK "to the last ditch, regardless of political affiliations." But his fame as a farmer-laborer carried him through—that and sweet memories of his political past. For, when a candidate once before, he sent a carload of watermelons into the San Juan Hill district of the Athens of the Middle West.

It is, however, the advancing City of Youngstown, Ohio, that bears the palm for the popular recognition of leadership. About three months ago Mr. G. L. OLES came in from the country unknown to fame and established his headquarters at a hotel. His campaign centred in a demand that the street-car service be discontinued and a system of buses installed. Those buses alone would probably have elected him, but he promised also to dismiss the entire police force if it did not mend its ways, and, moreover, to permit "spooning" in the city parks under protection of the law. Thus Mayor-elect OLES ran far ahead of the candidates of both Republican and Democratic organizations.

Bilious critics contend that democracy tends inevitably to a drab uniformity. How wrong they are may be seen by any candid observer who will look abroad in the land at the result of municipal elections.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

It Required No Name to Carry It.

So attractive as a subject for any writer with a capacity for deep emotion and the ability to express it was the arrival of the Olympia at Washington and the placing of the Unknown American in the Capitol that there is nothing surprising in the fact that many admirable and moving descriptions of this event have been printed. Some of these were over the names of well-known journalists and others were anonymous. Curiously enough, and yet congruously enough, what seems to us to have been quite the best of the several narratives of those moving scenes that formed the beginning of today's culminating ceremony at Arlington was produced by a writer whose work was done under the veil of deep anonymity which covers, in almost every instance, the workers for The Associated Press.

Its excellence recalled to readers with long memories the account of the hurricane that swept the harbor of Samoa—recalled it, that is, by being a perfect account of an impressive event and one which, avoiding all the near dangers of sentimentalism, yet was able to touch the heart and even to start the tears in sensitive eyes.

The unknown writer on the Unknown American wrote finely without any obvious attempt at fine writing. He was eloquent without being oratorical or rhetorical, and his simplicity was not a laborious search after short words—the search which, for anybody who knows the utility of longer words in their proper place and season, is merely an offensive form of trickery—a grasp for popularity through aping illiteracy on the theory that illiterates are numerous and like it. Of course, that theory is fallacious.

THE TIMES was glad to give prominent place to this dispatch of The Associated Press as another of many proofs of the high ability which that greatest of news-gathering bodies has at its command.

Standard Sizes Are Best.

Postmaster MORGAN makes what he evidently hopes will be, and what ought to be, a moving appeal. He wants people to stop using, especially in the approaching season of heavy work for all post offices, envelopes that are much smaller than the regular standard sizes. These departures from normality, he says, make no end of trouble for the postal clerks and not a little for those to whom the diminutive communications are sent. They are difficult to put through the machines that cancel stamps and print the postmarks, their addresses are likely to be rendered illegible by these additions to their already crowded writing, and they are apt to fall out of the bundles into which letters are tied and so get lost.

These are all good reasons for not using little envelopes, but there are just as many and just as good ones, at least from the standpoint of editors and others who have to handle large numbers of letters, for not using envelopes more than ordinarily large and those of unusual shapes. All such eccentricities make bother and produce irritation. Manuscripts so enclosed are much more exposed to injury in the mails than they would be in envelopes approximating rather closely one or the other of the two standard sizes.

That they attract the recipient's attention is true, and the desire to do so probably explains their use, but it is not a pleased attention; and though resentment of inconvenience endured should not affect judgment of the offering in such clumsy containers, there is danger that it sometimes does.

And why do not people who foresee that possibly their manuscript will not be found available, and therefore enclose with it what is called a "stamped and self-addressed envelope," use for that eatimable purpose an envelope that can lie flat instead of one that has to be folded up? Surely if a manuscript is worth sending it is worth sending right—in the way that insures its arrival in best shape and the getting of the warmest welcome.

Fair Play.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If, as most people suspect, Ambassador Harvey was given his ticket to the Court of St. James's as a reward for lambasting President Wilson, don't you think it about time he got his return ticket for lambasting the rest of us?

THE "UNKNOWN" DEAD.

From Today's Providence Journal.

The "unknown" dead? Not so; we know him well,
Who died for us on that red soil of France;
Who faced the fearful shock of gas and shell,
And laughed at death in some blood-strewn advance.

Nameless, in truth, but crowned with such a name
As glory gives to those who greatly die:
Who marched, a simple soldier, with the flame
Of duty bidding him to Calvary.

He is all brothers dead, all lovers lost.
All sons and comrades resting over there:
The symbol of the knightly, fallen host.
The sacred pledge of burdens yet to bear.

Mangled and torn, for whom we pray today,
Whose soul rose grandly to God's peaceful throne,
Leaving to us this quiet, shattered clay,
Silent and still—unnamed—but not unknown.

JOHN R. RATHOM.

STEEL PRICES.

Consideration of Workers, Wages and Costs of Production.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In yesterday's edition you published a letter from Mr. John R. Dunlap, editor of Industrial Management, in which a plea is made by Mr. Dunlap to reduce steel rail and pig iron prices to $28 and $14 per ton, respectively, from what he is pleased to call "the present absurdly high prices." For some months Mr. Dunlap has been agitating this question. Unfortunately, his arguments are based on an entire misconception of facts and upon data which are so far wrong that it makes his arguments positively ludicrous. As his data are wrong, his deductions fall in the same category. Without taking up a long argument on the subject, permit me to point out some of the errors contained in his letter to you.

Item 1. He states that there are 1,200,000 steel workers unemployed at the present time. A careful estimate made some weeks ago showed that at the very peak of employment (July, 1918) in the steel industry there were about 630,000 steel workers employed. Figures from the Census Bureau for the 1919 census of manufactures are as yet confidential. I have seen these figures, however, and can assure you that the total is markedly lower than the estimate I have given you above, being of such nature as to confirm that estimate as probably correct for the date specified.

Item 2. He states that steel prices are "absolutely certain to come down—in keeping with all other staple commodities." The facts are as follows: Finished steel is now 30 per cent. above the 1913 price; some items, such as bars, are actually below the 1913 price. Other "staple commodities" as reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics in Washington show furniture and furnishings 123 per cent. above 1913, building materials 93 per cent. above 1913, cloths and clothing 87 per cent. above 1913, fuel and lighting 78 per cent. above 1913, chemicals and drugs 62 per cent. above 1913, foods 46 per cent. above 1913, miscellaneous items 46 per cent. above 1913, and the general average of all commodities 52 per cent. above 1913. These figures make his statement regarding the relation of steel to other commodities look silly. To get steel into line with other commodities, its price would have to be advanced some 20 per cent.

Item 3. He says that the "railroads are starving for steel—because of war prices." Finished steel during the war reached 5.334 cents per pound. Today it is 2.163 cents per pound, a cut of 60 per cent. below the war price. These figures are the average prices of the seven largest tonnage products of steel, constituting 88 per cent. of the entire output. They include bars, rails, beams, plates, sheets, wire and pipe. Can Mr. Dunlap point to any other industry in the whole broad United States which has liquidated to this extent?

Item 4. Mr. Dunlap ridicules the statements, some of them under sworn testimony, regarding the increases in costs of producing iron and steel. His ridicule does not make freight charges any lighter, nor does it reduce the excessive labor costs under which steel makers are still struggling. In freight alone there is a non-reducible factor of from $7 to $8 per ton extra, beyond the freight charges of 1913. This is for finished steel. The excess for pig iron is between $5 and $6 per ton. The actual cost of producing pig iron was recently estimated by a large producer at $24.87 per ton, without allowing one cent for profit. This iron was being sold at $19.25 per ton. It is now $19. If the producing companies had not been able, during the fat years of the war, to pile up a surplus from which these losses could be taken, how long do you suppose they could keep on meeting their present payrolls?

This whole situation simmers down to a question of economic facts and economic forces. Mr. Dunlap can no more influence the situation with his misstatements than could King Canute keep back the tides of the ocean when he had his throne set upon the sands at low tide and majestically ordered the tides not to come up the beach.

Vassar at New Haven.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your readers know of the national campaign to raise $3,000,000 as an endowment fund to increase the present inadequate salaries of the Vassar College faculty.

The necessity and propriety of the undertaking are recognized by the public, and we believe that people generally are willing to encourage it.

The New Haven alumnae of Vassar are planning to help their Alma Mater by conducting a canteen on Saturday, Nov. 12, for the large number of visitors who will be in New Haven for the Yale-Princeton football game. Coffee and sandwiches will be served. The stand will be conveniently situated on Central Avenue, close to the official parking place for the bowl.

Critics and the Public.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Under the heading of "Playwright and Critic" you have in today's TIMES an editorial which contains the following sentence: "What the general reader wants to know is whether a given production is worth the box-office price," &c. That is exactly true, but that is also exactly the information dramatic critics never seem willing to give. The trouble with the critics is that they have no sort of idea of the taste of the public. It has become proverbial that if a critic says a play is good the public will not like it, and vice versa. The critic begins by thinking Shakespeare is worth the box-office price, while all the world knows very well it is not.

Personally I am very fond of the theatre. I read with care every day all that the critics have to say about plays, not because I believe that they will tell me what I will want to see but because I enjoy that sort of reading. Then I go out and ask some of my friends what is good to see, and I always get information that I can rely on. These friends would probably be unable to put into flowing phrases fit for publication their reasons for liking a play, but I know that their taste is my taste, just because they are the general public and I am the general public. And so I go where they tell me to go, and they go where I tell them to go—and this exchange of ideas sells more tickets than all the criticism put together. When the newspapers discover this fact and give the people criticism free from technical inanities, with plain, straightforward statements of facts from the people's point of view, they will exert real influence upon theatregoers. Of "Soviet Russia."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In connection with the editorial in today's TIMES concerning an organization that is collecting relief funds for Soviet Russia, and is using in the appeals it sends out a reference to the story of how Captain T. T. C. Gregory overthrew the Soviet Government of Hungary in 1919, acting in consultation with Mr. Hoover, may I ask you to correct a slight error in the name of the organization as reported by you? The name is not "The Friends of Russia," but "The Friends of Soviet Russia."

MILLER SEES PERIL IN PATERNALISM

LAGUARDIA TAKES ISSUE

"This Is 1921, Not 1900," He Says in Arguing for a State Welfare Policy.

Contrary opinions concerning the danger of paternalism in government were expressed by Governor Nathan L. Miller and F. H. LaGuardia, President of the Board of Aldermen, at the opening of the East Harlem Health Centre, 345 East 116th Street, yesterday.

The Governor, who spoke in the afternoon, took issue with Dr. Louis I. Harris, head of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases of the New York City Health Department, who said that he had no fear that such health and welfare movements as typified by the opening of the Health Centre would lead to Government paternalism. The Governor asserted that he believed that there was such danger and said there was a line beyond which the State could not go without destroying individualism and self-help. The Governor, however, declared that his objection to State aid applied only to adults and said there was no limit, in his opinion, as to what the State should do for the health and welfare of its children.

Mr. LaGuardia, who spoke in the evening, expressed dissent with the Governor's view. "That was paternalism twenty years ago," he said, referring to the Governor's objection to too great an extension of the State's welfare activities. "We are living in 1921, not 1900."

Mr. LaGuardia then referred to individual cases of illness and destitution which had come to his personal notice. "I don't care whether you call it paternalism or not," he said. "I don't care what the Governor says. I am going to try to correct and change these conditions. Don't let the word paternalism scare you. It won't scare any progressive, public-spirited official."

The Constitution and Human Rights.

Mr. LaGuardia said that there had been a lot of talk about the Constitution and the rights of the individual at Albany last year during discussion of the welfare measures.

"The Constitution doesn't permit an individual to endanger the health of his employes and the community by insanitary conditions in his factory," he said. "The Constitution doesn't permit an individual to exploit other human beings. What an individual may receive from the State or community is only that to which he contributed and part of that which is rightfully his."

Governor Miller said that Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, State Health Commissioner, who was also among the speakers, had dreamed of a State-wide system of health centres to be inaugurated by the State. The Governor said he could not promise to support this plan. Upon his arrival at the Health Centre the Governor was greeted by a group of children, some physically perfect and others bearing evidence of undernourishment. It was with these in mind that he made his speech.

"There is one field of effort where I would not draw any line whatever," he said. "I am led to say it from what I observed, before coming up here, of these little children. The adult should be shown the way, and, of course, in the case of sickness, it is very difficult to use reason and not sympathy. The healing of the sick is one of the most Christian things that can possibly be done, and you cannot talk about 'paternalism,' or any other kind of an 'ism' when it comes to the relief of distress. When distress exists, it must be relieved, and you can talk about whether it was done in the right way or not after it has been relieved.

"But in the matter of these little children, I do not think there is any limit to the obligation which the State owes to see that so far as possible they are prevented from being either mental, moral or physical cripples. There is no danger of being paternal when it comes to the provision for the future citizens of the State. There is no danger of interfering with self-help when you are dealing with infants.

War Showed the State Remiss.

"Now the experience in the last war, which we could not have had except for the selective service method of recruiting an army—the large proportion of those physically unfit shows that the State had been remiss in the past in providing for its future citizens. In that field, Dr. Biggs, I am prepared to go the limit."

Earlier in his speech the Governor said that he could not agree with Dr. Harris that there was no danger of governmental paternalism in these health and welfare movements.

"I think that there are a great many paternalistic tendencies which are dangerous to the progress of our people," he said. "I think the future of the race depends, as it has in the past, in the main upon the individual.

"I think the individual owes a duty to the State to keep well, if he can, as well as that the State owes a duty to the individual to afford him an opportunity to keep well. In our relief work, I think we have to be very guarded not to impair the ability for self-help, and that is one of the serious problems that have to be considered in that work.

"These mothers that we saw going through the building—it was not paternal to show them how to take care of their babies. It was teaching them how to help themselves. But I do not think that the State owes an obligation to keep people in swaddling clothes. I think it is a good thing for them sometimes to fall down and bruise themselves in order to learn better and how not to do it again. I think it is a very unfortunate thing to the individual and to the progress of the individual if he is educated to lean too much upon the State or upon charitable organizations."

Governor Miller commended the establishment of the Health Centre and said he believed that it was an experiment which would prove valuable. Other speakers included Robert W. de Forest of the American Red Cross, Miss Lillian D. Wald of the Henry Street Visiting Nurse Service, Dr. Royal S. Copeland, City Health Commissioner, and Homer Folks of the State Charities Aid Association. Dr. James Alexander Miller, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Council of the East Harlem Health Centre, presided.

Objects of the Health Centre.

The Health Centre, which is an experiment designed to co-ordinate the activities of public and private health and welfare agencies, was established by the New York Chapter of the American Red Cross, which will bear the entire expense for three years. Each organization joining will preserve its autonomy, but it is expected that closer co-operation between them will follow their membership in the Health Centre.

The City Department of Health, the New York Chapter of the American Red Cross, the American Social Hygiene Association, the Association for the Aid of Crippled Children, the Association for the Prevention and Relief of Heart Disease, the Catholic Charities, the Charity Organization Society, the Committee on Dispensary Development, the Henry Street Visiting Nurse Service, the New York Tuberculosis Association, the Occupation Therapy Society of New York, the State Charities Aid Association, the Maternity Centre Association and the United Hebrew Charities already have headquarters in the Health Centre.

Other local agencies co-operating are the Babies' Dairy, 342 East 116th Street; the Federation Settlement, 236 East 105th Street; Harlem House, 311 East 116th Street; Harlem Council of Women, 232 East 110th Street; New York Diet Kitchen Association, 453 East 121st Street; St. Timothy Community Centre, 235 East 111th Street, and the Union Settlement, 237 East 104th Street.

Governor Miller and the other speakers were entertained at luncheon at the home of Mrs. Whitelaw Reid. Mr. LaGuardia and the speakers at the evening meeting were entertained at dinner at the home of Adolph Lewisohn. Mayor Hylan, who had been expected to speak, sent word that he was unable to attend.

HEALTH WEEK PROCLAIMED.

Mayor Urges Public to Promote Things Tending to Clean Living.

> "City of New York,
> "Office of the Mayor.
> "PROCLAMATION.
> "To the People of the City of New York:
> "Whereas there is to be a convention of health officers of the United States and Canada held under the auspices of the American Public Health Association the week of Nov. 14, and the health officers from all foreign countries have been invited to attend the same, and
> "Whereas the activities of the New York City Department of Health and of other city departments safeguarding the health of the people and keeping the city in sanitary condition are to be made the subjects of study by the visiting health officers, and
> "Whereas there is to be a great health exposition held under the auspices of the New York City Department of Health and the American Public Health Association for the display of all the important health activities of the city and the education of the people in health matters; now
> "Therefore, I, John F. Hylan, Mayor of the City of New York, proclaim that the week of Nov. 13 to 19 be celebrated by the people of the City of New York as a Health Week, and urge that the people participate through all public and private organizations in the promotion of those things which contribute most to clean living and good health and the prolongation of life. I would urge a special consideration of the prevention and correction of undernourishment in children. I would urge the hearty co-operation of all public and private agencies in the celebration of this Health Week.
> "In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the City of New York to be affixed.
> "Done in the City of New York this 10th day of November, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-one. JOHN F. HYLAN.
>
> "JOHN F. SINNOTT, Secretary to the Mayor."

ARMISTICE.

How close the white-ranked crosses crowd,
Beneath the Flag which seems to be
A soaring, hovering glory-cloud
On lily-fields of Calvary!

Ours, ours they are—
Those dear, dead knights who won the Golden Star;
On far French hills, here in our churchyards lying,
Or in war's wildest wreckage—still unfound
In those torn, piteous fields which they, in dying,
Have for us all forever sanctified.
We cannot hallow more that holy ground;
All glory we would give them pales beside
The eternal splendor of those men, who thought
But of the sacred cause for which they fought.

And now, the battles done,
They who gave all, 'tis they alone who won.
In their great faith there was no dark misgiving;
They saw no base self-seekers don the mask
Of high ideals, to batten on the living.
Their vision was a world secure and just Won by their victory—their only task
To crush one hideous foe; and in that trust
They sped with eager feet, and paid the price,
Unstinting, of the last great sacrifice.

That faith they hold.
The peace for which they battled was pure gold,
And in their splendid zeal they died unshaken.
Knowing such sacred beauty fills their sleep,
Shall we yet mourn, or wish they might awaken
To find the golden peace so far debased?
Should we not rather pray that they may keep
Their shining vision spotless, undefaced,
Until the world, repentant and redeemed,
Grow to the measure of the one they dreamed?

So let them rest.
They gave for us their dearest and their best;
They keep the holiest. Yet for their giving
Our fittest tribute is not grief and tears,
But the same ardent vision in our living
As that which shone, compelling, in their eyes
Uncowed by Death and all his dreadful fears.
Then, when at last these glorious dreamers rise,
The world we keep for them might almost seem
The living substance of their lofty dream!

How white the crosses—white and small!
With what proud love the Flag appears
To mother them! . . . . And then it all

UNFOLD AMERICA AT VICTORY BALL

Glittering Historic Pageant Acted at the Waldorf Before Dawn of Armistice Day.

STAGE STARS AS NATIONS

American Legion Posts' Benefit for Disabled Soldiers Also a Stirring Military Ceremony.

The Victory Ball, with stirring military ceremony and a brilliant historic pageant of America, attracted a large assembly last night to the Waldorf-Astoria. As a patriotic function, and continuing until long after midnight, it literally anounced the dawn of Armistice Day, which is being observed nationally.

For some weeks, society, stage and the American Legion Posts, have been laboring hard to make the affair a success, and their efforts were rewarded. The ball and pageant will be a yearly event, as a national tribute and source of income to America's disabled soldiers.

The event was organized under the leadership of four posts, Richard J. McNally Post 263, Manhattan Naval Post 538, United States Marine Post 300, and the Jane A. Delano Post 344, representatives of the army, navy, marine nd Red Cross.

Dancing began rather early in the grand ballroom, but the pagent was not staged until midnight, as the cast was recruited from the Broadway attrctions. At midnight the music ceased, and the lights were dimmed, as a bugler of the World War sounded attention. There was a moment of silence, in token of respect to those who made the supreme sacrifice, and then a spot of pink dawn appeared, forming a halo about the trumpeter as the silvery notes rang out. The voice of a sentry called out Armistice Day and then "All's Well." The call was carried from room to room, until it reached the last sentry, when the lights blazed out anew.

Chant Sentry Clarion Call.

Ten sentries in the uniforms of the ten allied nations stood on the stage and chanted the sentry clarion call, while, as if from the unseen, came the benediction, "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men."

The decorations of the ballroom, draped in the national colors, the flags of the ten allied nations, made an appropriate background for what was an unusually brilliant function.

The pageant, "America," by Isabel Lowden, was produced under the direction of Harry Macfarlane Webster, with costumes and setting by Raymond Sovey. Robert Edmund Jones was the designer of the allegorical costumes.

"The Voice of History," by Tyrone Power, preceded the first episode, of discovery and exploration. Among those taking part in this were Violet Kemble Cooper, Ina Claire, Norman Trevor, Cyril Keightley and Allan Pollock.

The colonists came next, and a group of Puritan girls were down on the program as "respectable maidens." Lawrence Grossmith appeared as John Smith, and Rose Rolanda was the beautiful Pocahontas. It was like seeing history come to life, with John Drew as Lord Baltimore, Ernest Glendinning as James Oglethorp and Howard Lunt as William Penn.

The third episode represented the struggle for independence, in which Eva Le Gallienne appeared as the spirit of the new-born nation. Hugh Cameron appeared as George Washington, and George Fawcett as Benjamin Franklin in this tableau.

Coming of All Nations.

The coming of all nations, immigration, made episode four particularly colorful. Mrs. Leslie Carter represented England, and Lionel Barrymore, France. Some of the stars were supported by members of their company. For instance, Otis Skinner appeared as Spain, with Catherine Calvert and the cast of "Blood and Sand," Olive Wyndham as Rumania, Alma Tell as Portugal, Helen Ware as Palestine, and Hilda Spong appearing as Australia, were among others representing nations, also Thais Lawton, Martha Hedman, Marie Doro, Dorothy Donnelly and Adrienne Morrison.

In the birth of national attributes, in episode five, were Josephine Drake, Janet Beecher and Helen Menken, and brotherhood, the sixth and last episode, was symbolically represented by Mary Ryan, as the spirit of Belgium, while Marjorie Rambeau appeared as Victory, Margaret Vale as the spirit of sacrifice, and Elsie Ferguson as the angel of peace, against a background of soldiers, sailors and marines.

There were many official guests of honor, invitations having been accepted by Secretary of War John W. Weeks and Edwin Denby, Secretary of the Navy. Ambassadors of foreign countries were represented also in the official boxes.

Disabled Soldiers and Nurses in Boxes.

Special tribute was paid the disabled soldiers and Red Cross nurses, for whom distinguished service boxes were reserved. Miss Maud Leland entertained Miss Julia Chester Wells, Honorary President of the Daughters of the Cincinnati; Mrs. Scott Cameron, appointed to represent the Daughters of the Cincinnati; Mrs. Sanford Bissell, appointed to represent the Colonial Governors; Miss Leland appointed to represent the Colonial Dames of New York State; Mrs. Cass Gilbert, appointed to represent the Society of Mayflower Descendants; Mrs. J. Edgar Bull, appointed to represent the Huguenot Society; Mrs. Frederic W. Rhinelander and Mrs. Hamilton Fish Kean.

A unique feature of the affair was the entertainment provided by the "Ain't We Got Fun" Committee, headed by William Collier, and assisted by prominent funmakers.

Walter Scott was Executive Chairman of the committees, and Mrs. William Collier Hays and Mrs. Edward N. Benedick, heads of the Arrangement Committee. There was an imposing list of committees and of patrons and patronesses. The Committee on Invitations and Programs were headed by Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, Mrs. August Belmont, Mrs. William Kinnicutt Draper and Miss Ruth Morgan.

NOBEL PRIZE AWARDED TO ANATOLE FRANCE

Honor in Literature Is Bestowed for the Fourth Time Upon a Frenchman.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 10.—The Swedish Academy today awarded the 1921 Nobel Prize in literature to Anatole France, the French author.

Anatole France is the fourth Frenchman to receive the Nobel Prize in literature since its foundation in 1901 by Dr. Alfred B. Nobel, a Swedish chemist, the inventor of dynamite, who established in his will a foundation of $9,000,000, the proceeds of which provide for annual prizes of about $40,000 each in physics, medicine, chemistry, literature and peace.

The other French writers to receive the literature prize were: René Francois Armand Sully-Prudhomme, 1901; Frederic Mistral, 1904 (who received only half the prize, the other half going to Jose Echegaray of Spain), and Romain Rolland, 1915.

FOR DISABLED VETERANS.

Sale of Articles Made by Wounded to Be Held at Lord & Taylor's.

There will be a sale of articles made by the wounded soldiers now in New York hospitals and the vicinity on Monday, Nov. 14, at Lord & Taylor's store, fifth floor. Articles from the dugout, made by ex-service men who are taking vocational training, will be included. The sale will be held under the auspices of the "Lest We Forget Committee," among whom are Mrs. Arthur Terry, Chairman; Mrs. Francis Rogers, Mrs. Richards Taylor, Mrs. J. West Roosevelt, Mrs. Henry Parish, Mrs. Perry Trafford, the Misses White, Mrs. Stanley Haskins, Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Mrs. Myron Shaefer, Mrs. W. A. Barstow, Miss Frances Hoppin, Mrs. Francklyn Lawrence, Miss Maud Bowers and Mrs. Theodore Banks.

Many of the veterans who have made these things are bed-ridden; some are able to be up. The entire proceeds of this sale go directly to the men. The output of these soldiers this year is more than double last year's, indicating a large increase in the number of soldiers in the hospitals. The hospitals represented are the United States Marine, Polyclinic, Otisville, Seton, Brooklyn Naval Reconstruction and the Dugout.

FORCE THEIR WAY INTO LLOYD GEORGE'S HOUSE

But Labor Deputation of Mayors, Aldermen and Councillors Find He Is Out.

Copyright, 1921, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—A labor deputation consisting of thirty Mayors, Aldermen and Councilors of London boroughs made a bold bid to interview the Prime Minister today by forcing their way into his official residence in Downing Street.

They wished to see him about increased relief for the unemployed and had been informed, beforehand that the Prime Minister could not receive them, but the deputation were determined.

They marched to the Prime Minister's door, rang the bell and demanded admittance. The doorkeeper had his instructions and was closing the door when two members of the deputation placed their feet on the mat and in a moment the whole thirty of them were inside the house.

It so happened that the Prime Minister was not at home, being engaged in the House of Commons, so the deputation were compelled to retire with the assurance, however, that Lloyd George would discuss their grievances with the Cabinet.

$100,000 MEMORIAL TO JACOB H. SCHIFF

Felix M. Warburg Founds Chair of Civic Education in Teachers College.

MRS. H. H. JENKINS A GIVER

Adds $50,000 to $150,000 She Had Contributed Toward Endowment of Department of Nursing.

The Trustees of Teachers College announced at a meeting yesterday a gift of $100,000 from Felix M. Warburg, one of that board, for the founding of a chair of Civic Education, in memory of Jacob H. Schiff, and a gift of $50,000 from Mrs. Helen Hartley Jenkins, for the endowment of the Department of Nursing. Mrs. Jenkins already had given $150,000 for this purpose.

Mr. Warburg's gift, it was announced, will provide special consideration for the training of American school children and foreign-born adults in the duties of good citizenship in the American democracy. "This gift," the announcement says, "enables the college to make more vital than ever before the work it is now doing in training for better citizenship, which includes (1) special courses for teachers of scouting and recreational leadership, where the opportunities are especially rich for making pupils aware of their relations to their civic and social groups; (2) courses for training teachers of English for foreigners, and (3) courses for instructors in the Americanization of the foreigner, in co-operation with the Department of Education of the State of New York.

Special Research Work.

"These opportunities for the preparation of teachers are being supplemented by special researches to improve citizenship training, which has been made possible through the apointment of Dr. Albert Shiels as Associate Director of Field Studies in the recently established Institute of Educational Research of Teachers College. Through this institute, research in education is being placed on the same basis as that in medicine and engineering. Dr. Shiels is well known in New York as former Associate Superintendent of Schools and former Director of the Department of Research and Investigation under the New York Board of Education. He was later Superintendent of Schools at Los Angeles for six years. His present work at Teachers College is to direct research and field studies in civic education for the purpose of making available for teachers the best practice gleaned from experiments now being conducted in many cities in this country.

"This gift to Teachers College has special significance for civic education, since the college is in a position materially in making any new program for civic training effective in the near future, through its many advanced students who are accepting each year positions of leadership in schools all over the country. This year the college has enrolled over 3,300 students, of whom over 1,000 are advanced students taking post graduate studies in education leading to higher degrees. These figures show that Teachers College has enroled this year more post graduate students in education than all of the other colleges and universities of this country combined. The possibilities for helping the cause of good citizenship are apparent."

Nurses' Training Standard.

Referring to Mrs. Jenkins's gift to the Department of Nursing, the trustees said the work of the department had materially raised the standard of nurses' training throughout the country during the last twenty years. "The college instruction in this field is of an advanced type intended only for registered nurses who have already graduated from hospital training schools. Through the instruction at the college, these nurses are prepared to be teachers in schools of nursing, superintendents of hospitals, or public health nurses. From six students in 1901, the enrolment has grown to 488 registered nurses in 1921. Altogether, including attendance on Summer sessions, some 3,000 nurses have received instruction in this department in the last twenty years."

The trustees also announced the appointment of Dr. James F. Hosic, of the Chicago Normal College, as Associate Professor of Education, to have charge of the extramural courses of Teachers College, and of Dr. Rudolph Pintner, of Ohio State University, as Associate Professor of Educational Psychology.

MRS. DUSTIN'S OWN ESTATE $5,705,625

John D. Archbold's Widow Wills Bulk of Personalty to Family and Charities.

The personal estate of Mrs. Annie Mills Dustin, who was the widow of John D. Archbold when she was married, on Dec. 12, 1918, to Charles W. Dustin, former Judge of the Court of Appeals of Ohio, was appraised yesterday at $5,705,625. As Mrs. Dustin was a resident of Thomasville, Ga., when she died, on March 22 last, the total value of her real and personal estate was not disclosed. She had property in New York, including real estate, valued at $1,578,852.

The New York assets included her Tarrytown residence and thirteen acres of land, appraised at $90,000; personalty valued at $28,988, of which $21,249 covers the value of the contents of an apartment at 375 Park Avenue, and securities appraised at $1,406,401. The largest stock holdings were Standard Oil of New York, $498,675; General Electric, $335,693; Seaboard National Bank, $77,140; National City Bank, $86,982; Childs Company, $68,902, and Vacuum Oil Company, $39,060.

Mrs. Dustin divided her residuary estate among her children, John F. Archbold, Mrs. Mary A. Van Beuren and Mrs. Anna A. Saunderson. Her husband and her sister, Rebecca A. Stahl of Evanston, Ill., received $100,000 each. Ten thousand dollars each went to Marjorie S. King and Annie S. Fordyce, nieces, of Evanston. Caddie and Josephine Mills, cousins, and Anne A. Miller, niece, received $5,000 each.

The charitable bequests were: $20,000 each to the Society for Improving the Condition of the Poor and the Charity Organization Society; $10,000 each to Tarrytown Hospital, Old Ladies' Home, St. Christopher's Home at Dobbs Ferry, Woman's Hospital, Lincoln Hospital and Home, St. John's Guild, Children's Aid Society and Methodist Episcopal Hospital, Brooklyn, and $5,000 to the Methodist Episcopal churches of Coudersport, Pa., Robin's Nest and Tarrytown.

Mrs. Dustin inherited $12,000,000 of the $41,000,000 estsate of John D. Archbold, who died in 1916.

Location of the Infantorium.

The address of the Infantorium, a home for the care of babies under one year of age, of which Joseph A. Judd is President, was incorrectly printed as 509 East Seventy-second Street on Nov. 7. The correct address is 509 East Seventy-seventh Street.

AGNES E. ROUDEBUSH WEDS R. S. WILLIS

Bride Walks With Her Father at Ceremony in St. George's—Her Sister Honor Maid.

The marriage of Reginald Satterlee Willis, son of Mrs. Adele Satterlee Willis and the late William Henry Willis, of 156 East Seventy-ninth Street, and Miss Agnes E. Roudebush, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Sherwood Roudebush of 127 East Ninteenth Street, was solemnized at 4:30 yesterday afternoon in St. George's Church, Stuyvesant Square, by the Rev. Karl Reiland.

The bride, in white satin veiled with old family point lace and wearing a point d'Alencon veil that came over her train, walked with her father, and carried orchids and lilies. She was attended by her sister, Miss Rosanne Roudebush, as maid of honor and by Mrs. Harold S. Willis as matron of honor, and who wore orchid colored satin and chiffon over blue, and small brown lace hats. They carried orchids with yellow and pink flowers. Two cousins of the bride, the little Misses Edith M. Twining, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kinsley Twining, and Rosanne Hoar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hoar, were flower girls in lace over yellow satin.

Announcement is made of the marriage of George Lober, a son of Axel G. Lober of 615 Fifth Avenue and a sculptor, and Miss Eleanor Regan, a daughter of Timothy Regan of Perth Amboy, on Wednesday in the Catholic Church at Matteawan. The families attended the marriage and a dinner followed at the Marseilles, this city.

Cohen—Shlan.

The marriage of Miss Marjorie Eleanor Shlan, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moe Shlan of 418 Central Park West, and Alfred B. Cohen, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cohen of 345 West Eighty-eighth Street, took place last evening at the St. Regis. The Rev. Dr. Edward Lissman officiated.

The bride, whose father gave her in marriage, wore a white velvet gown trimmed in pearls and a veil of old rose point lace, an heirloom in the family. Her sister, Mrs. Adolph Elsen, was matron of honor and the bridesmaids were the Misses Thyllis Cahn, Lucille Sobel, Ruth Bronson and Marrium Sishel.

Monett—Barry.

The marriage of Howard Bennett Monett of Columbus, Ohio, and Miss C. Marie Barry of Sag Harbor, L. I., took place yesterday at noon at the Church of the Transfiguration. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Earl Cubbison Cleland. The bride is a graduate of St. Luke's Hospital, class of '16, and served overseas in hospital work during the war. Mr. Bennett is a graduate of the Ohio State University and was a Lieutenant in the aviation service during the war.

NEGROES IN HISTORY.

Tableaux at America's Making Exposition Show Progress of Race.

Plantation melodies, negro camp-meeting hymns, rag time and plantation tableaux made up the program of "negro night" at America's Making Exposition at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory last night. More than 250 took part in the program.

The tableaux showed the part played by negro labor in the up-building of the country, in chronological order. The first tableau showed the African negro on his native soil, then came representations of cotton and tobacco fields and sugar plantations. One of the participants in the tableaux was Matthew Henson, who accompanied Admiral Peary on his dash to the North Pole.

Among the musical numbers were songs by negro composers, including H. T. Burleigh, R. Nathaniel Dett and J. Rosemond Johnson. Jesse A. Shipp, for many years stage manager for the famous Williams and Walker shows, arranged and directed the tableaux, Allie Ross led the orchestra, composed of fifty musicians, and the choruses were sung by 175 negro men and women.

The invited guests occupying the "royal box" were Alderman and Mrs. Charles Roberts, Alderman and Mrs. George Harris, James Weldon Johnson, poet and writer, and Mrs. Johnson; Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Erdman, Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Leach, Mr. and Mrs. L. Hollingworth Wood, Charles Gilpin, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Leeming, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Baldwin, Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, the writer, and Mrs. DuBois.

Tonight the Hungarian and Lettish groups participating in the exposition will present their special program.

REV. J. P. PETERS DIES FROM HEART ATTACK

FOUND THE SITE OF NIPPUR

Rector Emeritus of St. Michael's Episcopal Church Was Once Noted as a Civic Reformer.

The Rev. Dr. John Punnett Peters, archaeologist, Hebrew scholar, writer on Babylonian excavations and rector emeritus of St. Michael's Episcopal Church, Amsterdam Avenue and Ninety-ninth Street, died yesterday morning in the Presbyterian Hospital, this city. For the last three years he has been professor of New Testament in the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.

For eleven years Dr. Peters was Chairman of the Committee of Fourteen and from 1916 until his death he was honorary Chairman of this committee. It was this organization which struggled against commercialized vice in this city. The clergyman was one of its most active crusaders.

Dr. Peters was taken ill three weeks ago at Sewanee. He was brought here last Thursday and carried to the hospital. The cause of death was heart disease. He was in his sixty-ninth year. It was Dr. Peters who discovered the site of ancient Nippur and commenced the excavation of that city with results which carried the history of civilization back 2,000 years. From 1884 to 1891 Dr. Peters was professor of Old Testament languages at the Episcopal Divinity School, Philadelphia, and professor of Hebrew at the University of Pennsylvania, and it was out of these associations that grew his appointment to lead the first archaeological expedition sent out by that university to Babylonia.

The work of Dr. Peters for the civic life of New York was varied. From 1890 to 1916 he was President of the West Side Independent Club, which was organized in the interest of good government and civic improvement. His work on the traction problems of those days brought him the leadership in the fight of the Committee for the Relief of Amsterdam Avenue from Four Street Railway Tracks, the Chairmanship of the Committee for the Extension of Transfers on Street Car Lines, and the Presidency of the Transit Reform Committee of One Hundred.

George Henry Smillie.

George Henry Smillie, landscape painter, who was Recording Secretary of the National Academy of Design from 1892 to 1902, died suddenly yesterday of heart disease at his home on Pondfield Road, Bronxville, in his eighty-first year. Although his death is largely attributed to old age, he had not given up his work during the last year and one of his paintings was in the last exhibition of the National Academy. He devoted himself particularly to New England scenes.

FAIL TO FORCE VOTE ON INCOME SURTAX

House Tables Democrats' Motion to Accept the Senate's 50 Per Cent. Rate.

"INSURGENT" RANKS SPLIT

Tax Bill Sent to Conference After Republicans Promise a Straight-Out Vote on Surtax.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The House sent the Tax Revision bill to conference today without instructions to its managers on any of the 833 Senate amendments, but with the promise of Republican leaders that opportunity would be given later for a vote on acceptance of the 50 per cent. maximum income surtax rate.

The Democrats made a short but ineffectual fight to force an immediate vote on acceptance of the Senate amendment. Representative Garrett of Tennessee, the minority leader, offering a resolution instructing the House managers to accept the 50 per cent. rate. The move apparently caught the majority leaders unawares, but after a sharp debate Representative Mondell of Wyoming countered with a motion to lay the resolution on the table. This motion prevailed, 200 to 133.

"Insurgent" Republicans favoring the 50 per cent. rate over the House maximum of 32 per cent. split on the motion to table. Twenty-five of them voted against it, while one Democrat, Campbell of Pennsylvania, voted for the motion. The Republicans opposing were Andrews, Nebraska; Barbour, California; Beck, Wisconsin; Brown, Wisconsin; Cisgue, Minnesota; Cooper, Wisconsin; Crampton, Michigan; Curry, California; Dowell, Iowa; Frear, Wisconsin; Hoch, Kansas; James, Michigan; Keller, Minnesota; Kleczka, Wisconsin; Kopp, Iowa; Lampert, Wisconsin; Little, Kansas; A. P. Nelson, Wisconsin; J. M. Nelson, Wisconsin; Rosenbloom, West Virginia; Schall, Minnesota; Sinnott, Oregon; Taylor, Tennessee; Voight, Wisconsin, and Woodruff, Michigan.

Meyer London, Socialist, also voted against tabling the resolution.

Among the "insurgents" supporting the Mondell motion was Representative Dickinson of Iowa, a leader of the group who announced yesterday that an agreement had been made with the majority managers to let the bill go to conference without instructions, with the understanding that the House would vote separately on the surtax amendment before the conferees reached any agreement on it.

The tax bill then was ordered to conference and the House managers were announced as Representatives Fordney, Michigan; Green, Iowa, and Longworth, Ohio, Republicans; Garner of Texas and Collier of Mississippi, Democrats.

When the agricultural bloc in the Senate brought forward the surtax amendment it was the general opinion that the conferees would reduce the maximum rate to around 40 per cent., or 8 per cent. above the maximum originally agreed upon by the House. Proposals for a compromise at 42 per cent. have been put forward, but both the "insurgent" Republicans and the Democrats declare this is not acceptable.

LEAGUE AND GRANGE FIGHT TARIFF PLAN

Women Consumers Say Housekeeper and Dressmaker Would Suffer.

Protests against the American valuation plan in the Fordney Tariff bill were made yesterday in statements issued by Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw of the Consumers' Committee of Women and John A. McSparran, Master of the Pennsylvania Grange.

"The women of the United States above all other consumers," said Mrs. Laidlaw, "have reason to be thoroughly aroused against the proposal of the Fordney Tariff bill. It matters not whether a woman is a wage earner or the head of a family, or whether she is co-operating with a wage-earning husband to try and bring up a family, this bill affects her particular work as a homekeeper. Buttons and needles and thread are included in this iniquitous tariff measure. All the things that represent her particular home economies are pushed up in price beyond all reason. The dressmaker, the seamstress, will be affected—even the woman working in the factory, where she has to buy her own needles, is going to have a few more cents squeezed out of her, to the amount that represents, say, her carfare or her daily bread ration.

Mr. McSparran's statement, which was sent to the National Council of American Importers and Traders, Inc., said:

"The Western Congressmen have virtually served notice on Eastern industrial representatives that if we are to have protection for manufactured commodities we are to have protection for food products. The manufacturer in his continual effort to get special privileges from the Government in the form of tariff duties seeks to offset the tariff on food products by this valuation scheme.

"We cannot hope to sell extensively unless we buy regularly. If the manufacturer was willing to take profits such as agriculture secures he could pay good wages and this constant besieging of Congress for special privilege as against general welfare for high tariff on manufactures and low prices on food is neither decent nor patriotic and the scheme of American valuation when understood will be resented by farmer and general consumer alike."

SAYS HUNTINGTON IS 'BLUE BOY'S' OWNER

Collector Said to Have Acquired Gainsborough Painting at a Cost of $640,000.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Henry E. Huntington was in London when Duveen Brothers bought Gainsborough's Blue Boy and "The Tragic Muse," by Sir Joshua Reynolds.

"We now hear," says The Morning Post," that Mr. Huntington is the owner of Blue Boy at a cost of $640,000, it is said."

Dispatches from London in the middle of October told of the sale of the Gainsborough painting, owned by the Duke of Westminster, to Duveen brothers. It was asserted at the time that the Duveens had bought it on their own account.

The price paid for it was then reported to be £170,000.

MILK STRIKE WRIT BARS INTIMIDATION

Court Grants Order in Proceeding for Injunction Brought by Brooklyn Dealers.

NEW PEACE EFFORT FAILS

COPELAND TO UPHOLD LAW

Sheffield Ready to Submit New Contract, but Borden Company Refuses to Consider Plan.

Injunction proceedings against the milk drivers' unions on behalf of sixteen of the large distributing companies doing business in Brooklyn and Long Island were begun yesterday before the Supreme Court by counsel for the New York Milk Conference Board.

Upon the application of Attorney George W. Alger an order was granted by Supreme Court Justice Charles H. Kelby in Brooklyn, directing the officials of three locals to appear in court on Monday and show cause why they should not be enjoined from acts of violence against the property of the companies and from intimidating employes. The order contained a clause making it effective as soon as the defendants were served.

The petition, which named officers of Locals No. 584, 147 and 176, said that the strike was the result of a conspiracy to ruin the business of the milk companies and set forth alleged specific acts of violence. The distributers listed as plaintiffs in the action were the Borden's Farms Products Company; Beake's Dairy Company, Brooklyn Milk Company, R. S. Chardavoyne, Inc., Clover Farms, Inc., Empire State Dairy Company, W. M. Evans Company, High Ground Dairy Company, New York and Rider Dairies, Reid Ice Cream Company, M. H. Henken Dairy Company, Sheffield Farms Company, Willow Brook Dairy, Model Dairy Company, Meadow Brook Dairy, Orange County Milk Association and Premium Dairy Company.

Affidavits have been prepared and the papers are ready for the filing of a similar petition covering Manhattan and nearby territory. It was indicated that this application would not be placed before the Supreme Court until further evidence of union interference was apparent.

"We are prepared to act at once," said I. Elkin Nathans, Secretary of the board. "The matter is in the hands of our counsel. Union intimidation of employes and acts of violence will not be tolerated. The injunction has been a success in New Jersey and house-to-house deliveries are going forward without any interference, the restraining order having a good effect upon the strikers."

Copeland Peace Plan Fails.

Refusal by officials of the Borden's Farm Products Company to deal with their employes as members of the union resulted in the failure of Health Commissioner Dr. Royal S. Copeland's latest effort to settle the strike. The refusal followed an earlier conference in the Commissioner's office when officials of the Sheffield Farm Company agreed to work out an independent contract for their employes and submit it for the men's approval through Commissioner Copeland.

With the hopes of a settlement upset by the stand of the Borden company, Commissioner Copeland sent a new warning to the distributers that they must increase their milk supply and see that it conforms with Health Department standards. He also signed an order for legal proceedings to be begun in criminal court against the Sheffield Farms Company for selling old milk.

Ole Salthe, Director of the Bureau of Foods and Drugs of the Department of Health, said that Inspector James J. Cooney had confiscated 120 quarts of milk on Wednesday morning from a Sheffield wagon in Lexington Avenue, which was more than forty-eight hours old after pasteurization. This milk was more than seventy-two hours old, according to the caps, and unfit for use, he said. It was being sold from one of the huckster wagons operated under the new delivery system, according to Mr. Salthe. It later was condemned and destroyed.

"This is a criminal action and we will name as the defendants the Sheffield corporation," said Dr. Copeland. "We are going to watch the milk of all distributers and will protect the lives and health of our citizens."

When informed of the Commissioner's announcement, Daniel S. Horton, secretary of the Sheffield Farms Company, said:

"We have instructed our employes to see that all the health standards and regulations of the Health Department are carefully lived up to in the preparation of milk. There has been no intention on the part of this company to violate the law in any way. I believe that investigation will show that the wrong caps were placed on these bottles by some of our new men and that the milk in question was satisfactory and up to the standards set by law."

Under the group conference plan proposed by Commissioner Copeland, officials of the Sheffield Farms Company and sixteen former employes, members of the union, met with the Commissioner in his office. After a three-hour conference, closed to newspaper men, Dr. Copeland announced that Loton Horton, President of the concern, had agreed to go back to his Directors and prepare a contract to be submitted to the men.

"Our Board of Directors," said Mr. Horton, "will meet tomorrow morning and draw up a contract along lines dictated only by what they believe is best for the public and their own interests. This was decided upon at the meeting with Dr. Copeland. The open shop and the other questions, as far as this contract is concerned, are left to us. We will submit it and Dr. Copeland will resubmit it to the men, according to the present arrangement. This does not alter our determination not to have any dealings with the union, its representatives, or its shop stewards." Mr. Horton also said that it was the intention of the company to retain all capable men now employed.

Officials of the Borden company arrived, led by Patrick D. Fox, President, and a brief conference was held with twenty-five former employes, following which Commissioner Copeland announced that the possibility of a settlement had been upset by refusal of the proposal accepted by the Sheffield Farms officials.

"Mr. Fox told the strikers that he would not take them back except as individuals under any conditions," said Dr. Copeland, "and I saw the task was hopeless."

Mr. Fox issued a statement saying the company had employed 2,200 men, who must be considered, and added:

"The workers who attended the meeting at Dr. Copeland's office and others of the strikers will be considered for positions if they apply at any of the branches. We have engaged an industrial engineer to supervise the rebuilding of our personnel, we explained to the Commissioner, and would be able to operate on a highly efficient basis as soon as we were recruited to our full strength. We have 1,800 positions open at this time. The new men are being paid the old wage scale. This is the gist of the Borden company's stand. The firm is going right ahead, increasing its service daily, and hopes to resume normal deliveries in an unexpectedly short time."

The Borden Farm Products Company had 784 retail wagons in the street and thirty-six wholesale wagons. The firm expects to reach the one thousand mark in the number of wagons tomorrow. Approximately 571,000 quarts of milk were put out by the Borden company, about eighty per cent. of its normal supply. In Brooklyn a number of the firm's wagons made house to house deliveries, ringing bells and supplying milk to those desiring it. The company has 2,200 men of its 3,500 as new permanent employes, fully qualified to hold their jobs.

"The Sheffield Farms Company distributed 372,000 quarts, or seventy-two per cent. of normal. Ninety-one of the company's stores were operated and one hundred and thirty wagons were on the streets, compared with eighty-five on Wednesday. The smaller firms are making good progress. Virtually all the wholesale milk companies are putting out one hundred per cent. of their normal supply."

Commissioner Copeland asked that the press give warning to mothers that if they have any doubt as to the purity or freshness of milk for their children they should boil the milk.

C. Lawson of 30 West Eighty-fifth Street, an employe of the Sheffield Farms station in 125th Street, was attacked by striking drivers about 6 o'clock last evening at West Eighty-first Street and Broadway and beaten unconscious. Lawson, who said that he had received many threats, told the police that three unidentified men boarded a street car with him at 125th Street, and followed him from the car at West Eighty-first Street. They struck him from behind with a monkey wrench, he said, and kicked and beat him, despite the crowd passing in this busy section of Broadway. A citizen sent a call to the West Sixty-eighth Street station and Detective Foley found Lawson unconscious in the street with his face and head badly lacerated. The three men had disappeared.

Raymond M. Younghand of 509 West Fifty-first Street, a striker formerly employed by the Clover Farm Milk Dairy, was shot and seriously wounded in a fight with two unidentified men in Central Park about 9:30 o'clock last night. Younghand said that he was walking in the West Drive about 300 yards from Seventy-first Street when the two men appeared with drawn pistols and told him to put up his hands. While they were searching him Younghand said that he knocked up their pistols and, after a ten-minute fight, dropped one of his assailants and was turning to attack the other. The man put the pistol to Younghand's body and fired one shot, then escaped with his companion.

A citizen blew a police whistle and Policemen Koenig and Lawson sent Younghand to the Roosevelt Hospital, where a .45 calibre steel jacketed bullet was extracted from his stomach. The attending surgeons said that his chances for recovery were doubtful.

13 HURT IN MILK CRASH.

Surface Car Rams Truck in Third Avenue—None Badly Injured.

Fifteen persons were injured shortly after noon yesterday when a big automobile truck of the Borden Farm Products Company and a northbound Third Avenue surface car collided at 117th Street and Third Avenue. Most of the injured were cut by flying glass and splintered wood, and all were able to go home after being attended in the Harlem Hospital.

The Borden truck, operated by Joseph Rustin, with Policeman William Schurnick of the West 104th Street Station as a guard, was going east in 117th Street when the car struck it. Schurnick was thrown out. Passengers in the surface car fell to the floor and many were showered with glass. Traffic was tied up about twenty minutes.

The list of injured included Andrew Page of 150 East Forty-ninth Street; Julia Mooney of 1,729 Second Avenue; Samuel Alderman of 49 East Ninety-ninth Street; John Johnson of 227 East 126th Street; Policeman Schurnick of 336 East Twentith Street; Irving Bear of 602 West 125th Street; Joseph Leventraub of 1,464 Wilkins Avenue, the Bronx; Charles J. Clark, of 173 East Eighty-eighth Street; William Herbert of 214 East Eighty-third Street; Lawson of Grant of 42 East Eighty-fourth Street. Duncan Irish of 156 East 100th Street; Nellie Hyde of 1,516 Lexington Avenue; Patrick Moran of 205 East Sixty-sixth Street; Joseph Morse of 1,085 Park Avenue, and Christian Parigaris of 225 East Ninety-ninth Street.

DEBT CANCELLATION NOT FAVORED HERE

Copyright, 1921, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Reginald McKenna, interviewed at Southampton on his arrival from America, said:

"General opinion in America, I should say, is against cancellation of the war debts of the Allies. Where the question is understood, that is to say, where people appreciate that they can only be paid in the form of goods which the United States would have to accept, there is a desire either to cancel the debts or make them the subject of bargaining.

"But there is no general understanding in America of the nature of the foreign debts and it is very doubtful whether the United States Government, however willing individual members might be to cancel the debts, would have the power to do so in the teeth of public opinion.

"I should like to add that cancellation of debts due by the United Kingdom has never been under discussion, nor has any proposal been made to this effect so far as I am aware."

As regards trade conditions in America Mr. McKenna said:

"Although American Trade Board figures show a total of over 5,000,000 unemployed, I don't think it safe to draw conclusions from these figures. They are compiled in a way which would not be accepted as accurate in this country. Do doubt there is a considerable amount of unemployment in the United States, but it certainly is very much less there than it is here in England.

"So far as I can judge the worst of the bad times is over, but it would be too much to say that we may look for a revival of prosperity in the United States."

LOSES HER TIMES MEDAL.

Husband of Woman Who Won It as a Pupil 20 Years Ago Were Token.

A medal presented nearly twenty years ago by THE NEW YORK TIMES to a schoolgirl of Public School 133, Brooklyn, and since then treasured by her, was lost yesterday. The owner is Mrs. Fredrick W. Stechmann, 8,505 Ferris Street, Woodhaven, L. I., but at the time the medal was awarded to her for an essay on the history of New York City she was Miss Anna Voehringer.

The medal was one of many offered by THE TIMES to children of the public schools for essays on city history. These were to be based on a series of articles on the subject written for this newspaper by Thomas A. Janvier. The awards were offered as a commemoration of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the city. Mrs. Stechmann's medal had been worn as a watch-fob by her husband, who lost it yesterday afternoon on a Corona train at Rawson Street.

Confiscate $6,000,000 in Gold Being Taken Out of Germany

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 10.—German authorities yesterday found gold ingots to the value of 24,000,000 gold marks hidden in the coal of a locomotive on the Danish-German frontier near Flensburg.

The gold was confiscated and a man suspected of attempting to smuggle it out of Germany was arrested.

REFORMING THE CURRENCY

IT seemed at times as if they had succeeded in blocking an agreement on the conference report. At last, word was brought to the President by Representative Glass that the opposition of these gentlemen might succeed in killing the bill. The President up to this time, although fighting against great odds, showed no impatience or petulancy, but the message brought by Mr. Glass was the last straw. Looking at Mr. Glass, with a show of fire, and in a voice that indicated the impatience he felt, the President said: "Glass, have you got the votes in the committee to override these gentlemen!" (meaning O'Gorman and Reed). Glass replied that he had. "Then," said the President, "outvote them, damn them; outvote them!"

Mr. McAdoo came to the White House a few days later to make a report about the situation in the Senate, with reference to the Federal Reserve act. His report was most discouraging as to the final passage of the bill. He said that information from the hill was that the leaders of the opposition in the Senate were bent upon a filibuster and that the probabilities were that the Senate would finally adjourn without any action being taken on the Federal Reserve act.

This conversation took place on the White House portico, which overlooks the beautiful Potomac and the hills of Virginia. It was one of the hottest days in June—a day which left all of us who were about the President low in spirit. Only those who know the depressing character of Washington's midsummer heat can understand the full significance of this statement. The President on this occasion was seated in an old-fashioned rocker, attired in a comfortable, cool-looking palm beach suit. Mr. McAdoo reported the situation in detail and said that, in his opinion, it was hopeless to try to do more with the bill; that an impasse had been reached between the Senate and the House. The President quickly interrupted Mr. McAdoo, saying, with a smile, "Mac, when the boys at Princeton came to me and told me they were going to lose a football game, they always lost. We must not lose this game; too much is involved. Please, say to the gentlemen on the hill who urge a postponement of this matter that Washington weather, especially in these days, fully agrees with me, and that unless final action is taken on this measure at this session I will immediately call Congress in extraordinary session to act upon this matter." This challenge brought to the hill by Mr. McAdoo quickly did the job and the bill was soon on its way to the White House.

Handling Friends and Foes.

Mr. Wilson conducted the conferences in this matter with friends and foes alike with a quiet mastery and good temper, diametrically contrary to the reports sedulously circulated for political purposes that he was autocratic and refused to co-operate with the members of the Senate and House in an effort to pass legislation in which the whole country was interested.

We have only to recall the previous attempts made by former Administrations to legislate upon the currency question, especially the efforts of the Harrison and Cleveland Administrations, to understand and appreciate the difficulties that lay in the path of Woodrow Wilson in his efforts to free the credit of the country from selfish control and to push this vital legislation to enactment. Previous attempts had always resulted in failure, and sometimes in disaster to the Administrations in control at the time. The only evidence of these frequent but abortive efforts to pass currency legislation were large and bulky volumes containing the hearings of the expensive Monetary Commission that had been set up by Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island. As an historian and man of affairs, Woodrow Wilson realized the difficulties and obstacles that lay in his path in attempting to reform the currency, but he was not in the least daunted by the magnitude of the task which confronted him. He moved cautiously forward and pressed for early action at the first session of the Congress following his inauguration. He realized that with the passage of the tariff legislation, which always acts as a business depressant, it was necessary at the same time to have the stimulus the currency bill would afford when enacted into law. The split of 1896 in the Democratic ranks over the money question was an additional reason for cautious and well-considered action, if the Federal Reserve bill was to become a reality.

The presence of Mr. Bryan in the Cabinet and his well-known views on this question were strong reasons for watchful and careful prevision. It was obvious to Mr. Wilson from the outset that insurmountable difficulties lay in his path, but he brushed them aside as if they were inconsequential.

In the Committee on Banking and Currency, in both the Senate and House, were many ardent and devoted friends of Mr. Bryan, who thought that his radical views on the money question could be used as a rallying point for opposition to the President's plan for currency reform. But those who counted on Mr. Bryan's antagonism were doomed to disappointment and failure, for while it is true that Mr. Bryan found serious objections to certain parts of the bill, when these were eliminated he moved forward with the President in the most generous fashion and remained with him until the Federal Reserve act was made part of the law of the land.

In a Trying Debate.

It was in a conference with members of the Banking and Currency Committees that I first saw the President in action with the gentlemen of the Senate and House. He had invited the Democratic members of the Banking and Currency Committees to confer with him in the Cabinet room in the White House offices. From my desk in an anteroom I heard all the discussions of the bill. There was full, open discussion of the bill in all its phases at this conference in which were collected the conservatives of the East, the radicalists of the West, and those who came to be known as the "corn tassel." Representatives of the South, all holding widely divergent views and representing every shade of opinion, some of it sharply antagonistic to the President's views. Some of the members were openly hostile to the President, even in a personal way, particularly one Representative from the South, and some of the questions addressed to the President were ungracious to the verge of open insult. It was an exasperating experience, but Mr. Wilson stood the test with patience, betraying no resentment to impertinent questions, replying to every query with Chesterfieldian grace and affability, parrying every blow with courtesy and gentleness, gallantly ignoring the unfriendly tone and manifest unfairness of some of the questions, keeping himself strictly to the merits of the discussion, subordinating his personal feelings to the important public business under consideration, until all his interrogators were convinced of his sincerity and fair-mindedness and some were ashamed of their own ungracious bearing.

It was clear to me, as I watched this great man in action on this trying occasion, that in the cause he was defending he saw, with a vision unimpaired and a judgment unclouded by prejudice or prepossessions, far beyond the little room in which he was conferring. He saw the varied and pressing needs of a great nation, laboring now under a currency system that held its resources as if in a straitjacket. He saw in the old money system which had prevailed in the country for many years a prolific breeder of panic and financial distress. He saw the farmer of the West and South a plaything of Eastern financial interests. And thus, under the leadership of Woodrow Wilson, was begun the first skirmish in the great battle to free the credit of the country from selfish control, a movement which led to the establishment of a financial system that ended for all time the danger or possibility of financial panic.

There was an interesting incident in connection with the handling of the currency legislation that brought about what threatened to be the first rift in the President's Cabinet. It concerned Mr. Bryan's attitude of opposition to certain features of the bill as drafted by the Banking and Currency Committee of the House. My connection with this particular affair arose in this way: In the early stages of the discussion of the Federal Reserve act, and while Mr. Glass's committee was considering the matter, a messenger from the White House informed me that the President wished to confer with me in his study. As I walked into the room, I saw at once from his general attitude and expression that something serious was afoot and that he was very much distressed. Turning around in his chair he said: "It begins to look as if W. J. B. (he thus referred to Mr. Bryan) and I have come to the parting of the ways on the Currency bill. He is opposed to the bank note feature of the bill as drawn. We had a long discussion about the matter after Cabinet meeting today. In a thoroughly kindly way, Mr. Bryan informed me that he was opposed to that feature of the bill. Of course you know, W. J. B. and I have never been in agreement on the money question. It is only fair, however, to say that in our discussion Mr. Bryan conducted himself in the most generous way, and I was deeply touched by his personal attitude of friendliness toward me. He even went so far as to say that, in order that I might not be embarrassed in the handling of the bill, he was willing to resign and leave the country and make no public criticism of the measure. In the meantime, Mr. Bryan has promised to say nothing to any one about the matter until he has a further discussion with me."

Opposition From Bryan.

The President then frankly discussed with me the effect upon his whole party program of the possible resignation of Mr. Bryan. The President suggested that I drop in on Mr. Bryan very soon and if possible casually invite a discussion of the Federal Reserve act, telling Mr. Bryan of his (the President's) interest in it and how much he appreciated Mr. Bryan's personal attitude toward him.

I realized the seriousness and delicacy of the situation I was asked to handle, and, being on the friendliest terms with Mr. Bryan, I telephoned him and invited myself to his home—the old Logan mansion, a beautiful place in the northwest part of Washington. I found Mr. Bryan alone when I arrived. We went at once to his library and, in a boyish way, he showed me a picture which the President had autographed for him only a few days previous. As we stood before this picture Mr. Bryan gave expression to his sincere admiration and affection for the President. He related, with deep feeling, how much he had enjoyed his contact and official companionship with him, and how he had come to have a very deep affection for him. As we turned away from the picture he grew serious and began the discussion of the very thing the President and I had conferred on only a few hours before. He freely discussed his differences with the President over the Federal Reserve act and asked me the direct question, "Who from Wall Street has been discussing this bill with the President? I am afraid that some of the President's friends have been emphasizing too much the view of Wall Street in their conferences with the President on this bill." I frankly told Mr. Bryan that this imputation did a great injustice to the fine men with whom the President conferred on the matter of banking reform, and that I was certain that the President's only intimate advisers in this matter were Mr. McAdoo, Senator Owen of Oklahoma and Mr. Glass of Virginia, and that I personally knew that in their discussions the President never argued the point of view of the Eastern financial interests. Mr. Bryan was reassured by my statement and proceeded to lay before me his objections to the character of the currency issue provided for in the bill. He then took from the library shelves a volume containing all the Democratic national platforms and read excerpts from them bearing upon the question of currency reform. He soon convinced me that there was great merit in his contention. Before leaving him I told him of my interview with the President and how deeply distressed the President was that Mr. Bryan was not disposed to support him in the matter of the Federal Reserve act. It was evident that Mr. Bryan felt a keen sympathy for the President and that he was honestly trying to find a way out of his difficulties that would enable him to give the President his whole-hearted support. He showed real emotion when I disclosed to him the personal feelings of the President toward him, and I feel sure I left him in a more agreeable frame of mind. I told him that I would talk with the President, Mr. McAdoo and Mr. Glass and report to him on the following day.

I returned to the President's study and reported to him in detail the results of my conference with Mr. Bryan. I called his attention to Mr. Bryan's criticism of the bill and then ventured the opinion that Mr. Bryan, according to the traditional policy of the Democratic Party, was right in his attitude and that I felt he (Mr. Wilson) was wrong. For a moment the President showed a little impatience with this statement and asked me to point out to him where the party in the national platforms had ever taken the view Mr. Bryan indicated in his discussion with me. I then showed him the book Mr. Bryan had given me, containing the Democratic platforms, and he read very carefully plank after plank on the currency. He finally closed the book, placed it on his desk, and said: "I am convinced there is a great deal in what Mr. Bryan says." We then discussed ways of adjusting the matter. I finally suggested that the President allow me to talk with Mr. Glass and place before him Mr. Bryan's position, and that he have Mr. Glass confer with Secretary McAdoo and Senator Owen. This was arranged. I had no way of ascertaining just what took place at this conference, but after the Cabinet meeting on the following Tuesday Mr. Bryan walked around to where the President was sitting and said to him: "Mr. President, we have settled our differences and you may rely upon me to remain with you to the end of the fight." The President thanked him cordially, and thus the first break in the Cabinet line was averted.

STATEMENTS BY WILSON. WRITTEN FOR THE PUBLIC

The following statement was given out by the President this evening:

A situation has developed in the Senate to which I deem it my duty to call the attention of the country in the plainest words. Every effort to legislate for the safety of the nation in these last hours of the Congress is being met by dilatory tactics on the part of certain members of the House and Senate which are intended to make it impossible and to prevent all action over until another Congress can be assembled and organized in which there will exist a new and different balance of parties. It should cause the gravest concern to everyone who knows anything of the real posture of our foreign affairs that it is in the power of a few men at this truly critical moment when to the fortunes of the nation may hang in the balance to put obstacles which may prove insuperable in the way of measures (notably the army and navy appropriation bills) whose main and only purpose is the national defence. For myself I protest in the most earnest and solemn manner and in the name of the people themselves against this dangerous betrayal of the country's most sacred interests. Nothing can excuse such action, and the partisan purpose by which it is apparently prompted evidently gives it the most sinister meaning.

There is here injected into our politics, when the common safety should be the common interest of every man who professes to be a patriot, the most dangerous influence that could be conceived,—a sinister thing injected, not from the outside of our national circle, but at the very heart of it. I hope that the country will speak what it thinks.

A group of men in the United States Senate have deliberately chosen to embarrass the administration of the government, to imperil the financial interests of the railway systems of the country, and to make arbitrary use of powers intended to be employed in the interest of the people. It is plainly my present duty to attend the Peace Conference in Paris. It is also my duty to be in close contact with the public business during a session of the Congress. I must make my choice between these two duties, and I confidently hope that the people of the country will think that I am making the right choice. It is not in the interest of the right conduct of public affairs that I should call the Congress in special session while it is impossible for me to be in Washington, because of a more pressing duty elsewhere, to cooperate with the Houses. I take it for granted that the men who have obstructed and prevented the passage of necessary legislation have taken all of this into consideration and are willing to assume the responsibility of the impaired efficiency of the government and the embarrassed finances of the country during the time of my enforced absence.

Kentucky Troops to Guard Court Trying Dry Violators

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 10.—Captain D. A. Thompson, and ten men of the Louisa (Ky.) cavalry troop were ordered today by Governor Morrow to proceed to Sandy Hook, Ky., on Nov. 14 to guard the Elliott County Circuit Court, which convenes on that day, and has a large number of cases of dry law violations on the docket.

This is the second time troops have been ordered to Sandy Hook to guard the court within the past five months. The entire Louisa company went to Sandy Hook on July 4 and remained on guard there throughout virtually the entire two weeks of the July term. They were sent at that time because of threats said to have been made by moonshiners to kill witnesses, and an alleged attempt to intimidate witnesses.

SHIP BOARD TAKES RAILWAYS TO TASK

WANTS CONTRACTS DROPPED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Because it is alleged that they have been giving preferential treatment to certain foreign steamship lines, eleven railroads were asked by the United States Shipping Board today to send representatives to Washington to attend a hearing on Dec. 1. At this meeting the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Shipping Board will discuss the relations of these railroads with the foreign steamship companies.

The railroads are the Great Northern, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Southern, Northern Central, Pennsylvania, Mobile & Ohio, Grand Trunk, Boston & Albany, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio and the Missouri Pacific.

When the representatives of the roads appear they will have an opportunity voluntarily to abrogate the contracts they made with the foreign shipping lines. These agreements, it is held, extended preferential treatment in the consignment of export commodities in exchange for a promise that the steamship lines would hand over imports for American interior ports to the carriers.

Concentration of such influence in railroads whose lines extend to more than one port would make it possible for them to favor one port to the disadvantage of another, Commissioner Frederick W. Thompson, chairman of the committee, said today, and he indicated that the spirit of the new merchant marine act was entirely opposed to such a condition.

"It is entirely contrary to the spirit of Congress reflected in Section 20 of the merchant marine act, which section clearly contemplated that there should be preferential treatment of vessels under American registry, that the American railroads should be preferential feeders of steamers under foreign flags," said Mr. Thompson.

"The agreements in question between certain transportation interests and foreign ship lines can certainly be construed as extremely detrimental to vessels under American registry and are distinctly prejudicial to the growth of the American merchant marine. Furthermore, any preferential contract between transportation interests with any shipping company of whatever documentation serving more than one port is also in conflict with the intent of Congress, which certainly contemplates the up-building of all ports on all the seaboards of the United States.

"If permitted, such concentration of influence in the hands of any railroad serving more than one port would make possible the destruction of one port in favor of another. Therefore, in all its aspects, it must receive the fullest investigation, consideration and correction."

Mrs. Obenchain Asks Prompt Trial.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 10.—A petition for a writ of mandate, directing the Superior Court to grant an immediate trial to Mrs. Obenchain, indicted jointly with Arthur C. Burch for the murder of J. Belton Kennedy, or to dismiss the charge against her, was filed in the District Court of Appeals here today by her counsel.

LOSS OF COAL OMINOUS

Means End of Germany and Worse If Her Industries Suffer in Consequence.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—Arthur von Gwinner, one of the creators of the Deutsche Bank and as eminent a financial authority as Germany possesses, gave me an interview in which he expressed strong views on the general financial situation.

"The position," he declared, "is almost as black as can be. When you ask me the question 'Can Germany pay?' I can only reply it is simply preposterous to expect she can provide the enormous and unthinkable sums which have been fixed. People talk glibly about reparations. I don't mean to say a word against necessary and reasonable reparations, but they don't think of what inconceivable figures stand behind that word.

"Take first of all the 132 milliards of gold marks which Germany must pay. Write it down and look at it. Now, paper marks have one-sixtieth the value of gold marks, so multiply by sixty and you get the figure of nearly 8,000 milliards of paper marks. And then there is 5 per cent. interest in addition.

"Isn't it preposterous? You can see that all the more clearly when you think that all the vast amount of paper money which Germany has printed up to now amounts to between 90 and 100 milliards.

"The Army of Occupation is costing eleven times the number of marks we spent on the army and navy before the war. Then there is the coal we have to deliver to France. That costs us at least 800 million marks monthly. So where on earth are we going to get the money from? No, the thing is quite preposterous."

"And is there no remedy?" I asked.

"Yes, there is—that the world should return to its senses," replied Herr Gwinner. "Germany must have breathing space."

"Do you mean a moratorium regarding payments to the Entente?"

"Yes, that would do—and reasonable propositions after. Let the best heads of all countries sit around a table and see what can be done, but without militarists and believers in militarism."

"A moratorium for how long? What period of time would Germany need?"

"It scarcely is a case of what Germany needs, it is one of what would be best for everybody. However, say a year and see what can be done in that time."

Herr Gwinner regards the loss of coal supplies as very serious business indeed.

"If our coal supplies prove inadequate," he went on, "what will happen? I am not merely considering the people who will go cold and hungry, but the workers who will be thrown on the street. Only one thing can happen. If our industries suffer badly it will be Moscow; it will be the end of Germany and perhaps the beginning of the end of the white race in Europe."

"Do you fear a general smash?"

"Yes, if breathing space is not given us. I cannot say, of course, how it will come, but it will if common sense does not rule."

I then asked Herr Gwinner about the cause of the fall of the mark. It had been caused, in his opinion, chiefly by the fact that the Government had to borrow 27 per cent. of the last payment by means of short loans which had to be repaid. Payment as a whole had, of course, its cumulative effect.

"Look at the budget, too," he went on. The budget was 3 milliards in time of peace. After the war it mounted to 60, then 90 millions, and now the Finance Minister states that the deficit alone amounts to 110 milliards. Where are we going to get the money from?"

"Abroad there is an impression in some places that the fall of the mark is a manoeuvre by the German Government to make reparations payments impossible," I remarked.

"Can one think of anything more stupid?" asked Gwinner. "Why, every point the mark falls increases the difficulties of the Government and of everybody else in the country. Business becomes more difficult, wages, prices, budgets—everything becomes more complicated, and it is only a fool who thinks Germany would willingly incur such troubles even to demonstrate the absurdity of the Versailles Peace Treaty. There is no serious financier in the world who would give a moment's serious thought to such a suggestion as that the fall of the mark is deliberately engineered."

"What about the Wiesbaden agreement?"

"It is just as impossible to carry that agreement out as to fulfill the Versailles Treaty in its entirety. There is a lot of talk about reparations in kind, but then if it is a question, say, of bricks to build houses, the German Government has got to pay for them, and where, I ask again, is it going to get the money? It can only set the printing presses working still harder. No, there is only one way out. Let us get together and work the whole matter out. If we don't, then we are faced with European disaster."

A suggestion that Germany be given a respite in the shape of an independent moratorium was rejected as lacking authority. It is admitted the expedient has been under informal advisement.

Neither in official nor other quarters in Berlin is there any precise idea of the purpose of the visit of the Reparations Commission, but it is understood its primary object is to study on the ground the scheme of reparations and gather first hand information on Germany's productive capacity and her economic and currency problems in relation to her ability to comply with the London ultimatum.

PEACE TREATY IN BERLIN.

Will Be Exchanged Today for the Copy Prepared by Germany.

BERLIN, Nov. 10 (Associated Press).—The American copy of the American-German peace treaty, together with the ratification amendment, was received by the American Mission here this afternoon and will be exchanged for the German copy at the Foreign Office Friday.

The American treaty carries the signature of President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes. It is handsomely engrossed and leather bound and has about it an elaborate leather jacket.

The formalities in the exchange of the treaties will consume only a few minutes. The German copy, which was prepared some days ago, bears the signatures of President Ebert and Dr. Wirth, the Chancellor, who temporarily also is officiating as Foreign Minister.

German Freight Rates to Go Up.

BERLIN, Nov. 10. — Announcement was made today that freight rates on the German railways will be increased 50 per cent. beginning Dec. 1 in an attempt to reduce the heavy deficit in the working of the railways.

WILSON AMID GERMAN PROPAGANDA

How the White House was kept on constant guard when this country was flooded with German propaganda is described by Mr. Tumulty in next Sunday's instalment of his story. He tells in the same issue about the bitter controversy over the Adamson bill, and why Wilson finally decided to support that legislation.

Later instalments cover these historic subjects:

Wilson-Hughes Campaign,	Germany's Surrender,
American Neutrality,	Wilson's Trip to Paris,
Preparing for War,	Fight on the Treaty,
"Carrying On,"	Plot to Remove Wilson,
Wilson's Notes,	Physical Breakdown.

Many who wished to read every chapter of the Tumulty story have failed to get all issues of THE NEW YORK TIMES because they neglected to place orders in advance for the daily and Sunday editions.

Newsdealers cannot return unsold copies of THE TIMES, so their supply is limited strictly to the demand. To get the Tumulty story complete, it is necessary to order ahead.

LANDRU MAINTAINS UNBROKEN DEFENSE

Refuses to Tell of Any but Business Relations with Alleged Victims.

AGAIN SETS COURT ROARING

Copyright, 1921, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—At the same hour and almost at the same moment that he asked the question yesterday the Advocate General in the stuffy court at Versailles today leaned over his desk toward the prisoner's dock in which Henri Landru was seated and asked:

"Why, when your head is in danger, are you so obstinate in refusing to tell what your relations were with these women?"

As unshaken in his calm self-possession as he was yesterday Landru replied:

"Because I do not wish to. I had business dealings with these women. Beyond that their affairs do not concern me. People's private lives are no concern, either of justice or the police."

Evidently that question is to be the leit motif of this amazing trial. Every day, in some form or other, this same question is to be repeated, and every day as likely as not the answer, in some form or other, will be the same. At today's examination the witnesses took all the afternoon and not a fraction of them have been heard. One after another they built up that curious alarming chain of circumstantial coincidence which may bring Landru to the guillotine.

There were, for instance, two concierges—women who looked after the apartments of Landru's two first alleged victims. When her tenant departed in 1914, the first testified, she left no address and said that she would write. But she never wrote. An hour later the second concierge told exactly the same story in almost the same words. Landru was acquainted with both women and he disposed of their furniture. But if he was only a furniture dealer, as he so stoutly maintains, he was in all these transactions.

A dozen times today he won a round of laughter in court with the apostleness of his replies, but once, when one joke was a rather vulgar one against him and the court broke into laughter, he turned sharply on the spectators and in a harsher voice than he had before used answered them.

"There is nothing to laugh at. I am defending my head."

Except for that time, however, he showed of the least consciousness of his position. He is not afraid, he is not even ruffled, but he was a little tired at the end of this, the fourth day of his ordeal. Sitting in the dock with his spectacles slightly on one side and his bald head craned forward to hear the witnesses, his appearance was that of a village storekeeper in church. Once, when the court was putting together reasons why one of his alleged victims had told her concierge before she departed that she was going to marry this furniture dealer, he stood up and in a quiet voice, like that of a Sunday school teacher, gave the court an elementary lesson in woman's weakness.

"It is quite simple," he said, "if one makes a little study of psychology. A woman does not always like to say that she is hard up, so what was more natural than that she should try to represent that the reason I was taking away her furniture was that we were going to get married."

For all the evidence, for all the circumstance, for all the coincidence no one in court is nearer knowing the exact truth. Only Landru knows that, and he is not telling it. For three years he has kept silence and never, for a moment, has his defense been penetrated.

ROUT RADICAL MUSICIANS.

Conservative Members of Musical Protective Union Elect Their Ticket.

The conservative members of the Musical Protective Union, which held a meeting last night, put the so-called "radical" element to flight after a lively debate and elected the entire conservative ticket, to serve for the next twelve months.

The election was held in the building occupied by the union at 209-213 East Eighty-fifth Street. The following officers were elected: President, Anthony Mutilerl; Vice President, William Roche; Treasurer, I. Rosenberg; Secretary, William A. Dooley; Manager of the Discount Fund, John H. Bernstein, and Financial Secretary, C. C. Haley.

It was said that the conservatives won by a vote of about five to one.

Irene Castle to Dance Here Again.

Mrs. Irene Castle is to dance in New York again. She is to appear nightly at the Knickerbocker Grill after the theatre. It has been six years since Mrs. Castle danced before the New York public. The occasion was the last time Vernon Castle ever danced. Having won rame as an aviator, he came from Kelley Field, Texas, where he was stationed, to appear with his wife at a benefit performance for war sufferers at the Hippodrome.

THE PLAY

By ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT

Another O'Neill Play.

THE STRAW, a play in five scenes, by Eugene O'Neill. At the Greenwich Village Theatre.

Bill Carmody	Harry Harwood
Nora	Viola Cecil Ormonde
Tom	Richard Ross
Lilly	Norris Millington
Doctor Gaynor	George Woodward
Fred Nicholls	Robert Strange
Eileen Carmody	Margalo Gillmore
Stephen Murray	Otto Kruger
Miss Gilpin	Katherine Grey
Miss Howard	Dothea Fisher
Mrs. Abner	Nora O'Brien
Miss Bailey	Alice Haynes
Mrs. Turner	Grace Henderson
Doctor Stanton	George Farren
Mrs. Brennan	Jennie Lamont

Heralded for two years by rumors of its coming and foreshadowed months ago by its appearance on the book shelves, "The Straw" was finally produced last evening at the Greenwich Village Theatre, where a keen and overexpectant audience found it an interesting and moving play. It is the work of Eugene O'Neill, and though it lies considerably below the level of the best work he has done for the theatre, it still has enough of his force and his quality to make it worth seeing.

Only part of his dream for it was realized in the spotty performance that was its fate last evening in Sheridan Square. Otto Kruger, summoned into the cast at the last moment, is its most satisfying and sustaining member, but the lovely and gifted Margalo Gillmore is beyond her depth in the more critical rôle of Eileen Carmody. It is not a rôle which asks more than she has to give, but it is a rôle which seems to ask more than she yet knows how to give.

"The Straw" is O'Neill's study of hope—hope in its most extraordinary and most ironic manifestation. It is the hope that grows and grows in the heart of any one who lies sick with tuberculosis—the hope which is strongest and brightest on the very eve of death. The masters of the merry-merry theatre who have been so tremendously jocose at the sombreness of all this newcomer's writings for the stage will fairly split their sides laughing at the very thought of this play in Greenwich Village. For it builds and destroys the romance of two young consumptives and four of its five scenes have as their background a crowded sanitarium for tuberculosis. However, the squeamish and the delicate may feel reassured. The piece is not unduly clinical and of the coughing heard last evening at the first performance of "The Straw," not more than one per cent. came from the stage.

The final scene of "The Straw" has a pathos and a tragic irony seldom paralleled in the theatre. After a difficult and clumsy assembling of its forces, that scene leaves the two young people together on Eileen's sleeping porch at the sanitarium. Outside, the New England hills are ablaze with the reds and russets of Autumn.

The two, hugging each other close, are jubilant in their plans for their marriage, for their flight to a little mountain lake they know of, for the idyllic régime which is to lead them back to a life of happiness and work together. They have the embrace and the smile that has given the cue to the curtain-man in nearly every play since the theatre began. But this time the onlooking doctors and nurses and you, watching from the other side of the footlights, know that theirs is the delusion, the hectic hope around which the play is wrought. You know she has just a little time left to live. It was this scene which the publishers of "The Straw" in book form quaintly described as a happy ending.

Last evening was clearly Mr. Kruger's. The knowledge, widespread enough among the wiseacres who make up a first-night audience, that the part was first shoved into his hands last Saturday, may have added something to their evident appreciation—but it was appreciation of a performance good in itself, an actor's work full of truth and vitality and simplicity. There were times, too, when Miss Gillmore met the occasions of the text, and much of her playing in the two final scenes was admirable. She seems brimful of talent, a born actress—but one not born long enough ago.

In scene after scene, her inexperience betrayed her—betrayed her into grimaces of fearful portent, sudden and explosive assaults on the emotion of the role, grotesquely abrupt transitions. She did things which bred the dark suspicion that her performance had been ignorantly and helplessly directed—suspicions which deepened when you saw how archaically the horde of supers was managed in the third scene of the play. Miss Gillmore, who blazed into evidence in the company of "The Famous Mrs. Fair" two years ago, has much to give the theatre and much to learn in it. She has to learn some of the things which Kruger knows backward—Kruger and Katharine Given and Harry Harwood, who, by the way, is cabital as the elder and drunken Carmody.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Arnold Daly and Blanche Yurka will head the cast of "The Wife with the Smile," which the Theatre Guild will produce at the Garrick on Nov. 28.

A new Ben Ali Haggin tableau will be one of the features of the Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic, opening next Thursday.

Lee White, now appearing in Shubert vaudeville, will be featured in a musical piece to be produced by the Shuberts.

A screen version of Dickens's "Old Curiosity Shop," produced by the Hepworth Company in Great Britain, will be the feature of the Community Centre's Armistice Day matinee at Town Hall this afternoon. A motion picture of reconstruction work in France is also on the bill, and Mrs. William H. Hill, who made the film, is offering a prize of $5 to the public school student suggesting the best name for it.

Augustus Thomas will preside at the New York Drama League luncheon on Tuesday, Nov. 15, at noon, at the Hotel McAlpin. Among the guests of honor will be Estelle Winwood, representing "The Circle"; Janet Beecher, representing "A Bill of Divorcement"; Richard Bennett, representing "The Hero"; Harry Davenport of "Thank You," Arthur Richman, Florence Eldridge and Noel Leslie of "Ambush" and George Fawcett.

MUSIC

The Philharmonic Society.

The Philharmonic Society's program last evening brought forward for the first time in New York the fifth symphony of Jean Sibelius, the Finnish composer whose music is well known here. His fourth symphony, played some eight years ago, was the cause of a good deal of bewilderment at the time on the part of those who heard it; a bewilderment so great, apparently, that nobody has ventured upon a repetition of the work. This one will probably cause less, for it is in several ways more easily accessible and more human in its quality. Its themes are mostly of a more obviously melodious kind, the orchestral coloring is richer and warmer; yet there is something elusive in its quality, in its manner of statement, in the abruptness of some of its contours. There is also a certain lack of contrast in the first three movements that does not help the total effect of the composition.

But at all events Sibelius has made no excursions into the fields of modern dissonance for its own sake, nor has he abandoned the elder idea of melody as something out of which to develop a musical structure. The first movement, joined to the second without interruption, is dominated by a sort of fanfare heard successively in the several brass choirs, the development of which is simply, rather naively melodious, over a murmuring accompaniment of the strings.

In the second this same fanfare is suggested again; there is again the same melodious naïveté now expressed in a dance rhythm in thirds and sixths for the wood winds; and there is a similar vague background of shimmering string-tone; vague, and sometimes disquieting. Again in the third movement there is the sweetness of flutes in thirds and sixths, and a fanciful, almost a fantastic development based upon it. The last movement is more striking, liberates a greater energy of thought and of treatment than any of the others; and in it the composer falls into more drastic dissonance, interjecting, over a sort of endlessly repeated violin figure, a persistently recurring theme for the brass instruments, out of which he has wrought the most powerful, though perhaps not the most immediately appealing, pages of his work.

He is a singular figure in modern music, standing by himself, a member of no "school," uninfluenced and uninfluencing. This fifth symphony, which has something baffling in its simplicity, as the fourth had in its baldness and bleakness, signalizes, as that did, though perhaps in a different manner, Sibelius's aloofness from most of the streams of tendency in the art of today; and it equally signalizes him as looking forward, not back.

The date-hounds may get after Mr. Gliman for stating in his program notes that this symphony was played for the first time in London in February of this year. It was played in Stockholm a year before that, and had been played in Helsingfors under Mr. Sibelius five or six years before. The matter is not of great importance, except for those who wish to watch closely the composer's development.

The Philharmonic gave a performance of the symphony that had evidently been prepared with care and that probably represented its full purport. It cannot be said, however, that the music made a deep impression upon the audience, though it is a work wholly worth hearing as a contribution to the modern symphonic literature—considerably more worth hearing than some others that have had their opportunities.

Before it came the Overture to "Oberon," played with more beauty and richness of orchestral color than with communicating ardor; and after it the "Bacchanale" from Wagner's Parisian rearrangement of "Tannhaeuser" and Strauss's "Till Eulenspiegel."

George Raudenbush's Violin Recital.

George Raudenbush, a young violinist not heretofore heard in New York, gave a recital in Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon, in which he hardly showed the amount of proficiency and artistic maturity that ought to be among the qualifications of concertgivers in New York. There were evident in his playing training and aptitude as a pupil, but these things are not enough. In Nardini's D major sonata he was lacking in finish of style, in correctness of intonation and especially in beauty of tone. The first movement of Joachim's Hungarian Concerto and Bach's G Minor Solo Sonata were the other matters of chief moment on his program.

TWO SINGERS MAKE DEBUTS.

Harriet Van Emden, Soprano, and Dorothy Whittle, Contralto, Heard.

Harriet Van Emden, a young lyric soprano, made a début of much promise last evening in Aeolian Hall, singing wisely within the limits of a fresh, light voice of "bright" tone quality, and fairly earning the tribute of friends who had lined with flowers not only her path upon the stage, but also the piano where C. V. Bos accompanied her songs. Miss Van Emden won applause in a Mozart aria in Italian, songs in German from Beethoven to Brahms, Fevrier's "Le Printemps" in French and Rachmaninoff's "Ebb and Flood" in Russian. She added English pieces by Marum, Werner Josten, Kramer, La Forge and Hageman.

Dorothy Whittle, contralto, was heard for the first time here at the Town Hall yesterday, assisted at the piano by Walter Golde. Her program was noteworthy in avoiding hackneyed airs of the sometime limited repertory for a deep voice, though the most familiar one, Scarlatti's "O Cessate di Piagarmi," was both welcome and well sung. A French group of genuine interest was wholly from one composer, Gabriel Faure, while among the German were Erich Wolff and Franz, and in English new songs by Marion Bauer, Horace Johnson, Cyril Scott, Hageman and Bibb.

MUSIC NOTES.

Lazar S. Samoiloff directs a concert of the Bel Canto Musical Society tomorrow afternoon at the Waldorf-Astoria, with Gladys Smith and Samuel Gardner.

HOLD OFFICER AS TRAITOR.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—Among the papers which the German Army staff left behind in Belgium during the great retreat in 1918 have been found reports which have led to the arrest of a French officer on the charge of having sold to Germany before the war French mobilization plans of the utmost value.

The officer, whose name is given as Captain Proust, was arrested some days ago while on leave in the town of Besancon, and confined in the citadel there. He will be brought in a few days before a court-martial for first examination.

According to the papers which have been discovered he, or some one of the same name, communicated several secret French military documents to a German agent in Switzerland. Conversations which had taken place between the two men in Switzerland were reported, and full details given of the French officer's relations, which enabled the French authorities to identify him and corroborate the story in some details before proceeding to arrest him.

Since the famous Dreyfus trial there has been no such direct charge of treason by the sale of documents made against a French officer.

BRIAND FINDS WILSON OUT.

Calls on Ex-President and Also Visits Washington Tomb.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (Associated Press).—Premier Briand called upon former President Wilson today but was informed that Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were out. M. Briand left his card.

M. Briand, M. Sarraut, M. Berthelot and Dr. Chatin of the Frenchc delegation, drove to Mount Vernon later, where M. Briand laid a palm and flowers at the tomb of Washington.

Tonight M. Briand dined with Henry White, former American Ambassador to France, and Mrs. White.

ROOT PREDICTS END OF BOLSHEVIKI SOON

Regime Drawing to a Close Despite 'Foolish Enthusiasts,' He Tells Princess Cantacuzene.

REFUGEES RUSSIA'S HOPE

They Must Be Kept Fit for the Reconstruction of Their Country, Mr. Root Says.

The Bolshevist régime is drawing to an end in spite of some "foolish enthusiasts" who are trying to make the contrary appear, said Elihu Root in a letter to Princess Julia Cantacuzene-Speransky, Chairman of the American Central Committee for Russian Relief. The letter was read yesterday by Elihu Root Jr. at the annual meeting of the committee at the Hotel Buckingham.

After explaining that he could not attend the meeting because he was at the armament conference in Washington, Mr. Root in his letter referring to Russian refugees, said:

"It becomes constantly more evident that the hope of Russia for a long period to come and the benefit to the whole world of having Russia restored to an effective share in the community of civilized nations depend upon keeping these refugees alive and fit for the reconstruction of the political and social life of their country when the Bolshevist tyranny has fallen.

"There is abundant evidence that the Bolshevist terror is drawing steadily toward its downfall. There are interested propagandists who are trying to make the contrary appear and there are foolish enthusiasts of a kind always to be found in every country—the most gullible of mortals—who are helping the propagandists, but the evidence accumulates that the change in Russia draws near. Of course the attempt to reverse economic laws and to ignore the most deeply-seated impulses of human nature was certain to fail. It was only a question of time. Apparently the time is not to be very long.

"In the meantime the Bolshevist policy has been to destroy what they called the 'bourgeoisie,' including in that term all those who, by intellectual superiority, by education, by energy and enterprise, by capacity for organization or administration in commerce or finance, or manufacture, or any branch of production, or in literature or religion have achieved any success lifting them above the conditions surrounding unskilled manual labor in Russia. Between systematic wholesale murder, which still continues, and exile to escape murder there is not much material left in Russia now competent to lead in the regeneration of government. That must be done by the men and women who are now homeless exiles, and they must be kept alive for that great service to humanity."

In her annual report Princess Cantacuzene said that during the last year relief to the extent of $125,000 had been sent abroad and $8,191 spent in the United States. The committee is constituted for the purpose of affording relief to those who were victims of Bolshevist excesses.

SELF-RULE IN PRISON IS FOUND A SUCCESS

Special to The New York Times.

EAST VIEW, Nov. 10.—V. Everit Macy, Commissioner of Correction and a philanthropist, praises self-government by prisoners of the model East View Penitentiary in a report today on his thirty-nine months' experimenting with the honor system there. Warden Warren McClellan has made the system a success. In his report Mr. Macy says:

"During these months one prisoner escaped while under the league's control, while fourteen have escaped from gangs in charge of guards. This is in an average population of 130, of whom at least 15 per cent. are working alone, with complete freedom or in charge of other prisoners. * * * Some man have been gone for months, but only two of the fifteen who have escaped are still unfound."

Concerning the inmate cabinet of the self-government league, Mr. Macy says: "During the thirty-nine months the league has functioned only three officers have been impeached; two sergeants-at-arms for not keeping order and one public defender for obtaining the acquittal of those whom the prisoners knew were at least morally, if not technically, guilty of the offense charged against them. Would that our bar associations in the world outside the prison were always as resentful of acquittals unsecured by their members."

OPPOSE NAVAL CUT ON TONNAGE BASIS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The greatest interest is being manifested in the plan of limitation of naval armament which the American delegation will submit to the Washington conference. It has already been made known that this plan is ready and will form the basis for discussion of the primary question for which the conference was called.

That the plan will be combatted is certain, for inklings of some of its salient features have reached foreign delegations and their naval men are inclined to show a disposition to take issue with what is proposed. The main objection is based on the understanding that the plan proposes a limitation of naval armament through an agreement to fix a maximum tonnage or displacement beyond which the subscribing nations will not go in maintaining fleets.

This proposal is to be combatted on the theory that the capital ship—dreadnought, and battle cruisers—should be the unit of limitation. In other words, it is held that there should be a fixed rule that each naval power should limit its number of capital ships, the number or fighting strength in each case to be agreed upon, leaving these powers to determine whether they shall retain or scrap vessels of other classes. This would enable a Government to retain battleships while discarding vessels not so useful in determining naval strength.

CREDITS PARLEY TO WILSON

Battle Says Ex-President Sowed Seeds of Arms Conference.

George Gordon Battle, addressing members of the Woodrow Wilson Club of New York University at the De Witt Clinton High School auditorium last night, declared that there would have been no conference on the limitation of armaments if Woodrow Wilson had not planted the seed for such a meeting of national minds through his efforts to establish a League of Nations.

"It is due to Woodrow Wilson's efforts that this conference is possible," Mr. Battle said, after sketching in some detail the life and war administration of ex-President Wilson. "Probably the most remarkable phase of this conference is that it is a voluntary gathering of nations, none of whom are compelled to be represented, as at the Peace Conference. To my mind this fact is a most important one and augers well."

Describing Mr. Wilson as a crusader with a "single track mind" bent upon the peace of the world, the speaker said that the war President never wavered in his intention to establish a firm foundation for peace, bearing alone at great personal sacrifice the brunt of what he knew would be a thankless task.

PLANS PHONE RATE ON STATE-WIDE BASIS

Service Board to Begin Hearings in Albany Nov. 29 in Effort to Cut Cost.

A plan to charge telephone users a rate based on the cost of State-wide service, instead of the cost in limited areas, is to be worked out by the Public Service Commission. To obtain data that will enable the commission to apportion fairly the cost among the various communities, a series of public hearings will be conducted, beginning in Albany on Nov. 29. The New York Telephone Company supplies 85 per cent. of the telephone service in the State. When the commission assumed office last Spring, it fell heir to complaints filed by 135 municipalities with the former commission, which dealt largely with the increased cost of the service.

These communities selected Syracuse to make a test, and the commission last July, on the local area basis, decided that the rate there was not excessive, although the residence rate in that city had been increased from $42 to $51 a year, and the business rate from $84 to $114. Chairman Prendergast of the Public Service Commission said last night he did not anticipate an increased rate in this city because of the proposed change and that the present rate might be reduced.

Mr. Prendergast said that part of the plan of the commission was to reduce the cost of service by eliminating duplicating apparatus and office forces, and to direct that the organization of the company be operated under the most economical methods.

MAN OF 63 MISSING 14 DAYS WITH $14,000

Brooklyn Clothing Manufacturer Left Home for a Walk and Has Not Been Heard From.

With $14,000 in cash in his pocket, Solomon Kaplan, 63 years old, clothing manufacturer, left his home at 619 Saratoga Avenue, Brooklyn, on the morning of Oct. 26 and has not been seen since. This was the statement made to the Brooklyn police yesterday by Jacob Kaplan, a chemist and son of the missing man, who said the disappearance had not been reported because Mr. Kaplan was thought to be visiting relatives in New Jersey. Last night the police general alarm had produced no trace of the vanished manufacturer, and the family announced that a reward would be paid for information leading to his whereabouts.

Mr. Kaplan, a real estate operator as well as a clothing maker, left his home early following his daily habit of taking a walk before breakfast. He had withdrawn $5,000 the day before from the Brownsville branch of the State Bank and also had $9,000 in receipts he had collected from customers.

Relatives assumed that his failure to return indicated that he had gone to his factory at Thatchford and Dumont Avenues, Brooklyn. His continued failure to come home was interpreted to mean that he was visiting relatives. Yesterday a check by relatives disclosed that Mr. Kaplan was missing, and the police were told.

CHELSEA PIER PLEA TO GO BEFORE HARDING

Mayor Hylan Instructs Hulbert to See the President to Prevent Proposed Shortening.

An attempt will be made by Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert to have the War Department delay the shortening of the Chelsea piers along the North River, which was ordered a few days ago by the Secretary of War. Commissioner Hulbert went to Washington last night to make a personal plea to President Harding to allow the present piers to remain on the ground that to shorten them would be a hard blow to the port of New York.

Mayor Hylan, after asserting that the "railroad interests" were behind the plan to have the piers shortened, instructed Commissioner Hulbert to pay no attention to the Secretary of War when he went to Washington, but to take the matter up with the President.

"Tell the President all about it," said the Mayor. "It is no use seeing the Secretary of War. No matter whether we have Republican or Democratic Secretaries at Washington, the same old crowd seems to get to them. It's near time that the New York Central Railroad's influence in city affairs be eliminated. I don't intend to let the Secretary of War and General Black run the City Government.'

I had intended to take the question up with Senator Calder," said Commissioner Hulbert, "and get him to introduce a bill in Congress protecting the city from interference by the War Department with matters that are purely local."

"Take it up with Senator Wadsworth, too," said the Mayor. "Take it up with both Senators and tell them what sort of legislation is needed in this case. But see the President about it at once."

United States.

The commission announces an examination for guard, male, age 21 to 60, for vacancies in the Penitentiary Service throughout the United States at $70 a month (after one year's satisfactory service, promotion will be made to $80 a month, after two years' satisfactory service to $90 a month, and after three years' satisfactory service to $100 a month). Appointees may be allowed the increase granted by Congress of $20 a month. Competitors will not be required to report for examination at any place, but will be rated on education, 30; physical ability, 30; training and experience, 40. Age limits do not apply to persons entitled to preference because of military or naval service. Classified employes who have reached the retirement age and have served fifteen years are entitled to retirement with an annuity.

TRUSTEE'S NOTICE.

NOTICE OF SALE.—NOTICE OF DECLARATION OF FIRST DIVIDEND.—UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.—In the Matter of CONTINENTAL CANDY CORPORATION, Bankrupt.

To Creditors and Stockholders of Continental Candy Corporation, and all other persons whom it may concern:

Pursuant to decree of Honorable John J. Townsend, Referee in Bankruptcy, dated Oct. 24, 1921, certain assets of the above-named bankrupt, being all of the property, except cash, of said bankrupt in Chicago, Illinois, used as a part of or in connection with the business conducted by said bankrupt in the three buildings in the City of Chicago, which it occupies as lessee, will be offered at public sale by the undersigned Trustee at the office of the said Referee in Room 1701, 299 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, Southern District of New York, on November 15, 1921, at 12 o'clock noon on that day in accordance with and in the manner provided for by said decree. Bids will then and there be received by the undersigned Trustee pursuant to the terms of said decree, copies of which may be obtained at the office of the undersigned Trustee or his attorneys.

The said properties to be sold will be offered in such manner that bids may be made therefor in bulk as a going concern or in parcels as provided in said decree of sale.

The property offered for sale may be inspected by prospective bidders at any time before the sale, and inventories thereof will be available for inspection at the office of the Trustee, 52 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, New York City, for at least five days before the sale.

All bids for separate parcels shall be subject to the contingency of the acceptance of any bid in bulk found by the Referee to be of greater benefit to the bankrupt estate than sales in separate parcels.

Each bid for a parcel must be accompanied by a certified check for at least ten per cent. (10%) of the amount bid, and each bid for the entire property in bulk as a going concern must be accompanied by a certified check for at least $50,000.

After all bids are received the Referee at said time and place or at such adjourned time as he may fix, will entertain application or motion for and will make such orders of sale or confirmation of sale or in reference to the administration of the estate of the above-named bankrupt or the disposition of its assets, and will declare and authorize the payment of such dividend as may be authorized by law, as he may deem proper.

JAMES B. A. FOSBURGH,
Trustee in Bankruptcy.
52 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.

ROSENBERG, BALL & MARVIN, Attorneys for the Trustee, 74 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The disturbance that was central over the Middle Atlantic States Wednesday night moved rapidly northeastward to the Canadian Maritime Provinces, and another disturbance is over the Great Lakes. Pressure remains high in the Southern States, and is high and rising rapidly in the Northwest. There have been rains within the last twenty-four hours in the Middle Atlantic States, Southern New England and the upper Ohio Valley, and snows and rains along the north border from Maine westward to Montana, Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota. Fair weather was the rule in all other parts of the country.

The temperature has fallen decidedly in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States and the upper Ohio Valley and Ohio and changes to decidedly colder weather has overspread the Dakotas and Minnesota. The weather was warmer during Thursday in the central Mississippi Valley, the central Plains States and the South Rocky Mountain region.

BABSON HOPES FOR 1922 TRADE UPTURN

Predicts Hard Winter in New York—Expects Rents and Wages to Decline.

HE ADVISES CAUTION

Economist Says Industries and Districts First Hit Will Be the First to Recover.

Roger W. Babson, statistician and economist, spoke on "Educating for Business" before the Rotary Club at the Hotel McAlpin yesterday noon and on "The Business Outlook for 1922" at a public meeting in Cooper Union in the afternoon. In his speech at Cooper Union, Mr. Babson hoped for a turn for the better next year, but advised caution.

"We hope that there will be a turn in the tide next year," he said, "but there is no sign of it at present. The industries and the sections which were hit first will be the first to recover, but those industries and sections which were the last to be hit will be the last to recover. Taking all industries and all sections and averaging them up, we hope that the corner in the Babson chart cycle will turn some time next year."

Mr. Babson said that he did not look for prices to be carried very high. "For years to come," he added, "we expect to see prices find new low points in each depression, while each high point of the periods of prosperity will be lower than the one preceding. The great cycles in commodity prices run about fifty years. This country has experienced three distinct such cycles. In these cycles commodity prices go up for about twenty years and then decline for about thirty years.

The order in which industries were hit by depression and in which they would recover he gave as follows: Rugs, jewelry and other articles purchased by the wealthy; the silk industry and expensive household furnishings; leather, boots and shoes, textiles, men's clothing, building, farm products, iron and steel, machinery and shipping. He said that the twelfth great industry, semi-luxuries purchased by the masses, including tobacco and women's wearing apparel, has not yet been hit.

In answer to questions, Mr. Babson predicted a hard Winter in New York and said that he knew of no cure for unemployment except to prepare for it in time of prosperity. He advised in favor of purchasing unimproved real estate in certain places, but said to wait before buying homes or building. City rents he expects to come down gradually; suburban homes in the $10,000 to $20,000 class to take a big drop. Wages, he thinks, will go back to pre-war levels. After the Christmas buying, he said, there will be a cut in the price of cigars and cigarettes. The Ten Commandments would be a good thing for retailers to study, he said.

EMERGENCY TARIFF STAYS.

House Agrees to Extend Its Life Until Permanent Measure Passes.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Congressional action was completed today on the bill to extend the life of the emergency tariff until permanent tariff legislation is enacted, while the Senate Finance Committee was hearing appeals for protection from livestock and poultry growers.

The final legislative action on the bill to extend the emergency act, which otherwise would expire by limitation Nov. 27, was concurrence of the House, 283 to 93, in amendments added by the Senate. Most of the opposition votes were cast by Democrats.

The poultry growers, through the America Poultry Association, told the Senate Committee that the American hen could not compete with her foreign sister under rates on eggs as contained in the Fordney bill passed by the House. They asked a duty of eight cents instead of six cents a dozen on eggs.

Dempsey Is Sued for $250,000.

The complaint in the suit of Albert Siegel, song writer, against Jack Dempsey for $250,000 damages for alienating the affections of Bee Palmer, dancer, was filed in the Supreme Court yesterday. Siegel and Miss Palmer were married in Davenport, Iowa, last March. He alleges they lived happily together until Sept. 15 last, when Dempsey induced her to leave him.

JAPANESE PROMISE TO UPBUILD CREDIT

Head of Visiting Delegation of Business Men Pledges Co-operation at Bankers' Luncheon.

Business leaders of Japan are ready to give their fullest co-operation to American business leaders in seeking to preserve the credit fabric of the world, said Dr. Takuma Dan, Chairman of the visiting delegation of Japanese business men, who were entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the Bankers' Club. Such assurance was given by Dr. Dan after A. Barton Hepburn, President of the Chase National Bank, had asserted that Japan and America, because of the strengthened position in which they stand financially because of the World War, must face the "responsibility of preserving the credit fabric of the world."

The luncheon was given by Mr. Hepburn, James S. Alexander, President of the National Bank of Commerce; Charles E. Mitchell, President of the National City Bank, and Gilbert Thorne, President of the National Park Bank, representing all the bankers of New York.

In expressing sympathy for the Japanese because of the assassination of Premier Hara, Mr. Hepburn said his death was a great loss not only to Japan but to the whole world.

The Japanese delegation was entertained at a dinner at the Nippon Club by the Japanese business men of New York, who welcomed the visitors through S. Imamura, Vice President of the club.

SMALL CARDS CLOG MAIL.

Public Asked to Avoid Tiny Pieces in Christmas Rush.

Small Christmas cards and envelopes have retarded the work of the Post Office Department to such an extent during the holiday season that an appeal to the public has been issued by the department, through Postmaster E. M. Morgan, for the use of stationery of a larger size. The minimum size of cards and envelopes to prevent delay, mutilation and loss should be at least 2¾ by 4 inches, according to a statement by the department.

"These odd and diminutive sized pieces of stationery have come into use in the last few years," the statement continued, "and only appear now in any quantities at Christmas time, when the whole postal institution is keyed up to top speed and trying to keep on top of the load."

The use of the small envelopes and cards results in the obliteration of addresses by the cancellation marks; delay in cancellation because the cards do not fit the cancellation machines; delay through difficulty in sorting, and liability to loss or damage, because small sizes do not fit letter packages and cannot be tied securely.

INVESTORS CHARGE FRAUD.

Vice President of Seven Seas Corporation Held on Charge of Withholding Funds.

Investors in "The Seven Seas Corporation," which formerly had an office at 17 Battery Place, who told Magistrate Sweetser in the Tombs Court yesterday of money put in and nothing returned, pointed out Frederick Bruchner, a Vice President of the concern, as the recipient of their funds. Bruchner, 51 years old, of 1,405 Prospect Avenue, Brooklyn, who said he was an electrical engineer, was held for the Grand Jury in bail of $1,500 on a charge of failing to account for funds intrusted to his care.

Charles Schnable of 553 West Thirty-sixth Street, a former soldier, testified he had invested his savings, earned while in the army, amounting to $810, and had received a signed agreement from Bruchner for the return of this money on demand, but had not got it.

Spot Burlaps Are Firmer.

Although the election day holiday cut into the little business passing in the burlaps market these days, the present scarcity of spot goods here resulted in a slight firming up of prices. Estimated shipments to this country from Calcutta are now placed at 64,000,000 yards, which is below the September figure, but a number of burlap ships are due to arrive this month, and it is possible to buy afloat goods at slightly less than the spot figures. These were the prices quoted yesterday on standard 40-inch goods: Eight-ounce—Spot, 4.15 cents; afloat, 4.10 cents, and November-December shipment, 4.10 cents. Ten and one-half-ounce—Spot, 5.15 cents; afloat, 5.05 cents, and November-December shipments, 5.05 cents.

Trimming Furs Slow Down.

The demand for furs for trimming purposes, which had been one of the principal reasons for the little boom the trade has been experiencing of late and which had been responsible in no small way for the higher prices obtained, has fallen off materially in the last few days and gives indication of stopping completely. Whether it does or not will depend on the action which the cloak and suit workers will take in regard to the movement of the manufacturers to restore the piece work system in their plants. Whether there will be an immediate strike or not appears to depend on several factors, one of the most important of which is the possibility of Federal mediation. In any event, the demand for trimming furs has done much to clear up the market and to prevent a carry-over of many kinds of skins into the new season.

Sports Wear for Show Purposes.

What is described as a new factor in men's sports wear will appear next Spring in suits that are designed more for showy purposes than for sport. These patterns, it is said, will cater to the taste of the younger element rather than to the golfer or sportsman who just wants a comfortable and loose-fitting suit in which to take his recreation. The more radical types of sport garments, therefore, have the shaped-in waist and other details admired by those who merely ape the sportsman. Some clothiers question the advisability of turning the sport garment into something it was never intended to be, but they also realize that extreme styles find customers in large numbers.

Furniture Orders Satisfactory.

The results of the Furniture Exposition which was concluded last week are reviewed with satisfaction by manufacturers. Over 2,500 buyers attended the show, at which 400 firms exhibited. A feature of the business done was the amount of orders taken for immediate delivery, indicating that retail stocks are below normal. Some of the leading manufacturers report their lines sold up for the season. The opinion among both producers and dealers is that there will be no further drop of any consequence in furniture prices, now that the trade has become liquidated. It is pointed out, in fact, that material prices have become stabilized at their present levels or else have shown a tendency to advance. The manufacturers do not anticipate any immediate effect from the large building program of the country, but they do count on some benefit from this next year.

Gray Goods Very Quiet.

The cotton situation, coupled with the trade-retarding effect of the holiday today, kept business small in the gray goods market yesterday. Printcloths, from all accounts, were especially quiet, but were more or less firm on the first-hand asking basis of 9¼ cents for 38½-inch 64-60s. In the sheetings, however, a fair-sized business was reported in 37-inch 48-square, four-yard goods at 10 cents for December-January delivery. For 36-inch five-yard sheetings 8⅝ cents was paid, while 31-inch goods of the same weight were held at 8 cents. An asking price of 13¼ cents was quoted on 39-inch 64-104, 4.20-yard sateens.

Good Overcoats Wanted.

The policy on which many large clothing buyers operated in their Fall purchasing has not produced the happy results anticipated. Small orders were placed for overcoats with the idea that prices might be lower later on in the season and that, at any rate, there would be plenty of merchandise to be obtained when wanted. This has not turned out to be entirely the case, acording to manufacturers, and there is now quite a call for overcoats. Plenty of the cheaper class of goods is available, but the better makes to retail from $55 to $85 are scarce. What little surplus the wholesalers possess cannot be taken from them at the buyer's price, it is said, but must bring the manufacturer's figure.

Percales Not Moving Freely.

Despite the fact that the new prices made on percales by the big printers do not fully represent the advances that occurred in gray goods since the last quotations were made on the finished ones, the business that has been done in them has not been up to the apparent expectations of sellers. The demand has been fairly large and well distributed among the various parts of the country, but it has not been commensurate with the number of requests for prices that had been received by first hands from the jobbing trade. Because of this it is said to appear as if the new figures were wanted more by the wholesalers to let them know where they stood on goods in stock than for actual buying purposes. The increasing number of jobbers who take inventory in November is said to have played a part in the pricing of the goods just when they were.

No Large Call for Cheaper Suits.

The cheaper suits for Spring are not in so large a demand as the case would seem to be from the frequent comment heard in the clothing trade. The experience of a representative manufacturer is that the bulk of the business will probably be placed upon suits to retail at $40 or between $35 and $40, but the better class of retailers is afraid to take a chance on fabrics put into suits to sell lower. This house included a line to retail at $30, and only took a small amount of orders on it. As the rest of the business showed a good increase over last year, it was felt that the values around $40 are considered attractive.

Wool Hose Sales Picking Up.

The snap to the air in the last few days has resulted in a marked improvement in the local consumer demand for wool hose, both domestic and imported, which has been reflected in an increased call for them at wholesale. Several of the orders lately placed call for 500 and 1,000 dozen lots. The larger demand for these goods on the part of both sexes is attributed to the vogue for cold weather wear of low shoes that has been growing from year to year, as well as to the lower prices at which most of the hose can be had this year. At some of the current special sales here they can be bought at prices ranging from 59 cents for men to 98 cents for women. In the women's hose there is a nice run reported on ribbed goods, both plain and clocked, and the same is true of wool socks for men.

Silk Market Stronger.

The local raw silk market is showing a better tone and prices are advancing in sympathy with increasing strength at Yokohama. The improvement in the sale of taffetas, according to H. L. Gwalter & Co., Inc., is encouraging manufacturers and finds its expression in a larger demand for organzine stock, the mills being practically bare of supplies. At the same time the demand for Canton silks keeps up and prices for these sorts are extremely strong, as there is little ready stock available in the hands of importers. Advices from Milan report that market unchanged. Transactions at Yokohama for the first three days of the week amounted to over 3,000 bales for American account. The Bourse quotation on Kansai No. 1 for March delivery is 1,690 yen, compared with 1,630 for spot. The market at Canton is quiet but firm on the basis of $6.45 for new style 14-16 raws and $6.10 for 20-22, which is but a little above local prices. Trade is stagnant at Shanghai, with prices above what foreign buyers will pay. Tussah filatures, however, hold firmly at the $4 level.

THE WEEK'S PRICE TREND.

Fewer Changes Occurred, but Some Foodstuffs Were Cheaper.

While the revisions in Dun's list of wholesale commodities prices were fewer in number this week than last, the excess of advances over declines was about the same as that of last week. Then, in a total of 77 changes, 40 were upward, while this week, in 66 fluctuations, 39 were advances. Numerically, the revisions in the foodstuffs were about equally divided between "ups" and "downs," but those in the more important edibles, for the most part, were downward.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on selected standard commodities this week. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and the corresponding week a year ago:

Although the advances in the foodstuffs outnumbered the declines by ten to nine, several of the former took place in such minor articles as spices. However, Spring patent flour advanced 25 cents a barrel in the local market for provisions, and hams were also higher here. As against these advances were declines here in Middle Western lard and in bacon. All of the live meats were lower at Chicago, but short ribs advanced. Mess pork did not change.

Only two changes were seen in the local dairy products list. The best creamery butter dropped 1¼ cents a pound, and is nearly 20 cents a pound under the corresponding 1920 level. Best quality fresh gathered eggs went up 4 cents a dozen, but continue 22 cents under the price paid for them a year ago at this time. The listed fresh and dried fruits were again devoid of changes, while the few seen in the vegetables were evenly divided between advances and declines. Choice pea beans went up and choice medium beans declined. Rutabaga turnips fell off a little, but onions moved up an additional 25 cents a barrel. They now cost nearly four times as much as they did at this time last year. Neither the teas nor the coffees in the list showed change this week, and the same was true of sugar. Open kettle molasses declined. In the spice list all of the changes were upward, including mace, cloves, nutmegs and ginger.

The grains list showed four advances against a single decline, the latter in hay. Malting barley did not change, but wheat, corn, oats and rye were all higher. In the hides and leathers no declines were seen, and the leathers were also bare of advances. The hides advances took place in No. 1 Texas, Colorado, heavy native cow and No. 1 buff stock.

Eighteen changes, with features lacking, were shown by the drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs and oils. In the naval stores a rise in resin contrasted with a drop in turpentine. The metals list was not very unsettled, although declines were seen in tank plates, beams, and furnace coke. The advances took place in spelter and tin. Rises in red gum, poplar and maple occurred in the various kinds of lumber quoted on, the only decline being seen in No. 1 common mahogany. The miscellaneous fluctuations were few, consisting only of advances in old paper rulp and Eastern crude rubber.

The week in the textiles was not productive of many changes, but a good share of them were downward. In the gray goods sheetings, drills and printcloths all shared in the decline. The burlaps market was slightly firmer, but this was due more to the scarcity of spot merchandise here than to any really active trading on the part of buyers. Just what the immediate future holds for these goods is regarded in the trade as problematical, particularly in view of the number of burlap carriers now headed this way.

BUSINESS RECORDS.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Irregular Movement of Stocks and Bonds—Federal Reserve Ratio Goes Higher.

Although the percentage of reserve as shown by yesterday's Federal Reserve report went to a still higher figure, there were signs of a check to the abnormal movement. Reserves held for member banks, a deposit item, increased $19,800,000 and outstanding note circulation $12,000,000. In note issues, this is one of only five more or less widely scattered increases in any of the forty-five past weeks of 1921; but further expansion between now and the end of the year is not improbable. With the whole system, addition of $16,000,000 to its gold reserve this week carried the reserve percentage from 71 to 71¾, notwithstanding the larger liabilities. With the New York bank, the shifting to other reserve districts of $44,400,000 of its share in the central gold fund at Washington indicated that the East is once more financing Western and Southern harvest-time requirements.

Partly, perhaps, in connection with the impending extra holiday—which to a good part of the community means suspension of business until Monday—the stock market reacted from its advance of the day before. The movement was highly irregular, however, and in the early hours there were numerous further advances, a few of which were maintained up to the close. But the day's changes as a whole were confused and net declines fairly balanced net advances. In spite of this uncertain movement, almost as large a business was done as on Wednesday.

A good deal of interest was attracted by the Steel Corporation's statement of orders on its books, showing a decrease of 273,841 tons for October. This leaves September as the only month of the year to date in which an increase has occurred. The October decrease may mean merely that mill capacity was speeded up more rapidly than inflow of new orders—a supposition somewhat confirmed by the known fact that whereas October's iron output increased only 22 per cent. over September, increase in steel production was 37 per cent. Still, the Corporation's end-of-October showing will cause some disappointment; the "unfilled-order" statements usually show the trend of business activities.

No important movements occurred in foreign exchange; the German mark slipped down again, getting close to the recent low point of one-third of a cent, since no one in Wall Street had the least idea of what the actual situation is in the reparations matter, the market attracted no great interest.

For obvious reasons, the statement of paper currency in circulation has been a matter of great interest in the weekly Bank of France reports. By all indications, French Government and French banks have been taking vigorous measures for immediate reduction of that paper. Mainly through the Treasury's continuous funding of its war debt to the bank into interest-bearing bonds, the bank had been able, at the end of Summer, to cut down the paper currency 2,862,000,000 francs, or 7½ per cent., from its maximum of last Autumn. Most people predicted that temporary return to renewed and large expansion could not be avoided this present Autumn.

At first it certainly looked so; the note issues had run up again a billion francs by the opening of October and remained around the higher level. Yesterday's report, however, showed that the State had repaid the bank 400,000,000 francs more during the week and that the paper currency had been reduced 146,000,000. It is now 2,242,000,000 francs less than a year ago. The process is likely to be resumed with emphasis after the year end. It cannot fail to provide an exceedingly interesting object lesson as to how a nation which has made up its mind to do it can grapple with the wartime paper inflation problem.

MONEY.

THURSDAY, NOV. 10, 1921.

Call loans on the Stock Exchange opened and renewed at 5½ per cent., and in the fourth hour dropped to 5. This ease was somewhat unexpected in view of Armistice Day holiday and the fact that loans made on Thursday carry over until Monday. Several small-size loans were reported in fixed period market, for three to four months' maturities, at 5¼ per cent. on both classes. Business is quiet, with renewals going at 5½. There is no change in discounts on choice name commercial paper, or bankers' acceptances. Scarcity of bills and reluctancy of country banks to meet the lower rate is having its effect in narrow market.

GO TO HELP PERU'S FINANCIAL FUTURE

Bankers and Economists Sent by Guaranty Trust Company at Request of Latins.

At the request of the Peruvian Government, a commission of bankers and economists of the Guaranty Trust Company is en route to that country to aid in outlining a fiscal program and to plan its financial future. The commission will investigate and revise the income and outgo of the country, preparatory to a loan which, it is expected, will be made by the Guaranty Trust Company and be offered later. It is believed this loan is several weeks away. Preliminary steps have been taken in the granting of authority by the Peruvian Congress to the Minister of Finance to arrange an exterior loan of $50,000,000. This, it is explained, is a blanket authority, and a loan of this size is not contemplated. It probably will be about one-fifth that amount, but will be taken by Peru as needed.

The commission sent to Peru is headed by Nicholas Kelley, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury of the United States; C. W. Van Law, a consulting engineer who has had considerable experience in Latin America, and R. S. Rife, economist of the Guaranty Trust Company. They will make a thorough investigation of the Government's financial conditions and submit recommendations for a definite program.

It was announced yesterday that Dr. William Wilson Cumberland, who at the time of his appointment was acting Foreign Trade Advisor to the State Department, had been named Customs Administrator of Peru. Taxes are collected by the Government on salt, tobacco, guano and other products of Peru, and part of the work of the commission will consist in investigating these taxes and their probable reapportionment.

Eastman Kodak Extra Dividend.

The Board of Directors of the Eastman Kodak Company have declared an extra dividend of 7½ per cent. on the common stock in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent., according to advices received in the financial district yesterday.

Virginia Iron and Coal Report.

The Virginia Iron, Coal and Coke Company for the twelve months ended Sept. 30, 1921, in a report to the New York Stock Exchange shows net income after charges, depreciation and taxes of $1,048,953. Gross income for the period amounted to $7,624,541.

MEMBER REPROVED BY STOCK EXCHANGE

The Governing Committee of the New York Stock Exchange reprimanded one of the members of the Exchange Wednesday for transacting speculative business for the telephone clerk of another member. The name of the member was not made public.

Seymour L. Cromwell, President of the Exchange, in an announcement made on the floor yesterday, said: "It came to the attention of the Governing Committee that a member had conducted such a business for his telephone clerk. At the meeting of the Governing Committee held Wednesday the member appeared, admitted that the facts as alleged against him were true and was found guilty. The hearing, however, developed such mitigating circumstances that the Governing Committee determined not to inflict any penalty, but decided that an announcement of the hearing and its results should be made known to the members of the Exchange upon the floor in order that the resolution of the Governing Committee covering this rule should be sharply drawn to the attention of the members, it being the determination of the Governing Committee to impress upon the members that said resolution and its provisions will be strictly enforced."

That the transaction of any speculative business either by his employer or by any member of the Exchange, or firm represented thereon, directly or indirectly, with or for the account of any telephone clerk employed within the Exchange building shall be deemed an act detrimental to the interest or welfare of the Exchange."

United Cigar Sales Fall.

The United Cigar Stores Company of America for the month of October reports gross sales of $6,818,894, compared with $7,614,097 in the corresponding month last year. The decrease amounts to about 10 per cent., and is attributed in part to the lowering of prices during the last ten days of last month. For the first ten months of the current year sales totaled $63,270,560, as compared with $64,295,638 in 1920.

Strengthened by Deflation

It is a source of great satisfaction to own bonds that are basically stronger to-day than in the fall of 1919, when prices were soaring, and apparently we were enjoying the greatest prosperity in our history.

To-day there are many companies essential to the welfare of the nation which are in an even stronger position than two years ago, and the mortgage bonds of such companies are particularly attractive investments at this time.

DROP IN UNFILLED ORDERS FOR STEEL

United States Corporation Reports a Reduction of 273,841 Tons on Oct. 30.

BIG RAILROAD BOOKINGS

Total Unfinished Business Is 4,286,829 Tons, Against 4,560,670 Tons on Sept. 30.

The statement of unfinished business on the books of the United States Steel Corporation as of the close of October shows a reduction of 273,841 tons, the total as of Oct. 30 being 4,286,829, compared with 4,560,670 at the close of September and 4,581,026 at the close of August. At the end of October last year unfilled orders amounted to 9,836,852 tons. The reduction reported for October compares with an increase of 28,744 tons in September, that being the first increase since the improvement in the industry set in.

After the Steel Corporation reported a reduction in unfinished business last month was not received with surprise in financial circles, as it had been predicted a week or so ago that such would be the case. The decrease, however, was larger than had been expected. During the greater part of last month the Steel Corporation had been operating at between 45 and 50 per cent. of capacity, and this is believed to be mainly responsible for the decrease in unfinished orders. Shipments for the month, on the above basis, are estimated at approximately 600,000 tons, which would indicate that new orders for October aggregated about 330,000 tons, or at the rate of 13,000 tons per day.

It is expected that the current month will make a much better showing than did October, in view of the large amount of new business now coming to hand, calling for delivery of rails and steel for the manufacture of railroad equipment. It is generally understood that the greater part of the 125,000 tons of rail orders placed, following the reduction in the price to $40 a ton, were not actually received until after the turn of the month, so that they will show up in the November statement.

October	4,286,829	9,836,852	6,472,668
September	4,560,670	10,374,804	6,284,038
August	4,581,026	10,805,038	6,109,166
July	4,850,324	11,118,468	5,578,661
June	5,117,868	10,978,817	4,892,853

November	9,021,471	7,128,880	8,124,063

The peak of unfilled tonnage was reached in April, 1917, when bookings amounted to 12,183,083. There was practically a steady decline until May, 1919, when bookings increased, ultimately advancing to 11,118,468 in July, 1920. Another decline set in, which continued until September of this year.

OIL MEN TO MEET DEC. 6.

Leaders in the Industry Will Speak at Institute Gathering.

The annual meeting of the American Petroleumn Institute will be held in Chicago Dec. 6 to 8 inclusive. An important program has been arranged by the committee in charge, and some of the leading figures in the industry will express their views on the outlook for petroleum, both from a domestic viewpoint as well as from the world viewpoint.

Among the principal speakers are, A. C. Bedford, Chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey; Walter C. Teagle, President of the Standard of New Jersey; Edward L. Doheny, President of the Pan-American Petroleum & Transport Company; Harry F. Sinclair, Chairman of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation; Commodore J. C. Donnell, President of the Ohio Oil Company; Henry L. Doherty, President of H. L. Doherty & Co.; Judge Amos L. Beatty, President of the Texas Company, and R. D. Benson, President of the Tide Water Oil Company.

SUGAR MEETING POSTPONED

South Porto Rico Stockholders to Vote on $6,000,000 Bond Issue.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the South Porto Rico Sugar Company scheduled for yesterday was postponed until Nov. 25. The special meeting was also postponed until the same date. The stockholders at the annual meeting were to vote their approval on an issue of $6,000,000 bonds, mention of which was made in the annual report published earlier in the week. No action was taken, however, because of an insufficient representation on the part of the stockholders.

There was considerable discussion as to the creation of the new issue on the part of the stockholders, who were of the opinion that they should be entitled to subscribe to the new bonds, in the event they are authorized. Frank A. Dillingham, President of the company, notified them that such was the intention of the officers.

CORN ESTIMATE SMALLER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The corn crop this year amounts to 3,151,698,000 bushels, the Department of Agriculture announced today in its preliminary estimate.

The corn crop declined slightly during October, today's preliminary estimate of the production made by the Department of Agriculture being 11,335,000 bushels less than was forecast a month ago. The total crop this year will be 3,151,698,000 bushels, still one of the largest ever produced.

Weights per measured bushels of grains were announced as follows: Wheat, 56.6 pounds; oats, 28.3; barley, 44.4.

Stocks of old corn on farms November 1 were estimated at 281,472,000 bushels or 8.7 per cent. of the 1920 crop, as against 142,211,000 bushels left at the corresponding date last year from the 1919 crop and 69,835,000 bushels in 1919 from the 1918 crop. The preliminary estimates of corn by principal producing states were as follows: Pennsylvania, 72,900,000 bushels; Ohio, 100,000,000; Indiana, 163,620,000; Illinois, 304,590,000; Michigan, 63,999,000; Wisconsin, 91,080,000; Minnesota, 131,733,000; Iowa, 428,274,000; Missouri, 184,590,000; South Dakota, 116,032,000; Nebraska, 209,552,000; Kansas, 113,300,000; Kentucky, 85,325,000; Texas, 192,478,000, and Oklahoma, 84,525,000.

1921	3,151,698,000	1917	3,065,233,000
1920	3,232,367,000	1916	2,566,027,000
1919	2,583,509,000	1915	2,994,793,000
1918	2,502,665,000	1914	2,672,804,000

	Nov., 1921.	Nov., 1920.
Buckwheat, bush.	14,894 000	14,221,000

ALLIS-CHALMERS CO. REPORTS LESS PROFIT

Net for Quarter Ended Sept. 30 Is $421,366, Against $635,880 in Previous 3 Months.

The Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company, for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1921, reports net profits, after Federal taxes and other charges, of $421,366, which after allowing for the regular dividend on the preferred stock was equal to 51 cents a share earned on the $25,710,750 of common stock outstanding. In the quarter ended June 30 net profits were $635,880, or $1.54 a share on the common stock, and in the third quarter of 1920 the profits totaled $925,325, or $2.49 a share.

The net profits for the first nine months of the current year, as compiled from the quarterly reports, were $1,831,435, or $3.74 a share on the common stock, after preferred dividends. In the same period of last year the profits of $2,525,287 were equal to $6.50 a share.

At the close of business Sept. 30, 1921, the company had unfinished orders on its books aggregating $7,260,574, compared with $9,472,772 on June 30, 1921, and with $19,814,948 on Sept. 30, 1920.

	1921	1920	1919

RULING ON HOLIDAY.

Federal Reserve Bank Says Paper Due Today Will Run to Nov. 14.

Benjamin Strong, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, in a letter sent to all member banks last night said that paper falling due today will be extended to Monday, Nov. 14, and interest and discounts will run to that day.

Hhe quoted Section 85 of the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Law (Section 145 New York law), which reads as follows: "Sec. 85. Time of maturity: Every negotiable instrument is payable at the time ifxed therein without grace. When the day of maturity falls upon Sunday, or a holiday, the instrument is payable on the next succeeding business day. Instruments falling due or becoming payable on Saturday are to be presented for payment on the next succeeding business day, except that instruments payable on demand may, at the option of the holder, be presented for payment before 12 o'clock noon on Saturday when that entire day is not a holiday."

The bank official added: "It appears that under the foregoing provision the maturity of obligations falling due on Friday, Nov. 11, a legal holiday, is extended to Monday, Nov. 14, and it follows that interest or discount runs to the latetr day. Therefore, on all rediscounts and advances made by this bank which fall due on Nov. 11, unless prepayment is made before Nov. 11, additional discounts for the days after Nov. 11 will be charged at our current rate of 4½ per cent. per annum."

WEATHER HELPS TRADE.

Retail Buying and Demand for Rail Equipment Also Factors.

A livening up of retail trade due to cold weather has been the outstanding feature in the general business situation during the past week, according to Bradstreet's. In addition to this the disposition manifested by the railways to come into the market for equipment and rails has been another important factor. The bulk of the improvement in retail buying, it is pointed out, has been shown in the Northern States, the South reflecting little of this, and in addition feeling the depressing influences proceeding from a further decline in the price of cotton. For this latter development, growing belief in a larger-than-predicted cotton crop is mainly responsible. Confirming past views that the Government estimate is too low is the census report showing 6,646,000 bales ginned to Nov. 1, whereas the Government estimate was for only 6,507,000 bales.

Two other notable features of the week's developments are the further slight advance in October in the general level of commodity prices and the revealing that building planning and construction is having what seems to be a late-in-the-year boom.

STEEL OUTPUT IN OCTOBER.

The American Steel & Iron Institute shows 37 per cent. increase in the country's output of steel, as compared with September. The 1,616,810 tons produced last month were more than double the 803,376 tons produced in July.

In the following table, comparisons are given with the output of preceding months this year, and with the corresponding months in 1920:

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Market Quiet, Rates Generally Lower—Scandinavians Make Sharp Recovery.

Trading in the European exchanges yesterday was a dull and listless affair, due no doubt to the holiday today, which is to be followed in turn by the usual quiescent week-end session. Rates moved about very narrowly, with losses, while fraction, a trifle more prominent than advances. German marks were weak with no sign of the buoyancy which turned them up on Wednesday, the final rate of 36¾-100th of a cent comparing with a previous closing of .40¾.

Slight checks on London dropped one-quarter of a cent to $3.94⅛, compared with $3.94⅜ on Wednesday, after an early high of $3.94½; French francs closed at 7.26½ cents, on a rally from 7.25⅝ the day's low; Italian and Belgian, like some of the mid-Europeans, were pressed, but the Scandinavians, Copenhagen particularly, were in demand and at sharp advances over Wednesday. The Far Easterns and South Americans were steady.

Humble Oil Co. Pays $1,000,000 for Land.

The Humble Oil and Refining Company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, has paid $1,000,000 for 176 acres of proved oil lands in the new Mexia field. The property was bought from the Occidental Oil Company. Part of this property, which consists of 76 acres lying on the north edge of the pool, has two oil wells producing about 600 barrels daily. The remaining 100 acres are located in one tract on the south end of the field with only one gas well drilled.

The Effect of the Washington Conference upon
European Internal Loans

OUT of the confusion of inflated currencies, depreciated exchanges, heavy taxation, stagnant trade and unemployment,—public opinion throughout the world seeks a solution which can be gained only by

Lasting Peace
Reduction of Taxation

IT seems inevitable that a long step in the right direction will be taken by the great powers represented at Washington.

WHILE no one anticipates an agreement for total disarmament, it seems assured that they will reach a definite understanding that will result in a distinct trend toward lighter taxation, deflation of currency, stabilization of exchange and the gradual resumption of international trade.

THE Saturday Evening Post said editorially: (Oct. 15, 1921) "We can't afford it economically. We can't afford to have the mark at less than one cent, the lira at four, the franc at seven and the pound sterling at three ninety. . . . We can't afford to rob American business of billions every year to be sunk and shot up and wasted in wars and their aftermath. Even less can other nations afford their gigantic bills for armament."

THOSE who believe that the tide has turned and that out of the chaos which exists in Europe it is reasonable to expect a gradual but sure improvement, should consider at this particular time the internal loans of the more important nations. The possibilities for profit such as these bonds present may never occur again.

For information regarding internal obligations of European nations, write for our Circular Letter G-41

Invest Your Future Surplus At Present Interest Rates

IN SIX MONTHS' TIME the rediscount rate of some of the Federal Reserve Banks has declined as much as 2½ points. There is every indication of a continuation of the present downward tendency in interest rates.

New bond issues are being quickly absorbed at a lower interest yield than has prevailed recently. The market value of old, seasoned issues which declined during the period of high interest rates is steadily reviving.

The Halsey, Stuart & Co. Investment Plan Enables You to Buy NOW

Investors who would like to buy more bonds today than their present available funds permit, need not wait to purchase in a less favorable market. Through the use of the Halsey, Stuart & Co. Investment Plan, bonds may be bought NOW to be paid for during the next ten months. An initial payment of only 10% [par value] is required—the balance in 10 monthly payments.

An additional merit of this plan is that it promotes the habit of systematic investment and steady accumulation. Many of our customers use it regularly whether they are buying small or large amounts of bonds.

If you expect to invest $500, $1000, $5000, $10,000 or more in bonds in the near future, we advise you that NOW is the time to make your commitments. We shall be glad to submit a list of our bonds for investment of the amount you may indicate if you will fill out the blank form below.

WILLIAMS RENEWS ATTACK ON RESERVE

QUESTIONS STRONG'S ACTS

Wants to Know If Reserve Bank Lent $100,000,000 Figuring in "Notorious Corner."

John Skelton Williams, former Controller of the Currency, has addressed another communication to George Foster Peabody, director of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, in the controversy over salaries paid to the bank's officers and practices pursued in the granting of loans. After reviewing at length his previous charges of loan discriminations by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, Mr. Williams says:

"If my admonitions and remonstrances at that time had been heeded, it is possible that scores of millions of dollars might have been saved and the very critical situation in your city last Summer, when the banks in New York were hurriedly called upon to provide from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 to prevent a financial calamity, would probably not have occurred."

Mr. Williams inquires of Mr. Peabody "whether Governor Strong, receiving $50,000 a year has, since his connection with the New York Reserve Bank, held no directorship in any financial or commercial corporations or any reorganization committee, and when did he resign from the last such position formerly held by him and from which he indicated he formerly derived large emoluments?"

Mr. Williams continued in his letter: "I suggest that you inquire for your own information and that you may enlighten me:

"Whether or not it is true that within the last twelve or fifteen months a Director of the New York Reserve Bank was borrowing from a member bank, of which he was also a Director, between five and six million dollars, of which three million or more was a 'dummy' loan, while the Federal Reserve Bank of New York was lending a hundred million dollars or more to this same bank, of which its own Director was a Director and from which he was obtaining these enormous accommodations.

"Whether another Director of the Federal Reserve Bank for many months during 1920 was borrowing at 6 per cent. or less from a member bank to which the Federal Reserve Bank was lending, and whether this money borrowed from a member bank by this Reserve Bank Director and coming indirectly from the Federal Reserve Bank in which he was a Director, was used by him in making loans on Wall Street at fancy rates of interest, the profit on the money being credited monthly by the member bank to this Director of the New York Reserve Bank.

"I suggest you also inquire whether it is true that within the last year the Federal Reserve Bank of New York was loaning at one time about $100,000,000 to a certain banking institution in New York City which was furnishing funds with which to engineer a notorious 'corner' on the New York Stock Exchange, in which 'corner' the President and two Vice Presidents of the bank which had gotten the $100,000,000 from the New York Reserve Bank were largely interested.

"You may also ascertain whether it is true that the chief executive officer (and his immediate family) of the bank to which the New York Reserve Bank had handed out approximately $100,000,000 was about this time last year borrowing from his bank, largely upon speculative securities, more money than his bank was lending at that time to all of its national bank correspondents throughout the country.

"You may also find out whether it is true that a banking institution in New York City to which the Reserve Bank was at the time lending more than $130,000,000 was or was not engaged in all kinds of speculative schemes and ventures, and was lending money at unconscionable and outrageous rates of interest, amounting in some cases, including commissions and bonuses and other rake-offs, to as much as from 20 to 100 per cent. on the amounts loaned.

"Will you also inquire whether or not it is true that this institution to which the Reserve Bank was lending so heavily was calling in loans made to legitimate business enterprises while continuing and renewing loans made directly or indirectly to its own offices and to syndicates in which they were interested, on highly speculative securities?

"Perhaps you may also be interested in determining for yourself whether it is true that another member bank in New York City whose accommodations from the Reserve Bank were very moderate was or was not borrowing money from the Reserve Bank in the Summer of 1920 at 6 per cent. per annum and at the same time lending to a customer several hundred thousand dollars at the equivalent of about 200 per cent. per annum interest on the loan, which was repaid in six months."

Substituted on Exchange List.

The New York Stock Exchange has substituted the following securities on the trading list: Missouri, Kansas & Oklahoma Railroad Company, United States Mortgage and Trust Company certificates of deposit for 5 per cent. bonds, stamped as to payment of interest to May 1, 1921, in lieu of certificates of deposit stamped as to payment to Nov. 1, 1920, and Mexican Petroleum Company, Ltd., of Delaware, permanent engraved fifteen-year sinking fund convertible 8 per cent. gold bonds, due May 1, 1933, in lieu of temporary bonds.

The highest point which the French bank's outstanding note circulation has ever reached was 39,645,896,080 francs, on Nov. 3, 1920. The highest point of the present year to date was 38,832,829,000 francs, on May 25; the lowest, 36,783,000,000 on Aug. 25. The bank's official discount rate remained at 5½ per cent., to which it was reduced July 28, after a 6 per cent. rate had been maintained since April 8, 1920.

Gulf States Steel Deficit.

The Gulf States Steel Corporation in a report to the New York Stock Exchange covering the first nine months of the current year shows a net loss of $287,806, while the deficit, after payment of $105,000 in the form of dividends, amounted to $292,806. The profit and loss surplus as of Sept. 30 was $2,459,747.

LOUIS K. LIGGETT TO PAY ALL DEBTS

United Drug Company's Head Will Ask for Trustees' Discharge on Nov. 15.

HELPED BY STOCKHOLDERS

Thousands Join in Providing a Fund to Enable Him to Retire His Obligations.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—Louis K. Liggett, head of the United Drug Company, is ready to pay all his obligations in full, with interest at 6 per cent., according to reliable report in financial circles today. It is announced that Mr. Liggett will ask for the discharge of his trustees on Nov. 15.

The report rather took the street by surprise, for, while it was recognized that there had been a marked improvement in the stock market rating of United Drug shares, which have risen from 46 in September to above 68, resulting from generally better business and reports of betterment in the company's own business, it was also recognized that that improvement was not of such marked proportions as to lead to expectation of the announcement that Mr. Liggett was ready to pay in full.

Mr. Liggett's good fortune is due in part to the loyalty of his associates. Thousands of stockholders in the United Drug Company, according to the report, have placed more than $1,000,000 at Mr. Liggett's disposition, thus putting him in a position to arrange for retiring his obligations and discharging his trustees.

This money was raised as the result of a campaign started by the Rexall Stores, through which United Drug products are retailed, soon after the announcement of Mr. Liggett's financial trouble last July. The campaign met with a ready response. Trust certificates bearing 6 per cent. interest, payable when Mr. Liggett cared to take them up, were issued and were offered to those caring to subscribe to the fund.

The United Drug Company operates large manufacturing plants in this city and elsewhere, selling directly to the Rexall Drug Stores and to the chain of Liggett Drug Stores which it owns. There are nearly 10,000 of these druggist-stockholders, and nearly all of them are personal friends of Mr. Liggett. It was these men who organized, unknown to Mr. Liggett, the Rexall Loyalty Trust at the time of his financial reverse, and through that trust raised the fund.

When United Drug common touched its low mark last July Mr. Liggett transferred his assets to Frederic C. Dumaine, Frank W. Remick and Neal Rantoul as trustees for the protection of his creditors.

ROADS NETTED 2.9% IN YEAR UP TO AUG. 31

Revenues Higher, Expenses Lower in First Year of Private Control and Rate Advances.

PUBLIC ACTUALLY PAID LESS

Freight Cut 14%, but Costs Lowered Despite 22% Wage Boost, Says Statement.

An analysis of railway statistics issued yesterday by the Association of Railway Executives, covering the twelve months ending Aug. 31, 1921—the first year since the war during which the railroads were operated without a Government guarantee—shows net operating income amounting to $530,655,927, or an annual earning rate of 2.9 per cent. This was also the first full year of private operation since the general rate advance of Aug. 26, 1920.

The figures show that while expenses were not reduced in proportion to the decrease in traffic—which was 14 per cent. in freight from the preceding year—the roads effected economies sufficient to hold expenses lower than they had been in the year before, in spite of the 22 per cent. increase in wages awarded by the Labor Board in 1920.

"For the year ending Aug. 31, 1921," says the report, "the total operating revenues of the Class I roads were $5,045,336,100, as compared with $5,724,912,265 for the year before, an increase of $320,425,835, or 5.6 per cent. Freight revenues were $4,279,028,733, an increase of 9.6 per cent., and passenger revenues were $1,258,394,370, an increase of 2.8 per cent.

"The total operating expenses for the year were $5,161,760,829, a reduction of $218,876,981, as compared with the preceding year, or 4.1 per cent. Expenditures for maintenance of way and structures decreased 12.3 per cent., and for maintenance of equipment 7.1 per cent., while transportation expenses were reduced only 1.1 per cent. Traffic expenses increased 33.8 per cent. and general expenses increased 12.8 per cent.

"The net operating revenue, $883,577,271, showed an increase of $339,302,816, or 156 per cent., but taxes took $283,331,368, an increase of 10.4 per cent., and the net railway operating income was $530,655,927, as compared with only $28,548,077 in the previous year.

"The fact that the relation between revenues and expenses was on a more favorable basis than the year before is indicated by the operating ratio—the proportion of expenses to earnings—which was 83.58 in the year ending Aug. 31, 1921, as compared with 93.99 in the preceding year.

"In spite of this fact, the net railway operating income for the year represented a return of only 2.9 per cent. on the investment, or less than half of the 6 per cent. return contemplated by the Transportation act and the Interstate Comuerce Commission decision advancing the freight and passenger rates. The shortage under a 6 per cent. return was $571,000,000. The net operating income of $530,000,000 was, however, greater than that earned by the Railroad Administration in 1919.

"Although freight rates had been increased on an average about 33 per cent. and the passenger rates somewhat less than 29 per cent., the public actually paid less to the railways in the year ending August, 1921, than it did the year before, when the guarantee of approximately $906,000,000 a year was still in effect. The net operating income of $28,000,000 in the year ending August, 1920, left a deficit of $878,000,000 to be paid out of taxation to make good the guarantee. Adding this to the $5,725,000,000 which the public paid for railroad service in that year makes a total of $6,603,000,000 to be compared with the $5,045,000,000 which was paid for service under the higher rates in the twelve months ending with August, 1921, when there was no guarantee.

"The reduction in maintenance expenses (which represents in large part the postponement of expenditure rather than a complete saving) was $225,000,000."

COTTON IN SLUMP ON HEAVY SELLING

Speculators, Unloading, Help to Bring Prices Down—All Months Close Near the Bottom.

Liquidation of cotton increased yesterday as various trade and speculative interests unloaded their holdings. Disappointment that the trade had been misled by small estimates from Washington the last two months brought even heavier selling than on Wednesday. At times prices broke rapidly under pressure, orders coming from every part of the country to New York and New Orleans. Not until January had broken three-quarters of a cent, making a decline of a cent and three-quarters in two days, did radistance cause a halt. Final prices showed a loss of 33 to 59 points.

A break in Liverpool prices that brought March within 425 points of New York, threw foreign contracts into the ring at the opening. Prices declined 5 to 15 points and then steadied. Western houses began to take in lines of cotton sold from a cent to two cents higher the last two weeks, providing demand broad enough to influence quotations. Several room traders covered cotton put out at the opening on Wednesday. Also New Orleans displayed a steadier tone and trade absorption of December increased on the decline. For a time considerable cotton changed hands around 17¾ for January and 17.15 for March. December contracts disappeared at 17.50 and many traders supported the market on the theory of a possible recovery. Liquidation from quarters outside the Exchange was a factor in the morning, ginning figures having a most discouraging influence on sentiment. A New York cotton firm's annual crop estimate put the yield at 8,000,000 bales, or nearly 1,500,000 more than the trade had been led to expect by the Department of Agriculture.

After buying orders had been filled without any decrease in the steady selling pressure from the opening, the market began to give way. Several large orders in March at 17 cents prevented an open break and, after these were filled, demand for January at the same price brought support. New Orleans became so weak that contracts came from that quarter, forcing all months into new low territory. Heavy stop-loss orders were executed the moment January broke to 17 cents, March selling at 16¾ with a rush. May declined to nearly 16½ cents, December selling at 17 cents. Pressure was severe, considering the extent of the decline in a few days, without demand from either trade or speculative interests sufficient to offset the supply. Realization that the crop is likely to be from three-quarters of a million bales to a million and a half greater than anticipated had far-reaching effects. Speculative holdings kept coming on with each decline to new low levels, making any reaction difficult.

SALES FOR PROFITS SEND WHEAT DOWN

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—With tomorrow a general holiday and the wheat market on the upgrade for a week, local traders and commission houses showed a decided disposition to take profits and even up. Many of the recent buyers were active on the selling side, and, while the undertone was not weak, the finish was at net losses of 1⅜@3⅜ cents. Local operations were responsible for the bulk of the fluctuations.

Strong commission houses sold on the bulges and bought on the breaks, holding prices within a range of around 7 cents. At no time were they above yesterday's finish. The break in corn had some effect on sentiment and the news was more mixed than for several days past, with cash wheat firmer in all markets, Nos. 2 hard on track here selling at 2 cents over December, against 1¼ cents over yesterday; and an Eastern milling broker paid ¾ cent over December, f. o. b., for 65,000 bushels of No. 2 yellow hard from store.

Southwestern markets were unchanged to 2 cents higher, and premiums at Minneapolis were unchanged at 2 cents higher, while, at Winnipeg, No. 1 northern gained 1 cent, and sold at 2 cents over November.

Receipts have fallen off materially both sides of the international line, and it is estimated that Kansas City arrivals will not average over fifty cars per day next week, the dry weather and poor crop outlook increasing the tendency to hold. Winnipeg December closed 2¼ cents under Chicago, the difference widening ⅛ cent for the day.

Export demand was fair, with sales of 850,000 bushels hard Winter and 500,000 bushels Manitobas, but the Pacific Coast reported a very slow demand and claimed that Australia was taking the market away from this country, in India and the Orient. Indian wheat purchases so far this season are estimated at 20,000,000 bushels, of which 4,800,000 bushels have been shipped from various countries, chiefly Australia and America.

Traders were decidedly mixed in their opinions after the close, with some disposed to look for constructive influences to come out of the Disarmament Conference at Washington, but others look for a further decline, believing that there is not sufficient trade to keep sales up.

It was reported that 10,000 barrels flour had been sold for export, but it could not be confirmed. The market was not affected by the report that the Milan, Italy, grain firm, which recently failed, had considerable wheat bought for December-January shipment.

Corn closed 1⅝ cents and oats ½ cent lower. The Government report was construed as bearish on corn, and long December came out freely from the start with selling by cash and commission houses. One firm took 100,000 bushels of corn from Illinois and Iowa during the day, and a big rush to market is expected when the new grain rates from the West go into effect on Nov. 20. Consumption of corn in the United States for the 1920-21 crop year, as indicated by the Government report, was 3 078 000 000 bushels, compared with 2,709,000,000 the previous year and 3,075,000,000 in 1919.

Primary arrivals of wheat today were 748 000 bushels; a week ago, 1,101,000; last year, 1,385,000. Shipments were 1,027,000 bushels; a week ago, 1,076,000; last year, 889,000.

Corn receipts were 737,000 bushels; a week ago, 418,000; last year, 233,000; and shipments, 136,000 bushels; a week ago, 416,000; last year, 130 000.

TOO DRY FOR KANSAS WHEAT

Report in Chicago That Yield of 4,000,000 Acres Is Failure.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 10.—Reports on the Chicago Grain Exchange today that 40 per cent. of the Kansas wheat acreage, or about 4,000,000 acres, would be a failuure because of drought, were a surprise to J. C. Mohler, Secretary of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture.

"Although no exact data are at hand, I am inclined to believe the reports are greatly exaggerated," Secretary Mohler said.

RESERVE NOTE ISSUE SHOWS AN INCREASE

$15,000,000 Drop in Deposit Liabilities Also Reported by Federal Board.

There was a mixture of advances and declines in yesterday's trading, the gains being recorded in wheat, eggs and copper, while the declines appeared in coffee, lard, family beef and spot cotton. The changes were for the most part fractional, the advance in eggs, for instance, being a seasonal one, while firmness in copper is attributed to heavy demands being made upon producers. Of the declines, lard was the most noteworthy, but little is going on in the way of exports, which accounts for the weakness in this staple.

RESERVE BANK POSITION.

The Federal Reserve statements of yesterday show that the high point of the year was reached this week by the total gold holdings and the ratio of reserve of the entire system. The low point of the year was reached by rediscounts secured by other collateral. Rediscounts secured by Government collateral and Federal Reserve note circulation failed to make a new low level this week, the amount of the former being $453,621,000 and of the latter $2,420,831,000. The ratio of reserve of the New York Bank stood at 79.9, or less than a week ago.

Yesterday's statements make possible the following comparison of highest and lowest figures of the reserve system statements for 1921 to date and for previous years (thousands of dollars):

GARDEN CITY
New magnificent Colonial mansions, on very large plots of ground with beautiful shrubbery; 8 tile baths with built-in tubs attached to master's bedrooms; parquet flooring, open fireplaces, sun porches, including magnificent garages to match property; 8 to 12 rooms, exclusive of baths, as desired; in most select section of Garden City. Direct electric service into Penn. Station, 38 minutes. Prices ranging from $18,500 to $26,500. Others a trifle smaller with same improvements for $9,500. As to terms, make your proposition.
You are now paying thousands of dollars yearly in rent for congested quarters in sections possibly not to your liking. One-third of your rent will pay the carrying charges on any of the above propositions, while living in the exclusive section of the Garden Spot of the East, within a few minutes of your business. Golfing and water sports at hand.

BEST SUBURBAN BARGAIN NEAR N.Y. CITY
Because the owner has too many buildings on his hands now, this very attractive, imposing Colonial type of suburban home, located in a beautiful, strictly residential section, near New York, specially built for comfortable year-round occupancy, can be bought for ⅓ less than cost of house alone today. The desires of the neighbors as to personality of buyer will be respected. The house itself will be turned over in perfect condition, ready for occupancy immediately, and contains 11 very large rooms and 3 big tiled baths. The price includes an electric range, electric fixtures and shades, electric washing machine, electric vacuum cleaner and base plugs. The plot consists of two-thirds of an acre of land, with 100 ft. street frontage. Unusual care and taste have been used in landscaping the grounds, which are beautifully shaded by fine old trees, and contain many shrubs and flowers. The elevation is about 700 ft.; wonderful scenery, very healthy living conditions. Water rights on chain of beautiful lakes run with the title. The railroad station is within 8 minutes easy walk. Commuting facilities to the city are of the best. The balance of $10,550 may remain on mortgages at terms which make the yearly carrying charge less than the rent of even a small New York city apartment. Complete details and pictures can be obtained from P. D. WORCESTER, 170 Broadway, New York City, Suite 1812. Tel. 1521 Cortlandt.

MRS. STILLMAN WINS PROPERTY FOR SONS

Court Grants Control of Holdings, but Denies Plea to Become General Guardian.

ACCOUNTING TO BE ASKED

About $152,000 Involved Under New Ruling—Wants Testimony to Be Taken in Canada.

Surrogate John P. Cohalan handed down a decision yesterday appointing Mrs. Anne U. Stillman and her chief counsel, John F. Brennan of Yonkers, a committee to control the property of James "Bud" Stillman and Alexander Stillman, sons of the defendant in the Stillman divorce and legitimacy cases. At the same time Surrogate Cohalan denied Mrs. Stillman's application to be appointed general guardian of the boys.

The decision was a victory for Mrs. Stillman, since she already had the custody of the children on an order issued last May by Supreme Court Justice Morschauser. Justice Morschauser, in fixing the amount of alimony which James A. Stillman should pay his wife pending trial of his suit against her, stipulated that the children could choose to live with their father or mother until Referee Daniel J. Gleason rendered a decision in the divorce suit. Both "Bud" and Alexander elected to stand by their mother and were joined two months ago by Miss Anne Stillman, now studying in Paris.

With the rendering of the Surrogate's judgment, it was learned that a demand would be made within a few days for an accounting of the property held by Mrs. Stillman for the two boys. This property, consisting of gifts, was said to amount to $150,000 for "Bud" and about $2,000 for Alexander.

Another move forecast for the defense was an application to Justice Morschauser for the appointment of a commissioner to take testimony in Canada. It was said that the application might be put before him in Poughkeepsie tomorrow or in White Plains on Monday.

In her original application to be placed in control of the property of the two boys, the mother did not name Mr. Brennan. When Cornelius J. Sullivan and Outerbridge Horsey, of counsel for Mr. Stillman, entered their briefs in opposing the application, they maintained that Mrs. Stillman was incompetent to care for the property. They made this contention on the ground that she had no business experience. Mr. Brennan, meeting this objection, nominated himself, and Surrogate Cohalan, in appointing the Yonkers lawyer, remarked that Mr. Brennan was "an attorney of broad experience and well fitted to advise and assist the mother in administering the property of the infants."

In calling attention to the position of Justice Morschauser in the divorce suit and its relation to the guardianship litigation, Surrogate Cohalan said:

"I am not inclined to make any order relating to the guardianship of the persons of the infants. I do not think the Surrogate's Court should make any order or decree that might be construed as conflicting in any way with the order of the Supreme Court. The fact that the Supreme Court first assumed jurisdiction of this issue, and a due regard for the orderly course of procedure, impel me to deny this part of the two applications."

Peace

When men and nations are decent enough in mind and spirit to live and work together without oppression of the weak by the strong—

When men and nations mind their own business and recognize the right of others to mind theirs—

When men and nations grant that the cooperation and mutual consideration possible under civilized conditions are preferable to the barbarism of war—

When men and nations prosper through constructive efforts to produce wealth instead of wasting all in vain attempts to steal the wealth of others—

We call it Peace.

The United States is at peace with other countries—now let's prove that we are at peace with ourselves.

It will pay you to be careful in selecting the Lubricants you use

There's a Socony Polarine Product for every motor and chassis lubricating requirement

MOTOR lubricants, particularly oils, depend upon something more than quality, although that is, of course, the first essential. Certainly, a heavy oil, however fine it is in quality, will not afford perfect lubrication in certain types of motors, nor will a light oil in other types.

Not only do different types of motors call for special grades of oil, but practically every individual motor presents a lubricating problem all its own, depending upon its condition, its age, the care it has had, and where and how it is used.

Three Standard Grades of Socony Polarine Oils

Socony Polarine Regular is an oil of medium body for use in cars where piston rings and working parts are properly fitted and in good condition, and for use during the winter months where an oil with a low cold test is desired.

Socony Polarine Heavy is an oil of heavy body and exceptional lubricating qualities. For use where loose-fitting parts require a heavier grade than the Regular, and during the summer months.

Socony Polarine Extra Heavy is a special grade manufactured for use in motorcycles, air-cooled motors, slide sleeve motors, slow speed motors, motors with large bore, and those excessively worn by long service.

Socony Polarine Lubricants and Greases

The following additional products are included in the complete line of Socony Polarine Lubricants: Socony Polarine Gear Oil for transmissions and differentials whose construction permits the use of oil; Socony Polarine Gear Compound, a semi-solid differential and transmission lubricant; Socony Polarine "BB" Transmission Lubricant, an ideal, semi-solid gear lubricant used where the construction does not allow the use of a heavy oil; Socony Polarine Cup Grease; Socony Polarine Fibre Grease; Socony Polarine Graphite Grease.

Standardize on Socony Polarine Oils and Lubricants. Your dealer will be glad to advise you on your particular needs.

Pershing's Unpublished Report of Villa Pursuit

It has been kept in the secret archives of the War Department for nearly three years and is now brought to light for the first time.

In the report General Pershing tells of the difficulties under which he conducted the expedition and the hostility of the Carranza Government.

The chase after Villa and the United States Government's attitude toward the undertaking have been more or less of a mystery. Partisan argument has raged over the whole question.

The gist of the Pershing report, with copious extracts, will appear in
